

MUTUAL TRUSTEES WARNED

NOT TO SPEND THE COMPANY'S MONEY IN CAMPAIGNING.

Trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company held a regular meeting yesterday afternoon and for the first time in several months the lid was put on tight as to what was done.

It was announced at the president's office that nothing about the meeting would be made public. There were rumors that it was a stormy meeting and that this accounted for the decision not to reveal what had taken place.

One of the matters that the trustees had to consider was a letter of protest from the international policyholders' committee against the expenditure of the company's money in the preparation of the stencil list of policyholders for private use of the company in sending out campaign literature.

Samuel Untermeyer, counsel for the policyholders, wrote that the Albany list was so defective as to streets and numbers that it was used in mailing ballots a large number of policyholders in the great cities.

Mr. Untermeyer returned to his former complaints that the money of the stockholders is being paid for advertisements in newspapers and for the present management.

Mr. Butts declared that Hearst had been trying to write new interpretations into the laws and, failing in that, was seeking to make himself part and parcel of the Board of Elections.

Mr. Butts declared that Hearst had been trying to write new interpretations into the laws and, failing in that, was seeking to make himself part and parcel of the Board of Elections.

The protest then said that there was no question of the right of the company to appeal to the policyholders to support the administration ticket.

The protest closed with the expression of the hope that there might be some men among the new trustees who will not endorse the statement that are being made to circumvent the law and prevent the expression of the will of the policyholders at the coming election.

What action, if any, the trustees took over the protest may not be revealed until Mr. Untermeyer receives the reply which he requested.

The policyholders' committee began yesterday its legal proceedings to try to get the names of Messrs. Gray, Higginbotham, Shook and Tracy off the Mutual's ticket.

The petition in the case was made by Col. Shook for himself and the three other trustees.

The petition tells how the committee of policyholders was organized and for what purposes and recites that Col. Shook is insured in the company for $50,000, and that the men who form the policyholders' committee would not serve with the old management.

The trustees of the Mutual Life Insurance Company caused the name of your petitioner and his associates to be placed on said administration ticket for the purpose and with the intent to confuse the policyholders of the company in the coming election.

It was announced that Attorney-General Mayer would appear for Supt. Kelsey before Justice Howard to let the matter in and Samuel Untermeyer would argue for it.

The policyholders' committee also announced yesterday the addition of five men to its ranks to represent the policyholders of France.

Harold A. Wright of 141 Broadway, a policyholder of the Mutual Life, made public last night a letter he had written to President Peabody asking for further information as to the company's condition in response to the circular sent out on July 2 saying that many reforms had been made in the management and that the officials had their hands "deep down" in control of affairs.

I would like to know: First—Who has been removed from executive management of the company on account of responsibility of conditions prior to 1906, and some proof that the remaining officers were not directly or indirectly responsible for the past conditions?

CHANGES IN N. Y. LIFE BOARD.

Straus's Resignation Accepted—Eckels and Fleischmann Among the New Members.

The resignation of Oscar S. Straus from the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance Company, which was offered on May 2 last, was accepted yesterday by the board at the adjourned session of the regular July meeting.

James H. Eckels, ex-Comptroller of the Treasury, was selected as a trustee to succeed Norman B. Heam, and Judge Fleischmann was chosen to succeed William B. Hornblower.

It was also decided to apply to the French Government for the registration of the company in France under the new law applying to foreign insurance companies.

While He Tries Again to Get the Legislature to Reopen the Count.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Butts asked Supreme Court Justice MacLean yesterday to vacate the court order under which the ballot boxes containing the ballots cast at the last Mayoralty election have been preserved intact pending William H. Hearst's various endeavors to prove that he was elected Mayor.

Mr. Shearn declared that his client intended to apply once more to the Legislature for a recount of the ballots.

Mr. Shearn declared that his client intended to apply once more to the Legislature for a recount of the ballots.

Mr. Butts declared that Hearst had been trying to write new interpretations into the laws and, failing in that, was seeking to make himself part and parcel of the Board of Elections.

The question is, your Honor, replied Butts, "whether or not any one can lawfully supply ballot boxes to the Board of Elections. We must reject this offer of Hearst to participate with public officers in the discharge of their duty."

Argument in the habeas corpus order in the case of Dr. Thomas J. Macfarlane, who refused to pay a ten cent fare from Coney Island, was held yesterday before Justice William J. Gaynor in Brooklyn.

Mr. Sheehan said the question of the rate of fare was now before the State Railroad Commission. Against the protest of Mr. Baldwin Mr. Sheehan read a statement made by James Blaney, the guard who is said to have asked Lanyon to arrest Dr. Macfarlane, denying that he had made such a request.

Mr. Sheehan added with warmth: "I charge that this is a deliberate put up job. These gentlemen are all parties to a conspiracy to get this case before the community in the harshest possible way."

Mr. Baldwin responded to Mr. Sheehan thus: "Do not charge me with being in league with Wall Street. Imagine William F. Sheehan talking about me being league with Wall Street. He says I have ulterior motives."

Justice Gaynor reserved decision.
