

PARSONS IN FULL CONTROL

UNANIMOUS VOTE IN REPUBLICAN COUNTY COMMITTEE.

He Says That the Victory Was the Fruit of Months of Toil, Preparation and Self-Sacrifice, and Men Risked Their Lives to Win It—No Lobby Control.

Herbert Parsons' triumph over Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., and Lemuel E. Quigg was made complete last night when at a meeting of the Republican county committee for the reorganization of that body Mr. Parsons was re-elected president, and elected not only followers of his to the other offices of the organization but also put on all the sub-committees men upon whom he can rely to carry out his policy.

These were the officers elected:

President, HERBERT PARSONS. Treasurer, OTTO T. BARNARD. Secretary, THOMAS W. WENTZLER. First Vice-President, ALFRED R. PAGE. Second Vice-President, CHARLES S. ADLER.

With the exception of Messrs. Barnard and Adler all are re-elected officers. Mr. Barnard succeeds George Blagden, who recently asked to be allowed to retire as treasurer. Mr. Barnard is president of the New York Trust Company and is a resident of the Twenty-ninth Assembly district. Mr. Adler succeeds in the second vice-presidency Julius G. Krawanz who was defeated at the primaries on Tuesday last for the leadership of the Second Assembly district by Joseph Levenson.

The meeting last night, which was held at the Grand Central Palace, was the first of the kind which took place in the early part of June when Lemuel E. Quigg and William Halpin, at the direction of Boes Odell, had the rules of the committee altered so as to provide for the reorganization of the committee on the Saturday before the Republican State convention instead of on the usual date, on Thursday, in December. The purpose of the change was to give the election machinery over to the control of the Odell-Quigg forces during the campaign.

It is a fact that no one seemed to have any doubt that Mr. Odell and Mr. Quigg would be able to wrest the control of the committee from Mr. Parsons and many changes which were made at that time in the rules were made for the express purpose of humiliating Mr. Parsons, although at the time no attempt was made to depose him from the chairmanship.

Mr. Quigg and Mr. Odell thought then that that pushing out process could be easily accomplished at the meeting last night.

But last night, although there are several district leaders who were among Mr. Odell's closest supporters, not one of them, nor any of the delegates, nor even the faintest protest against the carrying out of the programme which Mr. Parsons had drawn up at the meeting of the executive committee earlier in the day at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Era P. Prentice, the young Assemblyman from the Twenty-fifth district, who defeated Mr. Van Cott, Mr. Odell's ally, was nominated for temporary chairman, and elected unanimously. And then as if to rub it in further, Mr. Parsons defeated Theodore P. Gilman, Quigg's candidate in the Fifteenth district, who was unanimously elected temporary secretary.

Bronson Winthrop of the Twenty-fifth Assembly district, Mr. Parsons's old district, nominated Mr. Parsons for president of the committee. He eulogized the work Mr. Parsons had done in the county committee, and remarked that the election of Mr. Parsons to the leadership of the county committee would be a mere ratification of the will of the Republicans of the county as expressed at the last primary elections. A motion that Mr. Parsons should be elected by the casting of a single ballot by the secretary was adopted without an opposing voice.

When Mr. Parsons was escorted to the platform he was greeted by a cheering throng of more members of the committee rising in a body and cheering him for fully five minutes. In returning thanks for his election Mr. Parsons said:

"We were bound to win last Tuesday because we had the right side of the issue with us. I doubt if Republicans of this county have any more to offer than a change of toll, of preparation, of self-sacrifice, that preceded that victory. I know that men risked their lives to win it. Since that victory was won I have received much personal praise, but the credit is not mine. It is yours.

"We presented an issue to the enrolled Republicans squarely and squarely they have answered it, and squarely we must keep our trust. We must forever keep the Republican party in this county free from the danger of going back into the hands of the lobbyists, and we must see to it that we as Republicans of this great city keep loyal to the principles of Theodore Roosevelt. Henceforth the Republican organization of this county must not depend for strength upon promises but upon deeds."

After the election of the permanent officers, committees were appointed to pass upon the contests presented by the defeated leaders in the Second, Third, Fourth, Thirteenth and Twenty-ninth districts and also to report upon the advisability of changing back the rules of the committee to correspond to those which existed prior to the changes made by the Odell-Quigg forces. In the afternoon the committee adjourned until October 1, when it will meet at 32 Liberty street.

MURPHY OFF TO BUFFALO.

Took the 11:30 P. M. Train After Leaving Buffalo for the Hall All Day.

Charles F. Murphy left for Buffalo last night on the train leaving the Grand Central Station at 11:30. He was accompanied only by Tom Smith, secretary of Tammany Hall. He did not appear at Tammany Hall yesterday. District leaders who waited around the building until late in the afternoon drifted away under the belief that he had gone to Buffalo on some other line than the New York Central to evade the newspaper men, who for two days had been endeavoring to find out if he intended to fight for the enforcement of the unit rule at Monday night's caucus in Buffalo of the Tammany delegates. Mr. Murphy has refused to answer any questions which have been put to him along these lines, but to the committee representing the Sulzer forces which called upon him on Friday he said that he was going to Buffalo with an entirely unprejudiced mind, but he liked the Sulzer plan and that Sulzer if nominated would have no warmer supporter. One of Mr. Murphy's friends who was seen yesterday said:

"Charley will do nothing definite until after the caucus. The Sullivan and the McCellan line, I understand, will not follow out their threat to remain out of the caucus, because combining their forces will have enough votes to defeat any project Murphy may bring forward to commit the delegates from this county to Hearst. Once Murphy finds that he has no chance of carrying through his proposition for putting into effect the unit rule there is no doubt that he will drop Hearst and will be willing to listen to reason to consider some other candidate upon whom we can all agree."

Victor M. Allen for State Senator.

TROOP, Sept. 22.—The Republican county convention this afternoon nominated Victor M. Allen for State Senator and a delegation, headed by ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, Superintendent of State Prisons C. V. Collins and Senator William D. Barnes, to the State convention.

Lameness in His Joints

Mr. E. B. Deoss, of Lyndonville, Vt., was permanently cured of cold and lameness in his joints by the world's greatest tonic stimulant, Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

E. B. DEOSS.

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY

It is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic; it builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles, and enables you to get from the food you eat the maximum amount of nourishment. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children, as it is a food and a tonic. It is the only whiskey that is a medicine, and it is guaranteed absolutely free from adulteration.

ONE CRAQUEUR OF FOUR GONE.

M. MINOUR'S STORY OF THE UHLAN TOLD FOR THE LAST TIME.

It Pleased Him Much to Remember That He Had Been a Soldier of France. Even if He Hadn't Been—Vanquished by Asthma, He Shoots Himself.

Les Quatre Craqueurs met, as was their Saturday night custom, at Andre's, on West Thirty-seventh street, last night. But there were only three of them. They turned up one chair and one glass of claret they allowed to stand unattended before the turned up chair. For M. Prosper Minour, the fourth of the Quatre Craqueurs, had shot himself below the heart and had died in his lodgings on Seventh avenue that afternoon. It was at number 428.

"It is too bad," said M. Emilion, one of the three remaining, as he took his seat at the table. "But it was to be expected."

"Yes," said M. St. Antoine, "and you will remember how he said: 'It is not fitting that a soldier of France should show weakness.' Yet he was 76 years old—and that is old."

"Truly said," added M. Franchon, the last of the Quatre Craqueurs. "Yet he died quickly and as a soldier. That was something."

So the three remaining members of the Quatre Craqueurs drank their wine last night in silence and when the hour came for Andre's closing they went their several ways.

Les Quatre, and that is the name that Andre knows them by, are not all liars. They chose that name out of sportiveness. They are all old fellows, Frenchmen, who have been wont to gather every Saturday night in Andre's and there swap yarns and spin tales of the old days back in France when they were all young. M. Prosper, who shot himself, was the light of the four. He always had a merry heart, they say, sunshine or rain. And it was his story of how he killed the Prussian that always came after the demi-tasse. This is the story:

"When I was a franco-tireur I was a very timid young man. The battle made me sick, and when the firing began I used to feel a weakness in the knees. This troubled me greatly, for I was a loyal franc tireur and I wanted to support the colors of France as best I could.

"But every time I went into battle there would be that trembling of the knees and my stomach would go 'boom-boom' against my heart and stuff me all up with fear. This was embarrassing. Often did I berate myself for being a coward. Yet I knew that I was not a coward."

"The test came, my friends, in the little engagement which we had with the Prussians outside of Bernay. We were surprised, and the Uhlands came down the road on us like a whirlwind. It was during the breakfast hour—a most irregular hour for the attack. I was sitting with my cup of coffee and my panier on my knee when the Prussians came around the turn of the road.

"I jumped to my feet and reached for my rifle. But, alas! a great blond Uhlan was down on me with his lance before I could throw a shell into the chamber. And this was the good fortune, my friends, just as the Prussian launched at me with his lance.

"I held my panier against my stomach, for there it was that I felt the striking feeling, as usual.

"His lance struck the panier and glanced through the scruff of my trousers. I seized the safe of the lance and pulled. The Prussian he lost his balance and fell from his horse all in a heap. I was on him in an instant, and with my hand on his throat I struggled with him.

"That Prussian was a big man and a strong man. He tried to force my hand away from his throat. But with my left hand I reached around to my belt and drew my bayonet. I thrust the point through his throat and he died there."

"That is the story that M. Minour used to tell every Saturday night at the demi-tasse, and he used to illustrate it with the carafe, a bread stick and the paprika shaker. Here was the Prussian, where the paprika shaker was the lance. Puff! Let the bread stick be the lance. Puff! The Uhlan strikes my panier with the lance and I have him from his horse here where the wine stain is."

For five years past the Quatre Craqueurs have gathered at Andre's. They went there first when he had only three tables, and when his billiard table was nothing above the ordinary. M. Minour never missed a night. Always it was M. Minour who started the song at the end of the dinner, when the others had left the place and Andre was putting the paper over the canary cage. Ever it was M. Minour who paid the pretty compliments to Andre's wife—never the same compliments—when Les Quatre were leaving.

M. Minour carried himself with a military bearing, said the other members of the Quatre Craqueurs last night when they were talking about his death. He had the straight back and the great chest, and he raised his mustache to two fine points. It was his pride that his health had always been the health of the soldier, said they.

GRAPE-NUTS.

SUN STROKE.

Followed by Partial Starvation.

The effects of sun stroke upon the digestive system are often very severe, as well as upon the nerves.

An Ind. lady had a striking experience: "Four years ago I was sun struck, and my stomach ad congested it was terribly painful even to swallow liquids, and as nothing would stay on my stomach, I began to fear starvation. I finally became perfectly helpless and was given up by our physician."

"A neighbor told me how much good Grape-Nuts had done her husband, who suffered with dyspepsia, and her son with typhoid fever, so I began to use this wonderful food, and slowly began to recover until now I am strong and well again. I can eat anything I want, and think Grape-Nuts one of the greatest blessings that was ever given to suffering humanity."

"When I began to use Grape-Nuts I only weighed 118 lbs. Now I weigh 148, and the past four years have been a blessing almost beyond belief, and if I had not personal experience, I could hardly believe what I know is true. My nerves are steady, memory clear and I owe my fine condition to Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason."

Jerome on His Way to Buffalo.

ALBANY, Sept. 22.—District Attorney Jerome went through Albany this morning on the Empire State Express on his way to Buffalo to attend the Democratic State convention. Regarding the probable Democratic nominee for Governor Col. Jerome said:

"I feel with Mr. Murphy that the convention will decide."

CLERGYMAN'S WIFE A SUICIDE.

Mrs. Leonora McMichael, Inmate Through Illness, Kills Herself With Gas.

Mrs. Leonora McMichael, wife of the Rev. Richard McMichael, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Arlington, N. J., committed suicide early yesterday morning. She had been ill for several days and her mind had become affected. She was very melancholy and at times hysterical. Owing to her condition her husband and the servants sat up with her until 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. McMichael seemed to be all right when she went to bed.

When the Rev. Mr. McMichael awoke in the morning he found no trace of his wife. He supposed she had felt much better and had come to this city, as she had been talking of doing so for several days. To ward noon the odor of gas became noticeable in the house. The clergyman and the servants made a search for the leak and traced it to the garret. There they found Mrs. McMichael's body. She had contracted a rubber tube with a gas jet, and placing the other end in her mouth had wrapped a blanket about her head and face. She had been dead many hours.

Mrs. McMichael's death was a shock to the village, where she was very popular. She took an active interest in church and charitable work and was well known as a vocalist in Arlington and other places in the vicinity. She was 41 years of age and had no children.

MORAN NOMINATED AGAIN. Hearst's Massachusetts League Nominates Him for Bay State Governorship.

Boston, Sept. 22.—District Attorney John B. Moran, who already is a candidate for Governor on the Prohibition ticket, was also nominated for that office at the first convention of the Independence League of Massachusetts to-day. There were between 40 and 500 delegates present, and nearly the whole of Hearst's staff of reporters were in the hall and did their share when it came to cheering. J. F. Davis, one of the reporters, who has been organizing the league in this State, was major domo to-day. He called the convention to order and saw that things were run properly.

There was no excitement, except in the case of one delegate, who, when the chairman said something about the "true Democratic spirit prevailing," jumped up and said he was going home, as he did not want to have anything to do with a Democratic convention.

The only contest was for the office of Lieutenant-Governor. John Golden of Fall River, president of the United Textile Workers of America, wanted the place, and so did E. Gerry Brown of Brockton. Brown was nominated. Thomas L. Higson of Springfield was nominated as State Auditor and the remainder of the tickets will be selected by the executive council of the league.

The platform declares for public ownership of all public utilities that are natural monopolies, municipal ownership of telephones, lighting plants and transportation lines. Laws to aid the farmers, reasonable railroad rates, the smashing of the milk trust, direct nomination of all candidates, good roads, pure food laws, the eight-hour day, a limitation of the power to issue injunctions, the recognition of unions and stricter laws regulating insurance companies and financial institutions.
