ESSEX MARKET COURT SEES ITS VITALS PUNCTURED DAILY.

Pathless Suppression of the Cross-Examination of a Guy With a Bum Leg.

Incident Affecting Folsom Barrett Not Entered on Station Blotter.

A thief who had tried to hold up a man in Seventh avenue was chased through 125th street at 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning.

The thief was caught by two policemen. As they started west with their prisoner Policeman Barrett of the West 125th street station came along to see what the excitement was about.

L. B. Kerr of 144 West 111th street and George Graydon of St. Union square, who were in the crowd that had followed the fugitive, told reporters yesterday that Barrett used his club on several persons.

Kerr said that he was in the crowd when Barrett ran out in the street to strike a man, and that two women were hit over the back.

There is no record at the West 125th street station of any prisoner escaping. Barrett, in a crowd of fugitives, said that he was in the crowd that followed the fugitive, and when he told them to move on they talked back to him.

One man said he didn't care a rap for any cop, and when they threatened to take him to the station corner, and he told them to move on they talked back to him.

When arrested at the Adams street station the prisoner had $100, four gold watches, five rings and two pawntickets.

Pistol Shot; Fainting Woman. Mrs. McLaughlin says the Weapon Went Off by Accident.

The report of a pistol shot startled the occupants of a house at the corner of Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, early yesterday morning, and one of them ran out and called a policeman.

He went to the apartments of Mrs. Minnie McLaughlin and found her in a fainting condition surrounded by her servants. Her chest was blackened by powder. A revolver was lying on a chair.

Mrs. McLaughlin said she kept the weapon, having a dread of burglars, and was examining it to see that it was all right before retiring. It went off accidentally, and the powder flash burned her chest.

When an ambulance surgeon was called in from the Brooklyn Hospital and he dressed the injury, which was slight. The bullet, which did not hit her, could not be found. Mrs. McLaughlin is the wife of a wealthy resident of Brooklyn.

She is separated from her husband, and she tried to have her husband arrested, saying that he threatened to shoot her.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

Tom Taggart, the Democratic national chairman, usually wears a big diamond stud that was presented to him by a bunch of Chicago sports who liked the way Smiling Tom treated them at his French Lick resort.

The other day at the Waldorf Taggart told a little story about the diamond.

"The first day I wore the stone," said Taggart, "my colored servant Tom seemed unaccountably queer to me. Every time he was sent to do he did wrong. Finally I gave him a calling down. Tom bowed and scraped and said:

"Must be money in dog medicine," said a druggist. Here's a little box of sulphur tablets for you. Cost you 50 cents. Yet you can get enough sulphur tablets for yourself to last a week for 15 cents.

Digestive pills for little Fido are half a dollar, but if you ask over two bits for a vial of poppy pellets for little Mary the doctor will be thin as a rail. Folks don't kick when they buy dog dope. We've over seven brands of dog soap. Mostly 20 cents a bar. We have an English dog that's called a retriever. Suppose the cracker people will be putting puppy cakes in an airtight box next and trying it with pale blue ribbons. They could get a good price if they did."

There's a subtle humorist who has a clothing store well up on Third avenue. In the middle of the sweltering weather of August, and when every person in his district was considering how much further self-respect and the law would permit him to go in the clothes question, he contributed to the cause of placards all over the front of his store this much to the solution of the question: "All clothing one-third off."

A customer of one of the large lunch rooms on Park row near the Post Office is an armless man about 80 years old. Almost every evening he comes there to buy sandwiches and pie. At his side he carries a little satchel hung by a strap over his shoulder.

The waiter behind the counter makes up his order and puts the food in the satchel. Then making out check for the amount of the purchase, he places it in the armless man's mouth. The customer walks over to the cash to pay for the food. The waiter from his mouth on the counter, whereupon the cashier reaches into the man's coat pocket and fishes out enough money to pay the bill.

One of the busiest places in town just now is the baggage room of the Grand Central Station. So many pieces of baggage have arrived in the last few days that the shed on the east side of the station is not allowed to hold all the trunks and the baggage men are worked almost to death trying to keep things in shape.

To make room for some of the baggage the sewing machines that are stored in the elevated railroad station have been closed and the space is now occupied with piles of trunks and bicycles.

No street in New York has changed more radically in its character within a few years than has Broadway in certain sections. At the noon hour from Fourteenth to Canal streets Broadway is crowded with people who are seeking for the latest in the line of fashions of the shops or factories which now flourish along New York's main thoroughfare.

Many of the men who are seen at this hour are in their shirt sleeves and not a few of them are smoking pipes. Nine-tenths of the faces are of foreign type.

A young man who was journeying southward on a Broadway open car the other day has reason to believe in luck. He boarded the car at Twenty-third street and found himself sitting next to a woman who he had never seen before.

She said that she had just parted with her carfare was his last. "But I am on my way to the Post Office," said he, "where I hope to get a letter with some money in it."

At that moment a gust of wind swept through the car, lifted the young fellow's hat and blew it into the air. He reached for the hat in the rear of the car. The conductor rang to stop the car, the young fellow got off and chased his hat, which was blowing in the air, until he was about to recover it a northbound car passed over it, leaving it in a shocking condition. Meantime his hat, the conductor said, had been started down town and the bewildered young fellow in the middle of the street. As he had to walk to the Post Office he had to hurry and it is hoped the ill luck did not pursue him in the matter of the letter with money in it.

EMMA GOLDMAN'S STRONG TALK. Big Fete of Cops on Hand and Secret Service Men Take Notes.

John Most and Emma Goldman were the star speakers last night at an Anarchist meeting in New Irving Hall in Broome street, held under the auspices of the Russian Revolutionary Society. Among the other speakers were John Kelly of London, who was a cousin of John W. Kelly, the famous "Rolling Mill Man."

Kelly talked in English that sounded like the dialect of Joe Welch. The hall was crowded to the doors and the circulation of the hall was so bad that it was impossible to admit them. In anticipation of trouble the hall was surrounded by a large force of police present deemed it unsafe to admit them. The police were drawn from different precincts and were in charge of Capt. Floyd of the Eldridge street station.

The police learned early yesterday that the real object of the meeting was to boom an anarchistic picnic to be held on Sept. 19 at Liberty Park, Brooklyn. This is the Day of Atonement, the strictest Hebrew holiday in the year, when the faithful abstain from eating and drinking for twenty-four hours. The police thought that if this were circulated among the crowds of orthodox Hebrews, who were celebrating the Jewish New Year yesterday, trouble might ensue.

Handbills, printed in Hebrew, advertising the picnic were distributed in the hall, but the police prevented their circulation. The police were in entire sympathy with the speakers. Emma Goldman ranted, and Secret Service men took notes. She lauded the assassination of De Plehve, and said there ought to be similar measures taken against officials in this country.

ITALIAN WIDOW MURDERED. Jealous Admirer Cuts Her Throat and Then Takes His Own Life.

BOSTON, Sept. 11.—John Guassano, an Italian, aged 30, living at 180 Endicott street, late this afternoon murdered Rena Popiano, a widow, aged 25, at her home, a Stillman place, by cutting her throat with a razor from ear to ear. Death was instantaneous.

Mrs. Popiano left the house, and upon reaching the street cut his own throat. He was removed to the Relief Hospital, where he died shortly after. Joseph Guassano, brother of the murderer, was arrested on July 29 he was arrested charged with assault and battery upon the same woman, and paid a $15 fine.

OBITUARY. Charles A. Hawley, one of the oldest residents of Stamford, Conn., died yesterday, aged 84 years. He was the son of the late Lieut.-Gov. Hawley and was born in Stamford, Conn. He was a member of the old Two Stars National Bank, president of the same for many years. He was also one of the vestrymen of St. John's church, Stamford.

Judge Woodford J. McDowell, a retired lawyer, died at his home in Washington Saturday night at the age of 84 years. He was born in Ohio, removed to New York in 1840, and practiced law until 1870, when he retired. He was a member of the bar of New York and was a political and personal friend of President Lincoln.

Gen. George D. Moore, a pioneer steamboat master on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, died at his home in Washington Saturday night at the age of 84.

TRIED TO ROB SLEUTH'S FLAT.

DETECTIVE GRAY'S CHANCE RETURN YIELDS FINE QUARRY.

Two Sneak Thieves, One Jewelry-Laden and the Other With a Pocketful of Pawntickets, Captured in Harlem—Robberies Continue in the District.

Detectives John O'Brien and John Gray of the West 152d street station arrested Benjamin Hall, 24 years old, of 1784 Clay avenue, The Bronx, and Charles Mex, who gave an address not his own, on Saturday night while the two men were trying to get into Gray's apartments on the second floor of the flat house at 183d street and St. Nicholas avenue.

Detective Gray went to his home Saturday night for some papers, accompanied by O'Brien. Gray's family are in the country. When the detectives got to the landing on the floor where Gray lives they saw Hall and Mex in the passageway trying to get in the parlor door with a case knife.

The detectives watched them for five minutes, and when they were satisfied the men were thieves, they ran into the hallway and told them to throw up their hands. They put up a hard fight, but were subdued and taken to the station. They were held yesterday in the Harlem court for examination.

A large number of pawntickets and $47 in cash were found in Hall's pockets. The pawntickets called for silk dresses, a suit case, and a dozen different kinds of wearing apparel. There were also 200 tickets announcing a dance to be given by the Benjamin Hall Association at the Harlem Arcade in East 124th street, on Oct. 15. Hall said the pawntickets belonged to a friend, and that he was keeping them for him.

Detective O'Brien telephoned to the Harlem Arcade and learned that the place was engaged that night, when the Pinky Association would have a dance. He also learned that Hall had sold nearly a hundred tickets around Harlem for 25 cents each. The manager of the dance hall said that he had been kept busy answering the telephone calls in his pocket. He had a shoe pin with nine large diamonds, one gold stickpin, a scarfpin with large opal in the center set with diamonds, one gold watch and chain with a locket charm set with diamonds, and a lot of smaller articles of jewelry. Mex said the diamonds belonged to his uncle, John O'Brien, of 419 East 116th street, who had sent him down town after them on Saturday morning.

The police made inquiries at the address and found that no John O'Brien lived there.

When the men are brought up in court to-day the detectives expect to have a number of complaints against them from persons who have been robbed on Washington Heights.

Detective O'Brien will have several complaints to appear against John Adams, who was arrested on the roof of a flat house at 155th street and Amsterdam avenue on Friday. Adams had a bunch of pawntickets in his pocket, and these form a separate section of the present case. This section will consist of teamsters, building material handlers and others indirectly connected with the building trade.

The plan is carried into effect an agitation will be started in favor of the municipality being its own contractor in the erection of the new building. The building trades section includes a number of unions not directly connected with building, and it is proposed that these form a separate section of the present case. This section will consist of teamsters, building material handlers and others indirectly connected with the building trade.

Three Suspects of Gasbouse District Locked Up for Robbery.

George Alden of 419 First avenue went to the East Twenty-second street station yesterday afternoon and reported that he was passing 427 East Eighteenth street three men jumped out of a hallway and knocked him down, dragged him into the hallway and robbed him of about $10.

From a description Alden gave of his assailants, Detective Sergeants Sullivan and Walter decided that the job was done by three men who had taken to the "gasbouse" district. The three men were found in the back room of a saloon at Eighteenth street and Avenue A.

The men upon to surrender, the trio grabbed chairs and attacked the detectives, who drew their revolvers and fired half a dozen shots into the ceiling. They were taken to the station house in a patrol wagon, where they gave their names as Joseph Moore, held under the name of Joseph Moore, of 419 East Twenty-second street and Edward Riley, alias Robert Moore, of 347 East Fifteenth street.

ITALIAN PRISONER ABLAZE. Carro, Who Shot Four, Made No Effort to Put Out the Flames.

Antonio Carro, the Italian who shot four persons in front of 342 East 110th street a week ago yesterday, came very near being burned to death Saturday evening at the Harlem Hotel. The police don't know whether he tried to kill himself or whether his clothes got afire accidentally.

Carro was let out in the corridor with the other prisoners on Saturday afternoon to have a smoke. He was returned to his cell at 1 o'clock. A keeper saw smoke coming out of Carro's cell. When he opened the door the Italian's clothes were blazing. He tried to get out, but he was held back by the police. He was taken to the prison and treated him. His hair was burned off, his eyebrows were singed and the upper part of his body was a mass of burns. He will be removed to the Tombs to-day if he is able to make the trip.

Tried to Murder His Mother. Fired Twice at Her and Then Turned Gun on Himself.

William La Dier, 18 years of age, of New Springville, in the centre of Richmond borough, shot twice at his mother late last night and then shot himself. The mother was not hurt, but the young man will probably die.

The youth remained away from home all of yesterday. When he returned home last night his mother scolded him. He became angry and, running to his room, secured a shotgun. He then went to his mother's room where his mother had taken refuge. He then turned the gun on himself and the charge carried away a portion of his forehead. He was taken to the hospital and is now recovering.

RUNABOUT SMASHED; MAN HURT. His Woman Companion Spilled in a Puddle—Horse Disappears.

A man and woman in a light runabout were riding on the West drive in Central Park yesterday afternoon when their horse took fright at an automobile near Eighty-ninth street and bolted. The man lost control of the horse, and the vehicle was smashed against a lamp-post. The horse kicked itself free and disappeared.

The man was badly out about the face, and the woman was thrown into a puddle. They picked themselves up, hailed a cab and abandoned the wrecked carriage. Later a liveried coachman came to the Arsenal police station and told the sergeant that the man belonged to D. J. Cole, of 68 West Fifty-sixth street, and that he was driving at the time of the accident.
