

MINOR LEAGUES IN TURMOIL.

PROPOSITION BY AMERICANS AND NATIONALS REJECTED.

Small Fry Made to Suffer Because of the Greed of a Few Who Have Hungled Themselves to the World's Series Fixed—American League Schedule Adopted.

It will probably be a long time before the minor leagues will consent to take stock in the promise of the National League again. Acting in perfect harmony, the National League and the American League, through President Dan Johnson of the latter organization, made what was deemed to be an exceedingly fair proposition to the other existing minor leagues, but after due deliberation it was declined, with the prospect of disruption in the ranks of the National Association.

The minor leagues' case was bungled and handled in such a manner that no other result could have been attained. Several weeks ago the crony National League men informed the minor league clubs that they were in their possession of alleged justice, but with John T. Brush, who professed to be their friend, away in Hot Springs, the other National League players jumped at a chance to throw their support to the league.

For several days Thursday night Johnson labored to a long-winded argument from a minor league who recently pushed himself to the front and will consequently have to shoulder the blame for the failure. Johnson arranged that the minor league organization was on the verge of disruption. It developed that the men who were instrumental in making the demand for a change in the drafting of players for the National League were violently opposed to a proposition from Judge W. H. Kavanaugh of Little Rock, the president of the Southern League, to raise that organization into Class A.

It also developed that George Johnson, who represented the American Association, did not have the united support of his league, as Edward Barrow was on the ground, representing the Indianapolis, Columbus and Minneapolis clubs, which he said, were not in sympathy with the present National League agreement. Furthermore, it was shown in the course of time that there is a fierce factional fight under way in the Eastern League, the men who made and accepted the proposition from ruin a half dozen times, from the presidency of the league and also from the presidency of the National Association.

It was also shown that the Baltimore and St. Louis clubs, both Eastern League men, because the latter claimed that Hanlon did not "cover up" two Buffalo players, Clymer and Courtney, were eventually excluded from the National League clubs, while Hanlon succeeded in "covering up" the whole Baltimore team by placing them in the drafting list of the Brooklyn club. In other words, there were ready indications that one or another piece rather than stand together in a fight for so-called rights.

When Johnson tired of listening to the weary tale of woe he turned about to the bombshell in the shape of a statement that he meant it to be a fact that Stallings and Hanlon, at the recent Eastern League meeting, had urged warlike measures and had shown a disposition to injure the American League in various ways. Johnson said that you can withdraw from the National League agreement, said Johnson, "and we will respect your contracts, but not the reserve rule. But let me say that if you wish that Hanlon take the initiative, as I understand he wants to do, I will indicate that he will be without a club or a city inside of a year."
