

NAILED HIM UP IN CATTLE PEN

WILD CATTLEMAN FLIES A HATCHET ON THE MESABA.

Friend He Had Smuggled Aboard Had Been Transhipped Back, So He Hacked the First Officer's Head—Got a Tight Boxstall to Himself and Stayed There.

The Atlantic Transport steamer Mesaba, which arrived yesterday from London, encountered a series of storms on her trip which delayed her for four days. But that didn't bother the officers half as much as some other occurrences.

On the second day out First Officer Johnson discovered a stowaway, who had a handsome suit case full of clothes and even boasted an overcoat. The officers say he was smuggled on board by the cattle-men.

For the first two days he lay low, but as soon as the shores of the British Isles had dropped below the horizon he began to mingle more with his kind.

It's a common superstition among those fellows," said Capt. F. W. Tubb yesterday, while trying his necktie, "that once the English Channel is astern we can't send them back. But we fooled this fellow.

"A boat of our own line happened to be within hailing distance when we found him, so we signalled her to stop. The stowaway was put into one of the ship's boats and carried to the inbound steamer, suit case and all. He'll be prosecuted in England by the company for trying to steal his passage."

The stowaway's name is Patrick O'Neill. One of the cattlemen on board, John Doyle, was a friend of O'Neill's. His anger, combined with wiggly things he saw running all over the ship, was more than he could stand.

Early in the morning of March 12 his chance for getting square arrived. First Officer William Johnson was for the moment alone on deck. Doyle seized a convenient hatchet and hit the officer twice on the head with it, inflicting painful wounds.

Johnson dodged a third blow and ran for the chart room. Once behind the closed door, he signaled the boatswain and three sailors came running up and overpowered Doyle.

They found him hand and foot and locked him securely away, but he got loose again. The next time they captured him the ship's carpenter was ordered to pen him in one of the cattle pens with six inch timbers. This was done so thoroughly that it took the cops who met the Mesaba at the dock yesterday over half an hour to break into the prison.

Doyle was taken to the MacDougal street station house from the ship. He said he was 36 years old and lived at 46 Amsterdam avenue. Later he was taken before United States Commissioner Alexander. The British Consul General, Sir Percy Sanderson, asked to have him held for extradition.

Doyle made a long statement, telling how he had attempted to kill Johnson. He seemed to be much surprised when he was remanded to the Tombs without bail. He said privately after the hearing that he was going back to do up Johnson as soon as he was set at liberty.

SAVED IN NICK OF TIME. Lineman Caught in Cell of Cable Dragged to Edge of Poughkeepsie Bridge.

POUGHKEEPSIE, March 22.—Harry Barrett, a lineman of Georgetown, Conn., had a narrow escape to-day from being dragged over the edge of the Poughkeepsie Bridge. The bridge is being cleared of all wires preparatory to the expenditure of over a million dollars on it by the New Haven railroad company to strengthen and enlarge it, and Barrett, with a repair gang, was removing a telegraph cable.

Barrett was standing in a loop of a figure eight made by the coils of heavy lead cable which he was slowly paying out, when the cable got beyond the control of the men handling it and slipped from their grasp. One of Barrett's legs was caught in a cable loop and his lassoed body was being dragged toward the edge of the bridge when the cable caught on a section of heavy steel railing. Before Barrett's companions could aid him the railing was torn away and the cable continued to slip over the side of the bridge, carrying Barrett with it. Just as he reached the edge the cable caught on a solid steel post, which proved strong enough to stay its passage momentarily. It was cut quickly between Barrett and the edge of the bridge in time to save him from falling with it to the Hudson River below.

BULLET NOT MEANT FOR SCOTTY. Aimed at Boston Man, It Hit Death Valley Miner's Brother.

BOSTON, March 22.—Daniel Owen, the mining expert of Boston, who believes that he was decoyed into Death Valley by a party of which "Scotty" was the leader, has received from District Attorney L. M. Streecher of San Bernardino confirmation of his suspicion that the bullet fired from ambush at Wingate Pass was intended for him, though it penetrated the hip of Warner Scott, a brother of "Scotty," who was his seatmate on the forward wagon of the expedition. Warner Scott was taken to a hospital, where he still lies dangerously wounded. Mr. Owen received from District Attorney Streecher this despatch:

"Warner Scott exclaims in his agony the shot was meant for Owen. Is this true? Wire and write me fully facts, in interest of justice."

Mr. Owen wired that Warner Scott when he was shot at Wingate Pass said "That shot was meant for Owen," and later he wrote a letter to District Attorney Streecher telling his story of the ambush and including clippings in which his story was originally told. Mr. Owen believes it possible that he will be asked to go to California as a witness against members of the "Scotty" party, for whom a search is understood to be in progress.

Mrs. Jennie Simpson of 122 East 102d street rushed frantically to the East 104th street police station yesterday morning and reported that her little boy, George, 2 years and 10 months old, was mysteriously missing and so was a servant she employed less than a week ago.

The police got busy. Baby Simpson was soon found. He had been taken for a stroll in the park on Wednesday afternoon, and Mary Seales, the servant, who took him, had decided that she didn't want to return to her job. She took the child to the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Keegan, on East Fifty-first street, and told Mrs. Keegan that the child's mother was to call for it later.

Mrs. Keegan became anxious when her daughter didn't show up by noon yesterday and went to Mrs. Simpson's address with the child.

RUMORS OF INDICTMENTS. West Hudson County Trust Co. Affairs Said to Be Before the Grand Jury.

There were rumors in Jersey City yesterday that the Hudson county Grand Jury has voted to find indictments against Thomas Higgins, formerly treasurer and secretary of the West Hudson County Trust Company at Harrison. Higgins's resignation was demanded by the State Bank Examiner, who charged him with misusing $30,000 of the bank's funds. The accused official admitted his liability, according to the examiner's report, and made good the amount of shortage. It was also rumored that true bills have been found against certain bank officials, including members of the board of directors, for responsibility in the matter.
