CITY'S LAW SHOP OVERWORKED

Delany Explains Why Paving Claims Against Street Railroads Haven't Been Pushed.

Corporation Counsel Delany, replying to the charges recently made by the Citizens' Union that the city's legal authorities seemed disinclined to push the suits against the street railroad companies for paving claims amounting to about $1,500,000, said yesterday that the claims went back as far as Mayor Grant's time and that when George L. Rives was Corporation Counsel under Mayor Loring, he retained the United States Rubber Company to handle the claims.

Mr. Delany said that his office would be able shortly to file with the court the claims against the city which he said would be able to pay the paving claims and that while there had been delay in the city's law shop, he believed that the city's law shop would be able to pay the paving claims and that while there had been delay in the city's law shop, he believed that the city's law shop would be able to pay the paving claims.

The reason why the legal work of the city drops behind, Mr. Delany explained, is that the city's law shop is overworked. He has applied to the Board of Estimate in making up the budget this year to allow him to employ more assistants in his office.

The next action by Secretary Shaw for the relief of the most of the city's law shop is to let go for an instant and they occupy almost all of the time of the insufficient staff I have at my disposal. These cases will be attended to as they come in.
