The BRIDE---Anniversary Gowns from Madame Havet

Roster of Entertainments For the Anniversary Period

The new Wanamaker Music Hall offers informal daily recitals. While the mural decorations of the hall are still under preparation in Paris, the magnificent Austin Organ is completed, and we propose to give our public the benefit of its splendid possibilities. The hall is perfectly equipped to seat many hundreds of people, and informal recitals will be given daily from 9:30 to 10:30; 11:30 to 12:30; 2 to 3 and 4 to 5 o'clock. Organ music and piano music, including duets between pianos played by hand and with the Angelus, will be presented by capable artists.

Second floor, Wanamaker Building.

The Museum of the French Revolution presents remarkable exhibitions of relics, documents, prints, paintings and tableaux, illustrative of this great period of the world's history. Artists, scholars and the general public will be equally interested.

Fifth floor, Stewart Building.

The New Wanamaker Art Galleries, on the Ninth floor of the Wanamaker Building, present many paintings from the Paris Salons of the present year, and a series of thirteen pictures by Edward Moran, representing great chapters in American naval history.

The new Wanamaker Restaurant is open, and takes its position as one of the large, beautiful, perfectly equipped restaurants in New York City.

Ninth floor, Wanamaker Building.

The new Toy Store presents an exhibition equally interesting to parents, and vastly more attractive to children than any other feature of the occasion. It occupies the Fourth Avenue end of the Basement of both Buildings.

The Art Ware Salons present the broadest and richest collections of marbles, bronzes and pottery ever assembled under one roof.

Third floor, Wanamaker Building.

Fine Imported Wraps

The present Wanamaker collections of carriage and evening wraps present the finest exhibition of foreign overgarments ever shown in this country. Included are many of the most sumptuous Wraps that Paris has produced this season. They come from such famous artists as Francis, Ignace, Artus, Raffin, Gerson, Bythiner, Betinski and others.

They are composed of elegant black and white laces, rich and handsome velvets and fine broadcloths in white and pastel shades. The trimmings are of braid and handsome lace.

Broadcloth Coats, $42 to $128

Velvet Wraps, $100 to $250

Lace Wraps, $75 to $175

Broadcloth Capes, $60 and $63

Third floor, Stewart Building.

JUST as the Bride is the foundation rock of the social structure, so she is the foremost factor in the success of a great retail business. Brides of today, and brides of the years gone by, are naturally foremost in thought when anniversaries are being celebrated.

For her our richest merchandise is gathered. For her we search out the fine needleworkers of the world, to make dainty gowns and lingerie. For her we send our experts abroad to pick out the purest, richest gems. For her we bring snow-white, satiny linens, fine china and glass, and all the multitudinous accessories for the furnishing of the home-nest.

For her we set aside this day of our Anniversary Occasion, and make special exhibition of the fine things we have prepared for her—many of which are to be found here as nowhere else.

Chiefest Exhibition is the Presentation Of Bride's and Bridesmaids' Gowns from Paris

Many weeks ago our representative went to Madame Havet, the world's greatest designer of gowns for brides, gave her carte blanche to prepare for us in her own way, the most beautiful gown for a bride that she could conceive of. Also two dresses for bridesmaids, one for matron of honor, and two other gowns for debutantes. It was not a hurried order. She was to take her own time so that the gowns be shipped for this event. The result is one that will bring every lover of artistic apparel to view the exhibition. In richness and dainty elegance they vie with the gowns which Madame Havet makes for the royalty and aristocracy of Europe. The dresses are on view as you read. They give the keynote to our other stock of presentations today:

Splendid Exhibition of Fine Art Wares

Never has there been a greater quickening of interest in the love for the beautiful and artistic than today, never has it been easier to satisfy the desire for artistic homes. A visit to our superb collection of Bronzes, China, Cut Glass and Art Wares will show how easy it is to make the home environment beautiful. Each piece has been carefully chosen for its decorative value, therefore the whole presents a splendid and comprehensive variety.
