

HOPE DIMMED IN 42D STREET.

THEY FILLED UP THE STREET AND THEN THEY DUG IT UP AGAIN.

Had Forgotten to Turn on the Water—Digging It Up, They Broke the Main and the Electric Light Conduit, and Now There's Neither Water Nor Light.

Joseph P. McHugh of Forty-second street—you know McHugh—was deep in gloom again last night. Earlier in the afternoon Mr. McHugh thought he saw a ray of hope, or rather light, but it dwindled. At 6:44 o'clock last night Mr. McHugh described as follows the disintegration of his environment in the block between Fifth and Sixth avenues:

"Nobody seems to know just what they are doing out in front of here. I'm sure the men doing the work don't know what they are aiming at. This afternoon a gang of half a hundred Italians began to cover up the street, and for the first time we folks in the stores could see the cars go past. But no sooner had they got the dirt mounds shoveled into the hole than it was discovered that the water had not been turned on. Then it was necessary to dig up the dirt and embank the sidewalks once more. Doing this an Italian drove his pick through a big water main, and now we haven't any water at all.

"Another laborer got his pick afloat of the electric light wire conduit, and then the lights in the stores went out. The dirt mounds piled on the sidewalk to a height of eight and one-half feet, and we in the stores are again plunged into darkness. Our customers in their carriages get as far as the corner of Fifth avenue and then they say: 'John, drive on.'

"What is lacking, I think, is some one to tell the men what to do. The laborers appear to be willing to work, but they don't know just what to begin. Some of the merchants thought that the person supposed to be in charge of the work and found him busy downtown. When asked concerning the prospects of our street ever being finished, he said: 'What, Forty-second street? I haven't been there in a month.' The shopkeepers in the block between Fifth and Sixth avenues were told that all would be lovely by Monday. From the looks of things now I fear it will more likely be two weeks from Monday before the light of day will show in our windows and our customers will feel safe in visiting our stores.

"When the workmen earlier in the day began to remove the huge piles of dirt from the sidewalks the shopkeepers danced with glee in front of their places of business. 'Light at last!' was the cry heard on all sides, or rather on the north side. The joy, however, was but short lived, for a scrub woman who discovered a dirty floor which, owing to lack of light, had passed her eyes, and she had a wooden partition, affording a certain degree of privacy. The humble New Yorker said down.

"Soon after the train started he perceived that there was a man in the main body of the car. 'What in blazes is everybody looking in here for?' he asked a passing tradesman. 'Dunno,' said the tradesman, 'unless, maybe, they think you're crazy.' 'Crazy? This here compartment, you see, is the place the bugs travel in when we take 'em down to the Kings Park Asylum. Carry out this way on purpose. See the padding!'

RAINED GOOD COIN.

Newsboys in a Riot Until Cops Gathered in the Philadelphia Street.

Leo Hyman of 144 West 113th street is a salesman. He says he is employed at 20 East Twentieth street. In his sober senses Hyman is a genial chap. When he starts out to whoop things up, he always imagines he is a millionaire. Yesterday was his day. Early in the afternoon he took his stand on the Twenty-third street side of the Fifth Avenue Hotel and yelled. In a few moments he had a crowd of newsboys around him. The boys recognized Hyman as a good thing, and they stuck by him. Their persistence was rewarded when he began to throw his loose coin at them. Then they scrambled for his money, much to his delight. It didn't take long for the word to pass along Twenty-third street that Hyman was busy. In a short time a horde of street peddlers picked him out for his money. He continued to throw money away, and men and boys fought for it. One of the peddlers was selling live rabbits. 'Here's your white rabbits, boss; they bring good luck.'

"PRINCE OF PILSEN" IN LONDON.

It Has Settled Down for a Long Run, G. F. Marion Says—Other Stage News.

George F. Marion, stage director for Henry W. Savage, arrived yesterday from England on board the Deutschland and told of the success there of "The Prince of Pilsen," which, he said, had settled down apparently for a long run. Every number in the score, without exception, was recalled on the second night," said Mr. Marion. Among those who sail on the Luconia to-morrow are Richard G. Hollman, president of the Eden Musée Company, who is making his annual trip to Europe in search of novelties for the cinematograph, the winter garden manager of the Eden Musée, to bring Masteloni & Cook of Egyptian Hall back with him.

SCHUMANN-HEINKS LONG TOUR.

From Winnipeg to Texas and to the Pacific—New Nearly Complete.

Mme. Schumann-Heink arrived in this city yesterday after the longest concert tour she has ever undertaken in this country. She left New York on March 10 and travelled as far as the Pacific Coast and from Winnipeg to Dallas, Tex. In that time she has sung fifty different cities, giving sixty-two concerts, in eleven weeks. Mme. Schumann-Heink sang in Atlanta, Ga., on Monday and Tuesday evenings. She continues her tour in Chicago on Wednesday, and will sail for Europe on June 16 to attend the wedding of her daughter on July 4 at Katschenbroda, near Dresden. Her tour, she says, has brought her nearly $50,000.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

A man, past middle age, and encountered with an umbrella and a good sized bundle, stood waiting for a trolley in the Bronx at a point where the cars seldom stop. The Wise Man on the curb, pitying his error, called.

"Hey, you can't get a car there; they won't stop for you." The stranger's only reply was to unbutton his coat, hook the handle of his umbrella in the left armhole of his waistcoat, and button the coat again, with the point of the umbrella sticking out over his left hip.

"Presently the car came along at good speed, the motorman making no attempt to stop it. The stranger shifted his bundle to his left hand, grasped the car with his right hand, and blew a blast of air as clean as a whistle. Then he unbuttoned his coat, took out the umbrella and sat down as if it were an ordinary performance for him.

"One on me," said the Wise Man on the curb. "See that pan-handled looking gent? remarked the expressman, in one of his leisure moments. 'Well, d'you know what that fellow does to earn his daily bread? He sells wood. It's quite a graft that he's an expert in, and there's lots of 'em in it because the fellow has a trick up his sleeve.

"Their main line is packing boxes, which they get as often as they can from dry-goods porters and expressmen. If they can't get whole boxes, they will do up carry bags like the old rag pickers, only bigger bags, and when one of 'em strikes it rich as to packing boxes, he takes out a big stick and smashes up the stuff.

"What do they do with the wood they break up? Sell it in the tenements at 10 cents a bag. Watch out for 'em some time up in East street, where the packing box colony has its headquarters." He works in a Brooklyn grocery store and under a multitude of difficulties, having been just five days in the western hemisphere.

"In that respect, of course," said the man who saw him, "he differs not at all from countless other German boys, some of whom land in the morning and, unable to speak a syllable of English, take out orders in the streets of a strange land before nightfall. But about this fellow, as in his seat and elation so pronounced that neither the mistakes he made nor the buffeting he received could impair his spirits in the least. Yesterday I got an inkling of the reason.

"The boy was behind the rear counter, giving assistance to a customer. He noticed that a table was in his hand and that he was regarding it with much more interest than one usually displays in the presence of a table. The next thing he did was to kiss it kindly, almost passionately—another unusual display.

"Now on this table of this particular brand there appears a somewhat vivid fable simile of the stars and stripes. When I remembered that, I realized that what the boy had been kissing was the flag of our country. 'A man doesn't have to be born here to be an American, I thought. And some how or other, the more I thought of it, the more I was convinced that the boy was set to throwing the dirt back on the sidewalk again, and the gloom recended.

ELM STREET SOON TO REAPPEAR.

Work on the clearing up of Elm street is to be begun at once. That, at least, is the decision of the Public Works department, made yesterday by Borough President Ahearn and Acting Chief Engineer Rice of the Rapid Transit Commission. Michael J. Deane, the contractor who has the contract for the clearing up of Elm street section of the subway, promised that he would remove at once the hundreds of tons of materials he has stored on the surface of the street in the neighborhood of Worth street. Contracts for the regrading and repaving of the greater part of the street have been let, and the work will be begun immediately. Mr. Ahearn stated that the work would have been begun already but for the fact that the Consolidated Gas Company had not put back its pipes. Peremptory orders, he said, have been given to the company to lose no further time in relaying its mains.

NEWSBOYS IN A RIOT UNTIL COPS GATHERED IN THE PHILADELPHIA STREET.

Leo Hyman of 144 West 113th street is a salesman. He says he is employed at 20 East Twentieth street. In his sober senses Hyman is a genial chap. When he starts out to whoop things up, he always imagines he is a millionaire. Yesterday was his day. Early in the afternoon he took his stand on the Twenty-third street side of the Fifth Avenue Hotel and yelled. In a few moments he had a crowd of newsboys around him. The boys recognized Hyman as a good thing, and they stuck by him. Their persistence was rewarded when he began to throw his loose coin at them. Then they scrambled for his money, much to his delight. It didn't take long for the word to pass along Twenty-third street that Hyman was busy. In a short time a horde of street peddlers picked him out for his money. He continued to throw money away, and men and boys fought for it. One of the peddlers was selling live rabbits. 'Here's your white rabbits, boss; they bring good luck.'

"PRINCE OF PILSEN" IN LONDON.

It Has Settled Down for a Long Run, G. F. Marion Says—Other Stage News.

George F. Marion, stage director for Henry W. Savage, arrived yesterday from England on board the Deutschland and told of the success there of "The Prince of Pilsen," which, he said, had settled down apparently for a long run. Every number in the score, without exception, was recalled on the second night," said Mr. Marion. Among those who sail on the Luconia to-morrow are Richard G. Hollman, president of the Eden Musée Company, who is making his annual trip to Europe in search of novelties for the cinematograph, the winter garden manager of the Eden Musée, to bring Masteloni & Cook of Egyptian Hall back with him.

SCHUMANN-HEINKS LONG TOUR.

From Winnipeg to Texas and to the Pacific—New Nearly Complete.

Mme. Schumann-Heink arrived in this city yesterday after the longest concert tour she has ever undertaken in this country. She left New York on March 10 and travelled as far as the Pacific Coast and from Winnipeg to Dallas, Tex. In that time she has sung fifty different cities, giving sixty-two concerts, in eleven weeks. Mme. Schumann-Heink sang in Atlanta, Ga., on Monday and Tuesday evenings. She continues her tour in Chicago on Wednesday, and will sail for Europe on June 16 to attend the wedding of her daughter on July 4 at Katschenbroda, near Dresden. Her tour, she says, has brought her nearly $50,000.

SAW TONBS KALEIDOSCOPE.

BERLIN NEWSPAPER MAN DOES SOME LEGAL SLUMMING.

Hugo von Kupffer of the "Lokal-Anzeiger" Sees Rigger of the "Lokal-Anzeiger" and a Humble Romance and Hears About a Jag—All Much the Same as in Germany.

Hugo von Kupffer, editor of the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, a German newspaper conducted on the American plan, is in the city on his return homeward after a visit to the St. Louis exposition. He spent part of yesterday afternoon in the Tombs police court studying American methods of administering justice. He seemed greatly interested in the petty procession of petty offenders that filed across the bridge before Magistrate Breen's desk.

First there were seven climbers who had been arrested at the Manhattan entrance of the Brooklyn Bridge for trying to get seats in rickshaws and Coney Island trains by jumping through the car windows. One was a man from Boston, who explained that he had merely followed what he supposed to be the New York method of getting aboard cars, and another was a Russian, who said that the car windows looked like doors to him. These two were discharged by Magistrate Breen. Having made that start, the Magistrate concluded to let the other five off, too. He then fined a man $1 who had called an Irish cop a swine.

Close on the heels of the window climber came Frederick E. Braun, 21 years old, a recent graduate of the Erasmus Hall School, a clerk in the office of a German newspaper, who was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl, of 204 East Fifth street. Annie said that she met the young man on a street car while he was pushing a baby carriage along Riverside drive. After that they met often, and he promised to marry her. Later he changed his mind. Braun, who is a German, was charged with having betrayed the trust of Annie Schuster, a nurse girl