Automobiles Also in Other Sections of the Procession—Some Teams Handled by Non-Union Drivers—No Clash Between the Two Rival Processions.

The fears expressed by the Labor Day committee of the Central Federated Union on Sunday that there might be a clash between the Central Federated Union paraders and the men in the parade of the United Teamsters of America yesterday proved to be groundless.

When the parade of the United Teamsters of America reached the end of the route at Washington Square there was not a sign of the other paraders.

The leaders of the Central Federated Union parade said that from 35,000 to 40,000 men were in line. Whether or not their estimate was correct, the men in line seemed to be enthusiastic.

Before the parade of the United Brotherhood of Teamsters, which started from Sixty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, appeared a large number of people had become tired and gone away and it was a greatly diminished crowd that viewed this procession.

The parade of the Central Federated Union did not start until about 10 A. M., half an hour after the schedule time.

The grand marshal, Arnold B. McStay, was on horseback, as were the marshals of the eight divisions in the parade, representing about eighty unions.

The parade of the Theatrical Protective Union made a good showing. The members wore soft felt hats and were preceded by the best brass band in the parade.

Large numbers of the paraders wore soft felt hats with the union label, which is not recognized by the Central Federated Union, which the members of the committee kicked about on Sunday.

There were no trade emblems and trade banners that were used and only one political banner. It was carried by the Housesmiths and Bridgemen's Union and declared that Senator James J. Frawley, candidate for reelection as Tammany district leader in the Twenty-sixth Assembly district, was an employer of non-union labor on city contracts.

The housemen wore their time honored uniform of red blouses, white felt hats and blue trousers.

FAIRBANKS TALKS TO LABOR.

Says Much Good Has Been Accomplished and Much Remains to Be Done.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 7.—Vice-President Fairbanks was the principal speaker at the Labor Day celebration here, the labor organizations dedicating the new labor park.

Mr. Fairbanks said that he was always pleased to participate in such ceremonies and referred to the improvement in labor conditions here in the last few years.

"In the earlier days those who advocated an improvement of the conditions of labor and sought to enact laws for its protection were regarded by many as agitators, as entrenching upon certain vested or natural rights of employers.

"While much has been accomplished for the advancement of the welfare of labor in these later years much remains to be done in the way of making labor conditions in America as nearly ideal as possible.

BRYAN SPORTS UNION BADGE

CALLS TAFT FATHER OF GOVERNMENT BY INJUNCTION.

Declares the Judge Has No Sympathy With the Jury System and That It is a Result of Having Sat on the Bench—Declares Republicans Arose the Rum.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Thousands turned out to-day to see the labor parade of 18,000 men, and thousands concerned themselves with watching W. J. Bryan as he stood on the balcony of the Auditorium Hotel waving his hand and shouting to the men as they marched below in review.

Mr. Bryan was the guest of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and as he watched the long parade, with the badge of a labor organization pinned to his lapel and surrounded by a crowd in which almost every one was an official of a union, he seemed to enjoy the demonstration.

At the conclusion of the parade Mr. Bryan was entertained at luncheon by the Ironquois club, in his speech Mr. Bryan sounded the charge on the Republican breachwaters to his Democratic followers.

"The Republican party is afraid it will get justice in this campaign," he said, "if it does get justice it will get defeat, for it has earned it. The battle has begun and the enemy is running. It is beginning. Republican orators are busy explaining the failures of the Republican party. That party will be kept on the defensive throughout this entire campaign."

Mr. Bryan declared at the outset of his remarks that he could be trusted with the office of president of the United States. He said the Democrats had been out of office so long that they had not had opportunity to demonstrate their fitness for government. He then turned to the platform.

There are two questions intimately connected with the labor problem upon which the Democratic and Republican parties do not agree, and I do not feel at liberty to discuss these, but under the circumstances I have no right to ignore them. One relates to the issue of injunctions and the other to contempt cases arising under injunctions.

The Republican contention is that the laboring man on the subject of the writ of injunction. Secretary Taft has endeavored to amend his platform in this respect and to make some promises which are not supported by his platform.
