

THE IDYL OF WATLING LIGHT.

JONES AROUSES THE WEST INDIES WITH THE HELP OF MRS. JONES.

Nobody in New York Will Know What the Signal "Help, I Am Attacked!" Set by the Light-keeper, Really Meant Until He Reads This Veracious Item.

Watlings Island lies among the outposts of the Bahamas. Probably it won't be recognized under that name, but it is the island which used to be the landing place of Christopher Columbus before our historians began to get scientific and to revise the geographies. Now it is British territory, and is inhabited by many negroes, troublesome at times; a few officials, and, most of all, by a lighthouse keeper named Jones, together with his new wedded wife. They keep house and light house on a rock which juts out from the main island, and their little vessels making for the British possessions in the West Indies. Two hundred miles away, in the town of Nassau, is the headquarters of the British lighthouse service for the district; and on the island of Jamaica, 500 miles southwest and around the point of Cuba, is the seat of British power in the West Indies.

The case at Watlings Island is lonely. Once the keeper of the light used to have historical associations to keep him company. Since historians got busy he hasn't even that. Yet the job has its consolations, including matrimony.

It was late in December, then, that a steamer from England docked at Kingston, Jamaica. Her captain made his way to the Government Building and reported:

"Something's wrong at Watlings Island. The lighthouse is flying 'N. J.' That's 'Help, I am attacked,' in the international code."

"And you didn't stop to help?" said the official.

"His Majesty's mails," answered the skipper briefly.

Official Kingston consulted, with much shaking of heads. The blacks on Watlings Island are turbulent. Since there is peace among the nations, 'N. J.' in all common sense, must mean a rising against the whites. They considered the chart of Watlings Island and grew all more grave. Either the whites had withdrawn to the roof or a last stand or keeper Jones, cut off and surrounded, was holding the rock with his slender force and keeping the light burning.

"And his family is with him!" said Official Kingston. A reporter for a press association called the news at once to New York, where it appeared in the shipping intelligence of several morning newspapers.

The newspapers called at once to Nassau. There Commander Todd of the British navy, in charge of the lighthouse service in the Bahamas, has his headquarters. The news made even greater stir in Nassau. They remembered murmurs of trouble which had come up from Watlings Island. And although it was the holiday season, and the British exiles at Nassau were celebrating with good, old home times, the commander got out his little steamer, loaded it with every available man-at-arms under his command, and ordered all speed for Watlings Island, 200 miles away. All Nassau saw him start, and speculated under the breath on the uprising on Watlings Island.

It was the next morning that a Yankee schooner out of Portland, Me., whose name is not stated in these informations, made port at Nassau.

"Did you make out Watlings Island?" was the first question they asked him when he stepped ashore.

"For the first half minute of his remarks the Yankee skipper said things which will not be published here. His conversation gradually expurgated itself and he went on:

"I made out signals on the lighthouse, and I says to Bill, 'Ain't that 'N. J.'?' and Bill he took the glass and says, 'That's 'N. J.' as plain as the nose on your face.' Look it up, says I, remember!"

"'N. J.' means signals about distressed," said Bill says, "Gosh! 'Help, I am attacked!' The rigger?" says Bill. Well, it wasn't none of my business, but I lays to—and a hell of a time I had—and gets out a boat and my old shotgun and Bill's rifle and all the revolvers aboard. I see by the glass that they wa'n't no danger on the seaward side. So we pulls up. Nothing doing till we gets to the door of the lighthouse, and down come the [expurgated passage] keeper, looking pleased as a pig in a pig.

"'What's the matter?' says I, 'but come in. You're the first white man ashore since it happened. There's two bottles of wine inside that I've been saving for it,' says he. 'Come in and have one with me!'

"Well, what's that 'N. J.' his'ed for?" says I.

"'For my first and only son, Nathaniel Jones,' says he. 'Born Wednesday!'

"And here again the speech of the Yankee skipper sank to the lower octaves.

These notions come by mail. When they were written Commander Todd had not yet returned from his wild goose chase, so that no one in New York may know with what words Commander Todd, R. N., spoke to the father of Nathaniel Jones.

THERMOMETER MAN AND WIFE.

When Franz Goes Back Gretchen Comes Out and the Weather's Stormy.

Franz Schedel of Hamburg married his sweetheart, Gretchen, last June and two months later came to New York to get work as a grocer's clerk and prepare a home for Gretchen. He went to Brooklyn, but could not find any German grocer that wanted a grocer who could not talk intelligible English. Then he got sick and was sent to the hospital on Blackwell's Island. The immigration authorities were notified that Franz was likely to become a public charge and they ordered him deported.

On Friday he went to the place where he had boarded in Brooklyn to get his belongings and was surprised to find Gretchen there. She said she had waited in vain for money from him to bring her here and that if she should be able to get a ticket with what she had earned herself and come to New York. She received Franz coolly.

He said he was going back to Hamburg and she said she would go with him. She said that she had got a good place as a cook with a family in this borough and that she was going to stay.

But Franz was taken to the America, which sailed with him yesterday. Gretchen related a bit and said she would return to him if he found work in Hamburg to support her and her child, but otherwise she would stay.

When he gave his wife good-bys there seemed to be little the matter with Franz. He was big, if not strong. He said that his sickness had been caused partly by the absence of his wife.

Saratoga Winter Club Opens Its Toboggan Slide.

SARATOGA, Jan. 20.—The Saratoga Winter Club, Association District Attorney Kilmer, president, to-night opened with a carnival of five toboggan slides at Benj. Riley's Arrowhead roadhouse, Saratoga Lake. The chutes and runway are paved with clean white ice, and the slide distance is about an average speed of over a mile a minute.

SALE OF LIQUOR TO MINORS.

There's More Law Forbidding It Than the Law Before Justice Gildersteeve.

Justice Gildersteeve's recent decision that under certain circumstances a saloon keeper may sell liquor to a minor under section 290 of the Penal Code without violating the law will probably mean a new method in the prosecution of these cases by the District Attorney's office. Justice Gildersteeve practically says that where the minor acts as an agent for somebody else the saloon keeper is not guilty of a crime.

It was pointed out at the District Attorney's office yesterday that while it is a misdemeanor to violate section 290 of the Penal Code, section 30 of the liquor law says:

"No person shall sell, deliver or give away any liquor or procure to be sold, delivered or given away any liquor to any minor under the age of 18 years, nor to such minor for any other person."

The penalty for violating this section of the liquor law is the forfeiture of the saloon keeper's license. In the past the magistrates have refused to hold a saloon keeper under this section of the liquor law because it involved the taking away of the license. They would much rather hold under section 290 of the Penal Code, which provides for a fine and imprisonment. In addition, the fine, or part of it, went to the Children's society, which has always been anxious to have prosecutions under this section of the Penal Code and not under the liquor law.

In the future the District Attorney's office will probably adopt this course. Two cases are under the Penal Code section and the other under the liquor law will be charged in each complaint against a saloon keeper accused of selling liquor to a minor. It is the hope of the District Attorney's office to prevent the sale of liquor to minors.

A HERMIT FOR FORTY YEARS.

New Yorker Became a Recluse When Sweetheart Died From War Scarred Face.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Jan. 20.—The body of Nicholas Carlos, a wealthy hermit, was found yesterday near Dallas Centre. Carlos was 70 years old, and lived alone in an old shack on his estate. A large sum of money was found undisturbed in his clothing.

Carlos, who was born in New York and lived for some time in Washington and Philadelphia, had a tragic life. He was admitted to the bar in New York, but when the Civil War broke out he enlisted in the army. He was wounded in the upper jaw was shot off, and although his life was saved he was disfigured. After his discharge he proceeded to New York to meet again his sweetheart. Instead of seeing the handsome youth to whom she had said farewell, the young woman was horrified to meet at the railway station a man whose face was unrecognizable. She fled, and Carlos came to Iowa to lead the life of a recluse. By fortunate investments in lands he amassed a fortune.

CITY BANK AND CUSTOM HOUSE.

A Loan to Uncle Sam on Security, Not a Buy, Says Vanderlip.

Vice-President Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank had a conference yesterday with Comptroller Metz on the matter of the bank's liability for taxes on the old Custom House, which it bought from the Federal Government.

Mr. Vanderlip told the Comptroller that the bank had never actually bought the old Custom House, but had agreed to purchase it and had paid as a deposit all but $30,000 of the $250,000 purchase price. He stated that the City Bank was getting a rental from the national Government for the quarters still occupied by the customs officials. Instead of seeing the handsome youth to whom she had said farewell, the young woman was horrified to meet at the railway station a man whose face was unrecognizable. She fled, and Carlos came to Iowa to lead the life of a recluse. By fortunate investments in lands he amassed a fortune.

MARK TWAIN PAYS ON $5,000.

Although He Says He Is Not Liable to Personal Tax Here.

Mark Twain was among those who called yesterday at the Tax Department to have their personal tax assessments corrected. Mr. Clemens was assessed on $25,000 of personal property of his own and for $25,000 as executor of his wife's will. Mr. Clemens told President O'Donnell that his wife's estate had been wound up and distributed in 1894. At the time of her death he was upon which he could be taxed as executor.

So far as his own assessment was concerned, Mr. Clemens said that he had no property in this city. He said, however, that as he did not want to be regarded as unwilling to contribute to the cost of the government of the city in any way, he would consent to pay on $5,000 assessment. His offer was accepted.

Missionary Rally on Tuesday.

A missionary rally under the auspices of the Junior Clergy Missionary Association is to be held on Tuesday. A general committee headed by Bishop Greer will be in charge. At the Church of Zion and St. Timothy, Fifty-seventh street, near Eighth avenue, Bishop Greer will preach in the morning, and a conference of clergy will meet at 2:30 p. m. A children's meeting follows in the evening at a big mass meeting comes off in Carnegie Hall at 8:30. Miss McBea, the Rev. Arthur N. Lloyd and Bishop William Lawrence are the speakers.

Wellesley Trips for a Carnegie Gift.

The Wellesley College Alumnae, who had a luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Manhattan, were asked by Miss Hazzard, president of Wellesley, to help raise $125,000 this year in order to obtain Mr. Carnegie's check for an endowment fund. The speakers were Mrs. Pearl Craigie, Dr. Merle St. C. Wright and Miss Abby C. Goodlove.

Harper—Hanon.

The wedding of Miss Mabel Bacon and Richard M. H. Harper took place yesterday afternoon in the Church of the New Jerusalem in East Thirty-fifth street. The Rev. J. K. Smyth, the rector, performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock. The bride was given away by her father, Dr. Gorman Bacon. She wore a white satin gown with court train, veiled in front and carried a bouquet of white and pink roses. Her chief ornament will be a diamond crown pin presented by the bridegroom. The maid of honor will be in a mauve tulle with a cluster of lilies. Very pretty pale green radium silk gowns will be worn by the bridesmaids.

Miss Hawley, at the luncheon she gave her attendants on Friday at the Buckingham Hotel, presented her souvenirs, crown brooches set with pearls and sapphires. Her wedding costume will be a rich white satin, made princess, entirely covered with point lace which was worn by her mother at her nuptials. The voluminous tulle veil will be caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and she will carry a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her chief ornament will be a diamond crown pin presented by the bridegroom. The maid of honor will be in a mauve tulle with a cluster of lilies. Very pretty pale green radium silk gowns will be worn by the bridesmaids.

Aspinwall—Moulton.

The marriage of Miss Bessie Moulton, daughter of the late Arthur Julian Moulton, and Lloyd Aspinwall, took place yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Incarnation, Madison avenue and Thirty-fifth street. The Rev. William M. Grosvenor, the rector, performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock, and the bride wore a princess costume of white satin with lace trim and orange blossoms. She was given away by her brother, Arthur J. Moulton, with whom she walked up the aisle, and was attended by her sister, Miss May Moulton, a maid of honor. The Misses Adelaide B. Hays, Alice Marguard, Anne Leffingwell, Catherine Clarke, Fred Stearns, Louise Vanderhof were bridesmaids. Reginald Johnson of California was best man, and the bridesmaids, all in white, were Misses Elizabeth Bacon and Faith Simpkins of Washington, the flower maid, who was in white broadcloth, Miss Mabel Bacon, and Miss Elizabeth Fletcher. Harper assisted his brother as best man and the Messrs. Ellis Postelwhite and George Clarke, of New York, were given away by their father, Arthur J. Moulton. Boston, Austin Cheney of South Manchester, John Ames, R. Peck and James Lawrence were ushers.

IN SOCIETY.

The musicals of this afternoon, including that of Miss Caroline de Forest and Miss May Calendar in their apartment in the Tiffany Building, will open a week of incessant social activity. The musicale given by James Henry Smith on Thursday night was the most elaborate function of the week. Such quantities of orchids have not been seen massed together for a long time. They were the only flowers used, though palms were everywhere. The musicals were probably the last big affair of the given by Mr. Smith for some months. It is no secret at all that Mr. Smith contemplates matrimony in the immediate future. He is likely to have a London residence for the season there and this with the great establishment of his brother-in-law and sister, Lord and Lady Cooper, is likely to be the scene of some of the smartest affairs in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont have a dinner of seventy-five covers on for to-night at the Hotel St. Regis, which will be a very handsome affair. Mr. and Mrs. Belmont have an apartment in Madison avenue this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould return to their town house this week from Georgian Court, their Lakewood residence.

One of the big teas of the week will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Ranger in the Studio Building, 25 West Thirty-seventh street, on Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Ranger entertain frequent dinners of distinction at their Sunday dinners. Reception and also Metropolitan Opera House singers, some of whom will be heard at the tea.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, who have been visiting Mr. Vanderbilt's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Douglas Sloane, of late, have returned to Biltmore, N. C. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have for the last two or three seasons made this their home and have been much less restless than most of the millionaires. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and Fred O. Beach, who have been Mr. Vanderbilt's particular chum for so many years, are at Aiken, S. C., for a few days.

Baron and Baroness Seilliere sailed on Thursday for their home in France, and it is now likely that the marriage of the latter's son, Philip Livermore, with Miss Fanny Iselin will be an Easter event. Baroness Seilliere recently visited her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Livermore, at their country place at Redford, N. Y. She is probably intrusted with ordering the trousseau for Miss Iselin in Paris. Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin has been in Washington for several days and her mother, Mrs. William Goddard of Providence, R. I., has taken her place temporarily in the New Rochelle establishment.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., sail for Europe next Tuesday and will make an automobile trip through France. Quite a number are booked to sail the day before Ash Wednesday, which falls on February 22, including Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Tomblay and Mr. and Mrs. W. Douglas Sloane. Some of the matrons of Roman Catholic faith will be in the party, and it is expected that many of them are taking sisters of the Bon Secour. One of those who will accompany Mrs. L. L. Pierce of the Rockingham and another the wealthy Miss Smith of Madison avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Cary T. Hutchinson of 19 East Sixtieth street are among the New Yorkers who have been considerably entertained in Washington of late. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Finckh, when they and their son, Clifford Finckh, gave a reception on Monday night at the members of the American Forestry Association. Mrs. Hutchinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Dimock of 25 East 25th street, gave an elaborate dinner on Tuesday night for their niece, Miss Ruth Whitney, their guest, who has since returned to Boston, where her husband can not accompany them as they are taking sisters of the Bon Secour. One of those who will accompany Mrs. L. L. Pierce of the Rockingham and another the wealthy Miss Smith of Madison avenue.

Miss Henrietta Eugenie Hawley and Joseph Lawrence Myers will be married on Tuesday afternoon in St. Thomas's Church. The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires will perform the ceremony and the bride, who is a daughter of the late Henry H. Hawley, will be given away by her brother-in-law, Dr. Halstead Myers, who is not a relative of the bridegroom. The Misses Hester Montgomery of Home, Maria de Acois, Helen A. Justine, Bayard Erving and Cleopatra Crafts of Boston will attend as maid of honor and bridesmaids.

Miss Hawley, at the luncheon she gave her attendants on Friday at the Buckingham Hotel, presented her souvenirs, crown brooches set with pearls and sapphires. Her wedding costume will be a rich white satin, made princess, entirely covered with point lace which was worn by her mother at her nuptials. The voluminous tulle veil will be caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and she will carry a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her chief ornament will be a diamond crown pin presented by the bridegroom. The maid of honor will be in a mauve tulle with a cluster of lilies. Very pretty pale green radium silk gowns will be worn by the bridesmaids.

For the Century Dances, the next being on for Wednesday night at Delmonico's, some of the patronesses are Mrs. Oliver Livingston Jones, Mrs. John William Booth-erick, Charles Primitives, Mrs. James A. Glover, Mrs. John Burling Lawrence, Mrs. Richmond Mayo Smith, Mrs. William Rufus Barr, Mrs. Christopher Wolfe and Mrs. Montgomery Schwelger. The second of the Century dances will be given at Delmonico's on Friday night by Mrs. Cadwallader Jones, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. John S. Barnes and other matrons, is on for next Thursday night, when Alexander M. Hadden will lead the cotillon. On the same night the second Neighborhood Cotillon will be given at Dodsworth's, in East Forty-ninth street.

Miss Alice de Goicouria and her fiancé, August Belmont, Jr., have been constantly in evidence for the last few weeks. Their wedding will take place on next Thursday afternoon in the Church of the Ascension. One of the bridesmaids, Miss Anne Wall, will be a bridesmaid and also the Misses Cynthia Roche, Marie Moran and Edith Kane. Miss de Goicouria will walk up the aisle with her father, Albert V. de Goicouria, who will give her away. Bishop Doane of Albany, N. Y., will perform the ceremony at 3 o'clock and will be assisted by the Rev. Percy Stuckey Grant, rector of the church and by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas's Church.
