

LEGAL SUNDAY PLEASES NONE

NEITHER SALOON MEN, DISTRICT ATTORNEY NOR POLICE HEAD.

Plain Saloonkeepers Want to Fight Excise Law Enforcement—Going to Propose It Today—Law's a Farce, Jerome Says—Partridge Would Like to See Disappearing Stopped—Certs Indignant Over the Arrest of Peddlers and Shopkeepers—One Magazine Vows It's Playing Tammany's Game.

If the radicals in the Central Liquor Dealers' Association have their way to-day some interesting resolutions may be passed at a meeting at Terrace Garden. While the precinct associations directed all members to close up on Sunday it isn't far from the truth to say that the members are thoroughly dissatisfied with the conditions which prevailed. There was little satisfaction for them in the halting of court of small merchants who sold goods on Sunday.

Today saloonkeepers who cannot make level arrangements promise to make a level contest to commit the association to return to the old system and to fight the police. A meeting of the Excise Committee of the association was held last night at Terrace Garden. Fritz Lindner presided. No information was given of a graduated scale of fines from the bench criticized the police for arresting dry goods dealers and other small merchants, and the saloonkeepers on whom the police put the responsibility for these arrests. No did other Magistrates in a minor degree.

District Attorney Jerome is with the saloonkeepers. In that the Sunday situation does not satisfy him. Magistrate Kane from the bench criticized the police for arresting dry goods dealers and other small merchants, and the saloonkeepers on whom the police put the responsibility for these arrests. No did other Magistrates in a minor degree.

Only the common saloons were interfered with, in that the Sunday situation does not satisfy him. Magistrate Kane from the bench criticized the police for arresting dry goods dealers and other small merchants, and the saloonkeepers on whom the police put the responsibility for these arrests. No did other Magistrates in a minor degree.

Police Commissioner Partridge made this statement: "Until this reform in the police extends to other forms of violation of law than those which it will not be effective. I would like it better if the men concerned were able to see more than one kind of violation of law."

The Commissioner's attention was called to the arrest of bakers and butchers. The officer who arrested a baker or a butcher for a technical violation of the Sunday law is not in my opinion so good an officer as he would be if he arrested the keepers of opium dens, houses of prostitution, disorderly houses and that sort of thing. The men should bear in mind that they are not to be enforced in the same way as we have worked together in every way," he remarked. "Whether the present Excise law enforcement is to be continued, Mr. Law's pledges I don't know. I only know that I am under no pledges except to enforce all laws."

Some of the policemen who were at the head of the original revolt in the West Thirty-seventh street station said yesterday that next Sunday was going to be a day that they planned to send the men in that precinct who are of regular duty into other precincts where the men haven't fallen into line, and then to visit every precinct into shape. In a few days they predict, other laws than the Excise will be enforced by the bluecoats themselves. They said they refer especially to poolrooms, gambling houses and disorderly houses.

The Commissioner has fined Plain-Clothesmen Best of the East Thirty-fifth street station twenty days' pay. Reid and Police-Master Burke who has been dismissed since were tried for attending a law school at Water street, served upon District Attorney Jerome yesterday and had a written complaint before him. According to his complaint to Police Commissioner Partridge.

HE MADE SURE OF DEATH.

Took Poison, Turned the Gas on and Set His Room Afire—Had Failed in Business.

John Pell, 44 years old, who lived in the rear of a tea store at 2660 Third avenue, was found unconscious in bed yesterday morning with the gas in the room turned on and the carpet afire. One of the employees in the tea store saw smoke coming from the room, broke in the door, turned off the gas and sent in a fire call.

When the engine arrived the tenants in the five-story tenement were greatly excited. Three women fainted and the police sent ambulances for the Fordham, Harlem and Lehanon hospitals. The firemen put out the blaze before it had reached the bed on which Pell was lying. The police think that Pell attempted suicide first by turning on the gas, then by setting fire to the carpet. Two years ago he kept a restaurant in upper Third avenue and failed. After that he didn't do much work. Three days ago he received a business notice from the owner of his room.

Pell died four hours after being taken to the Lehanon Hospital. An autopsy showed that he had died of some poison, supposedly carbolic acid. A broken bottle was found in the airshaft next to his room. It is believed that he had drunk some of the poison.

Stable Boy Suleite Dresses Up First and Reveals His "Real Name." "My real name is Frederick Aloysius Passeeck." This is what "Fred Cuff," a stable boy for Dr. Thomas Ogle, a veterinary of 245 West Sixty-ninth street, wrote just before he killed himself in his best clothes, yesterday, by swallowing a pint of carbolic acid. Dr. Ogle says the boy had always called himself Fred Cuff. Dr. Ogle picked him up three years ago when Fred was only 18 years old. He went off on periodical sprees, the doctor said.

"I could never find out anything definite about his parents," said Dr. Ogle yesterday. "Once he told me his parents were dead and at another time he said he had run away from them. I don't know which is right." The boy put all his best clothes on yesterday, bought a new collar and told his friends he was going on a trip. Then he went out and bought cents worth of acid and swallowed it. He was found dead in Dr. Ogle's stable.

The City Directory says that Jane Passeeck, widow of Frederick, lives at 343 East Sixty-fifth street. The house at that number is a tenement. Nobody could be reached there last night who might know anything about the case. Passeeck, whose name no longer appears on the door plates.

Senator Berry of Arkansas, who is always serious, came to Senator Bacon's assistance and argued the case for the Democrats. He is a little, unassuming man, but he is intellectually blind. Mr. Bacon continued to protest and to become more and more determined.

Senator Jones of Arkansas also took a hand and the trio were more or less earnestly rebuffed by Senator Tillman of South Carolina. As they continued to sputter and talk and the hands of the clock went around the usually imperceptible hands of the political clock, the members of the old Varuna Boat Club met at another and was perfectly willing to agree to all that was said, so long as he was not asked to do anything more.

COMEDY ON THE SENATE STAGE

ALDRICH THE HERO AND BACON THE HEAVY VILLAIN.

The Rhode Island Senator Wanted Conference Report on War Tax Repeat Bill Promptly Disposed Of, So That He Could Take the 4 o'clock Train, but Bacon Interposed—Scene Follows.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, Chairman of the Finance Committee, was the hero and Senator Bacon of Georgia the heavy villain of an interesting comedy enacted on the stage of the United States Senate Chamber for two hours this afternoon. Mr. Aldrich submitted the report of the committee on the House bill, abolishing the internal revenue war taxes, and in doing so said that he was very anxious to have it disposed of promptly, as he was obliged to leave the city on the 4 o'clock train. The report said that the Senate conferees had yielded to the House conferees on the question of retaining the tax on lottery tickets. The Senate conferees being in favor of the retention, but giving way under pressure of the demand of the House conferees for the abolition of all the taxes, as provided for in the bill as it passed the House.

Every thing was going along nicely, when Mr. Bacon took it into his head to put a spoke in the wheel. He complained that there had been no time for Senators to examine the report, and, not being satisfied with the more or less lucid explanations of Senators Allison, Aldrich, Spooner and other members of the Finance Committee, he insisted that the whole question should go over for a day, so that he could prepare his mind to give an intelligent opinion on the subject.

With his most fetching smile and engaging manner, Mr. Aldrich attempted to convince Mr. Bacon that he would be no more capable of forming an intelligent opinion to-morrow than he was to-day; but for some unaccountable reason the Georgia Senator did not see the point of this well-meant suggestion and continued to demand that the question go over.

Mr. Allison then tried his powers of elucination, but in spite of the Senatorial tradition that if a man can't see a point after the Iowa Senator makes it, then he must be intellectually blind, Mr. Bacon continued to protest and to become more and more determined.

WAR VETERAN SPRINTERS.

Graybeard Warriors Participate in Fourteenth Regiment Games.

At the Fourteenth Regiment games held last night in the armory in Brooklyn, there were two events of the common sort, and they were both so well conceived that in spite of their being some fast times and close finishes made in the other contests, there were no other contests that were more thoroughly than those novelties. The first of the novelties was a 75-yard dash, arranged for the Civil War veterans of the Fourteenth Regiment. Four grizzled warriors, known as the "Fighting Fourteenth," took part in the race. The men in running shoes and all except one wore walking trousers and were minus coats and vests and in some instances had on only undershirts above their trousers.

The other novelty was a mixed affair in which the veterans of the "Fighting Fourteenth" the additional sobriquet of the "Red-legged Devils," had to contend with the younger members of the old Varuna Boat Club team that defeated every other team for miles around. Summary:
