

Summer Silks at Less Than Cost.

The Silk Store to-morrow will make splendid offering of three lots of Summer Silks, fresh and bright and dainty. They are the wanted sorts, and prices are in many cases less than what it cost the manufacturer to make them. In every case the prices are remarkably low. They will tempt you if you come to look, and if you are wise you will come.

Fancy Taffeta Silks make up the first lot; six thousand yards of them; of fine, rich quality and in an immense variety of pretty patterns and soft and brilliant colorings. There are hemstitched stripes, corded stripes and fancy stripes among them and many actually cost from 70 to 90 cents a yard to produce. Of course somebody loses on them; but they are all to be on sale here to-morrow at.....50c a yard.

3,400 yards of 21 and 23 inch printed Foulard Silks make up the second lot. The patterns are new and very pretty; two, three and four tone colorings. The quality is specially fine, the luster specially bright. There is a crispness in the touch of these Foulards which belongs only to the purest silk. They are easily worth 50c. a yard; but to-morrow's price will be 35c.

Lastly come 1,200 yards of 23 inch genuine black Japanese Silk; a good, serviceable quality, with a superior luster and finish. The value here, too, is exceptional at.....30c a yard.
Main floor, New Building.

Black Grenadines---Half Off.

There is no dress more aristocratic than one of black Grenadine; none that is appropos on more occasions. And there is quite half to be saved on black Grenadines here to-morrow; the finest sorts of these filmy fabrics; the newest, daintiest and richest weaves. Every piece was imported this season to sell at $2.50 and $3.00 a yard. To-morrow you may choose from them for half of that.

1,200 yards of 44-inch silk and wool Grenadine is in the first lot. It is the canvas weave, not only popular, but exceptionally durable, and its beauty is added to by silk stripes of various widths and by cluster stripes. Regularly such Grenadines sell for $2.50. To-morrow's price will be.....$1.25.

In a second lot are 2,000 yards of 44 and 48-inch Grenadines; some all silk; some silk and wool. A part of these have hemstitched stripes and others have satin stripes edged with chenille. Still others are plain satin striped or with large plaids of ribbon bars. Regularly this sort of Grenadine is priced at $3.00. To-morrow's price will be.....$1.50
Main floor, rear.

Women's Tailored Suits and Skirts

There is special interest for you in the sale of women's tailored clothes which to-morrow begins. We know it, so we tell you. Two reasons why you will want to see these Suits—they are worthy—they are priced far below their value. Two hundred and fifty of them altogether, at two prices. All are new and wanted styles; all are beautifully put together and tailored. You need at least one Suit of this sort; perhaps you will think you need two when you see these and know the prices:

150 Suits in the first lot. They are made of serge and homespun in a variety of colors. The jackets have either the closed or open effects, while the Skirts are the latest cut. The lining is good percaline and the sizes 33 to 40. The pricing is unmatched anywhere at.....$9.50

100 Suits in the second lot. These are of broadcloths, serges, Venetians and homespun in a great variety of styles. The Suits are lined throughout with the best taffeta silk and are worth quite double their price here to-morrow.....$19.75

Two sorts of Skirts we want to speak of in the same connection. One is a striped Oxford Walking Skirt, made of very fine material and beautifully finished with a box plaid in the back. It is specially low priced at.....$7.95

The other is a Rainy Day Skirt, made of double-faced Oxford cloth, with box plaid back and a finish of several rows of stitching. It also is very low priced at.....$8.50
Second floor, front.

ABRAHAM AND STRAUS

BROOKLYN.

Carpets, Furniture, Upholsteries.

A Trio of Splendid Opportunities in Home Furnishings.

We will inaugurate to-morrow a sale of Home Furnishings which will far eclipse all previous sales of this character anywhere and which, we are sure, will attract widespread attention.

Unlike many widely heralded sales, consisting, as a rule, of shop-worn and obsolete designs, these Carpets and Curtains and this Furniture are all new and up-to-date in every respect. Our patrons know from experience that when we announce a great sale, expectations are more than realized, in other words, that we never promise more than we can accomplish. As a result of the business of this Store is great and ever growing.

The Carpets.

If there is a Carpet need to be supplied, for any room, to harmonize with any decoration, you can supply it here and in most cases at less than the present wholesale cost. SOMETHING ABOUT OTTAWA.

In Situation—The Rideau Canal—Col. Le Breton's Investment—The Dominion Falls.

The city of Ottawa stands principally on and around a high bluff at the junction of the Rideau and Ottawa rivers. From the Chaudiere Falls on the Ottawa the city gets the power for its sawmills and machinery in general. There has not been a tall chimney in the town, and the atmosphere of the city of 60,000 inhabitants has been as clear as that of most American towns of half the size.

The Chaudiere Falls also furnish the water for the city in such abundance that meters are not used. The city of Hull, which was wiped out by the fire, drew its water power also from the Chaudiere Falls. Hull by the way, was started and maintained by a denationalized American. E. B. Eddy, who began to make matches there a good many years ago, found it advisable to become a Canadian, and did so, but always was proud of having been an American.

The fire swept through the south end of Ottawa, having crossed the river on the Chaudiere and Victoria islands, two outcroppings of rocks covered with lumber piles. It did not have to do much jumping to cross the river, for in the little pools and reaches are always plenty of submerged logs ready to help along any fire that wants to cross and doesn't care to go by the bridge. Once on the Ottawa side there was a smaller supply of dried wood to keep it going, that it had found on the Hull side of the river. The lumber district of Ottawa is flat, lying between the bluffs on which the main body of the city stands and the Ottawa River. The houses are wood, the sawmills are wood, and everywhere are piles of lumber or piles of kiln-dried wood.

Ottawa is in some respects a beautiful city. In others it is anything but beautiful. Its Parliament buildings are fine and its other public buildings are of a high order. The city is as any similar buildings in this country. The architect of the buildings was designed by the architect of our own capital, and the buildings stand on Barrack Hill, a bluff 100 feet high overlooking the Chaudiere Falls and the Rideau river. The buildings are of a high order, and the library of Parliament, at the extreme west end of the Barrack Hill, is a beautiful building, containing about 200,000 volumes, among them the collection of Americana on this continent.

The collection of Americana on this continent is better than that at Washington, and the archives contain a fine and complete collection of the War of 1812 certain Americana of which the world is proud. After Philippon Wright had set up his town at Ottawa, he was succeeded by John A. Macdonald, who was in Ottawa in 1817. He would be brought up the St. Lawrence to Montreal, the Ottawa and then to Kingston, and then to Ottawa, without being exposed to the "war fire" of the Rideau Canal. The Rideau Canal was finished seven years after the war, and took some of the best of the American Government public works money that was spent at Washington, and the archives contain a fine and complete collection of the War of 1812 certain Americana of which the world is proud.

The Rideau Canal was finished seven years after the war, and took some of the best of the American Government public works money that was spent at Washington, and the archives contain a fine and complete collection of the War of 1812 certain Americana of which the world is proud.

There are three incidents about the Rideau Canal that are worth telling. The Canadian Government had called for bids for the canal, specifying the stone to be used, and the contractor put in a remarkably low bid and got the job. The contractor's officers had pointed out the stone being brought from a distance of a hundred miles or more, but the contractor pointed it within a quarter of a mile of the site of the work, and took some of the best of the American Government public works money that was spent at Washington, and the archives contain a fine and complete collection of the War of 1812 certain Americana of which the world is proud.

There is no doubt that the revenue which is now dependent on the canal, and which the Government would suffer if it were prohibited, for the so-called lumber who can't sell their lumber without losing himself, and whose name is so long, would get no deer if he were restricted to still hunting, and would not attempt to do so, but would stay at home and buy no deer.

In the province of Quebec there has been any amount of large game butchered during the present season by poachers, particularly moose. A well-known sportsman of River du Loup reports that in the region of the Saguenay, the moose is abundant, and that he has killed several. He has personally seen of another year, containing a bull and cow moose and two young ones, the carcasses of which had also been killed legally and carried off. Similar complaints are made of poaching in the Batiscan and St. Maurice territories.

PARIS EXPOSITION ENGLISH.

Wetted Samples of It That Are Now Finding Their Way Into America.

English interpreters must be scarce in Paris this Exposition year if one may judge from the quality of the advertising circulars which come to this city. The latest is printed in French and English in parallel columns so that the reader may see how the translator has done his work. It sets forth the advantages of an excursion company which modestly explains itself in this style of English:

"The..... Company has been formed in order to secure in the best possible conditions of luxury and comfort voyages from America to France and vice versa, and to stay in Paris during forty five days of a limited number of visitors wishing to see the marvels of all kinds which the Paris Exhibition of 1900 holds in store for them."

"To avoid to these visitors all weariness and securing packages, custom house formalities, lodging, board, carriages, guides, interpreters, such as the exceedingly practical idea which has prevailed in the formation of the..... Company and of its numerous services. The numerous visitors in Paris, evaluated by exact estimates at more than fifty millions will fill up the hotels, restaurants, theatres, still more than at the previous exhibitions, and it is only at extravagant prices, and with great difficulty that necessities will be obtained."

The company translates into English a detailed account of the experiments which it has made to test its service and offers its subscribers not only hotel, theatre and Exposition tickets, but accident policies and a chance in a lottery with a grand total of 1,000,000 francs in prizes.

The subscribers then have: "Eight days travelling, consecutive or by fractions in France, Switzerland, Belgium or England, all railways, hotel fees, etc. included. The time spent for these journeys will be deducted from the forty-five days of residence in Paris."

The company's motto is first come first served, and it proves so convincing, that it is going to lose money by its excursion, that only a man devoid of conscience would take advantage of its generous offer. Among its board of directors is a baron, who is described in French as proprietor, publisher and in English this baron is described as a landowner of culture of the vine.

THE FIRE ENGINE DRIVER.

Greatest and Last, Mr. Nobblison Thinks, of the Line of Heroic Deeds.

"No doubt the time will come," said Mr. Nobblison, "when fire apparatus of all sorts, as well as other vehicles, will be power-propelled, instead of drawn by horses. So we want to look now, while we may, if we want to see the slickest thing in driving that the world has afforded, before such driving goes quite out of fashion."

The chauffeur race man has all right, he could drive, sure, and would the man that put a four horse team, with a swaying conch coach behind it, along a narrow road on a shelf on the face of a mountain, but I do suppose the last of the line is the greatest, the man who sits strapped in his seat and holds the reins over a team of three horses driven abreast, hauling a goodly machine on the dead end of a crowded city street. The chauffeur man was good, and so was the man that drove a team of four horses, but the man that sits strapped in his seat to guide the engine if it comes, and yet keeps the fire in his hand all the time, why, say! he's the boss of an inn.

Let us look at him now, while we may, and cherish his memory.

WILD WEST AT THE ZOO.

Fan With the Buffalo—Curator Loring's Horse Throws Him and Breaks Its Own Neck.

A week ago one of the Texas buffalo cows presented the Zoological Society with a calf, the first animal born in the park. The mother was so young that the calf was not strong, and for the past week has been weak on its legs. The bulls of the herd were so proud of the addition to their number that their attentions were rather embarrassing than otherwise to the mother and calf, and it was decided to transfer the cow and her calf to the breeding range.

To do this it was necessary to drive the entire herd the full length of the range to reach the gate in the division fence. The bulls came out of the corral and the range to reach the gate in the division fence. The bulls came out of the corral and the range to reach the gate in the division fence.

The keepers and Curator Loring entered the range, the latter on horseback, to drive the herd. After about half the distance had been covered, the calf lay down, and since the mother had been perfectly quiet the keepers attempted to pick up the little animal and carry it the remainder of the distance. This the mother endured patiently for a time, but presently the calf began to bawl, which caused the cow to make threatening demonstrations. The men quickly deposited the calf upon the ground and scattered, whereupon the cow charged the horse.

Having once had a taste of the horns of a buffalo, the horse, which had been imported from Texas for the special purpose of herding the buffaloes and elk, shied suddenly, but Mr. Loring kept his seat. A little later he dismounted to pick up the hat of one of the men who had fled from the cow. When he attempted to remount, his horse began to buck and went careering over the range after the style of Buffalo Bill's professional plunging buckers. Curator Loring proved to be an excellent horseman, and retained his seat until his horse turned with him, which threw him to the ground. The horse calmed away, circled round the calf, and in some manner fell on its head half way down the slope, almost turning a somersault. The calf broke its neck and killed it instantly, and on dissection it was found that the cervical vertebrae were actually twisted off the base of the skull.

The calf lay well out in the range in a hollow a hundred yards from the buffalo house, with the mother near by. The bulls were taken from one of the Park wagons, and upon the axle a box was hastily built, 10 feet long, a feet wide and 4 feet high. Half a dozen laborers and Curator Loring got inside of this structure, caught hold of the sides, trundled it into the hammock that had been made ready, and in a few minutes the whole outfit was trundled into the main corral adjoining the buffalo house and the axle closed against the mother. The calf was then put in the barn, where it is being fed and tended. The mother seems to be occasionally and here for admission, which will shortly be granted her on promise of good behavior.
