WOMAN'S SUIT FOR DAMAGES AGAINST THEORE KEELER.

She Had Told Him Several About His Wife and Retreated to Bed, as She Says, Not Telling Her Husband of Her Suit.

The suit of Nellie Clayton, a housemaid, for $2,000 damages from Theodore Keeler of 17 West 125th street, was on trial in the Supreme Court before Justice Gleicher and a jury yesterday.

Q—What did he do? A—He slipped me a note which read: "Nellie, meet me at the corner of 10th and 125th street, at 11 o'clock this morning."

Q—Did you go? A—No. The next morning Mrs. Keeler called to me, "Nellie, will you not wear that you were mistaken."

Q—How did Mr. Keeler act? A—Like a madman. He gnashed his teeth and waved his arms, and he frightened me so that I went to the parlor where they were.
