NEW CHILD LAW KEEPS ELDERS OUT OF BARROOMS.

War Office Tips on Feminine Dress and Eating—Statistics of Wedding Seasons—Society People's Doings.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, April 10.—The new children's act proved a great boon yesterday to the tea places at the popular holiday resorts. Parents being unable legally to take their children into the barrooms had tea with them instead. Inquiries at many tea shops did not reveal a single instance of the children being left alone there while their parents visited the bars.

However, however, had the eight the other day of a little child tied to a lamp post outside a barroom. It caused a crowd to gather and the police made inquiries. They found the child's father drinking within the bar. As he was unable to take his child with him he had adopted this method of preventing the youngster from straying.

The latest London development in female education is the "newspaper class." It has been realized that working girls as well as girls who do not work are apt to think that the woman's page in newspapers which, when it exists there, generally consists of a few pictures of hats and gowns, one or two of cooking and some complete recipes with an installment of a serial story, is the only page of a paper which can possibly interest them.

The Queen Mother Margherita and many of the members of the Italian nobility and clergy have telegraphed their condolences. Ambassador Grieco telegraphed to Mrs. Crawford to-day his deepest sympathy, saying also that in Crawford the public lost one of the most brilliant and lovable figures of the present time and one who more than any other had helped to make the American people familiar with the charms and interest of Italian life and character. Mayor Nathan of Rome also telegraphed his sympathy.

REYES WILL HAVE TO GO.

Retirement the Only Solution of Colombian Situation—Fighting the Treaty.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

PANAMA, April 10.—It is reported that it is probable that President Reyes of Colombia will retire temporarily or irrevocably resign his office. In either event the only legal successor would be Gen. Gonzalo Valencia, who was elected constitutional Vice-President in January, 1904.

Should Gen. Reyes select some other person to fill the office of President his action would be illegal and a usurpation of power, which would cause a revolution throughout the country. Gen. Valencia, although a Conservative, enjoys the confidence of all parties. President Reyes, it is said, is trying to avoid holding popular elections for members of Congress as ordained by the law.

Warnings continue to be issued against the projected tripartite treaty between Colombia, Panama and the United States. Surprising activity is being displayed in the matter. Committees have been appointed to prevent by all means a reconsideration of the treaty by the coming Congress unless it is materially modified as regards the arbitration of boundaries or unless Article 9 is entirely eliminated.

The general opinion throughout Colombia is that the only practical solution of the present critical situation is President Reyes's definite retirement when his legal term expires six months hence. Both the Conservative and Liberal parties oppose his reelection or his further acting as a dictator as he has done for the last five years.

CZARWITCH AT BOYS' PARADES.

Czarina, With Him, Shows No Sign of Bad Health or Bad Temper.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 10.—The Czarina and the little Czarwitsch were present at three inspections by the Czar at the parade grounds at Tsarskoye-Selo this week. The reviews were of the boys of the cadet corps, the page corps and the naval cadets. The Czarina, with her son sat in an open carriage for over an hour at the review of the cadets, in which the Czarwitsch is already enrolled. She showed no signs of the ill health from which she has been reported to be suffering.

These recurrent stories are doubtless due to the fact that the Empress now receives practically nobody outside the families of her ladies in waiting. She did not participate in the reception to foreign personages at the Grand Duke Vladimir's funeral, and not even in the reception to Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria. It is not altogether a question of health, although the Czarina always retires at 10 o'clock, but in recent years her distaste for society has steadily increased.

Notably St. Petersburg expects to be the city of her again fixing a date for holding an imperial court. With her nervous troubles she suffers distinctly from an intractable temper. This makes her projected summer voyage to the Mediterranean uncertain. Only when she has been induced to board the imperial yacht will the voyage be certain.

Yet during the Easter reviews of the boy soldiers she displayed animated interest and pleasure at the comments of her son, who was tireless of his enjoyment in the manoeuvres of the parades.

MAKE MACHINERY IN RUSSIA.

American "Trust" to Establish a Plant Immediately at Moscow.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 10.—The American "machinery trust" is expected to begin manufacturing in Russia on a large scale this summer. Under the old tariff the duty on foreign made machinery that could be made in Russia was 75 cents (about 10 cents) on thirty-eight pounds. Foreign machinery that could not be made in Russia came in free.

Recently the Minister of Agriculture ordered that all kinds of machinery could be made in Russia, but the attempt from the farmers' standpoint was a failure. Now the American combination, which already has a factory in Sweden, has come to the rescue and will lay down a plant at Moscow.

MOURNING MARION CRAWFORD.

Village Where He Lived Suspends Business—Sympathy of Great and Humble.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

SORRENTO, April 10.—There is general mourning at Sant' Agnello, where the villa of Marion Crawford stands, next to the old Capuchin monastery, amid orange groves, 200 feet above the sea. The fishermen and peasants, among whom the novelist was very popular, weep for his death. All the shops in the village are closed and bear the inscription: "Closed for public mourning."

The Mayor and Aldermen have personally presented their condolences to the widow. City guards are on duty at the gates of the villa as a mark of honor. The municipality has decided to offer an official funeral, but Mr. Crawford wished that all pomp at his funeral should be avoided.

He was unable to take nourishment for the three days immediately preceding his death, which was due to exhaustion. The news of his death was telegraphed to Col. Roosevelt, who was an intimate friend.

The funeral will take place on Monday and will be private. Only intimate friends of the family will attend. The requiem mass will be celebrated in the Capuchin Church, which was Crawford's favorite. The body will be buried provisionally in the cemetery at Sant' Agnello until the will has been opened and the wishes of the deceased shall be ascertained.

The Queen Mother Margherita and many of the members of the Italian nobility and clergy have telegraphed their condolences. Ambassador Grieco telegraphed to Mrs. Crawford to-day his deepest sympathy, saying also that in Crawford the public lost one of the most brilliant and lovable figures of the present time and one who more than any other had helped to make the American people familiar with the charms and interest of Italian life and character. TOO MUCH IDEALISM IN U. S.

PROF. FERRERO ON EUROPEAN VIEWS OF AMERICA.

Exaggeration the Keynote—Every One Isn't Hustling for Money—Found Wall Street Quiet—More Stir in Paris—Charity and Dr. Eliot's Resignation.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

PARIS, April 10.—Giuglielmo Ferrero writes in the Figaro his impressions of America, as he considers himself entitled to do after three months of strenuous observation, although he disclaims the right as yet to express opinions. He sums up his impressions in one word—"exaggeration."

"European," he has discovered, when speaking of America seem to be compelled to exaggerate everything, vices and virtues, the proportion of material things and the intensity of moral forces. The first example he gives of this exaggeration is the usual description of New York as the scene of frenzied hustling, "whereas," he says, "my first surprise was to find myself in a city where the movement, while certainly considerable, was less than in Paris. Except for twice daily, even in Wall Street, there is comparative calm."

The second exaggeration is the description of America as a land where every one thinks only of getting money. Signor Ferrero says: "I easily ascertained the falseness of this opinion. There certainly are many in America who think only of money getting, but this class is not unknown in Europe. The man is characteristic of our civilization. From what I have seen I no longer dare say it is a vice particularly American."

Defining as the most evident manifestation of a nation's ideal spirit, the existence of people who instead of working to increase their own fortunes prefer to do charitable works, to carry on religious propaganda or follow scientific or literary pursuits, Signor Ferrero says that without risking comparison between the two continents it is impossible to know the true American society without being struck by the large number of persons who have abandoned lucrative affairs for such ideals.

Certainly they are not in a majority any more than they are in Europe. In fact Signor Ferrero questions whether there is not too much idealism in America. Another proof of American idealism is the social position of those who represent intellectual culture. So far from the money kings being the only great personages, the intellectuals enjoy consideration which sometimes seemed to Signor Ferrero, although a European and a man of letters, to be almost excessive.

In support of this he cites the widespread interest taken in Dr. Eliot's resignation as president of Harvard University and in the election of his successor, which was a veritable national affair.

BETTER MAGISTRATES

Would Better the Police Court Administration, Says Jerome.

What is it? The Marbridge is

District Attorney Jerome was called as a witness yesterday by the Page committee, the legislative commission which is investigating the lower courts of the city. He said that speaking in a broad sense the minor courts were now doing excellent work, but that provision should be made for the bringing of prisoners to trial more speedily. It will take months to catch up with the calendar of the Court of Special Sessions, even though another part of the court has been established, and he added:

"The real value of the original law lies in the speed with which it is enforced rather than in the actual punishments imposed."

Mr. Jerome said that the minor courts were different now from what they were prior to 1895.

"Before that year," he said, "I believe that the administration of justice had become corrupt, not from any pecuniary reasons, but because the men who influenced were treated differently from persons who were without either social standing or political backing. It was this state of things that led to the formation of the Committee of Seventy in 1894 and it was because of the efforts of that committee that the act providing for the Court of Special Sessions was passed, providing also that only a lawyer of a certain number of years experience could be appointed a Magistrate."

The work of the committee, Mr. Jerome said, brought about more uniformity of punishment for a like class of offence. Mr. Jerome admitted that even to-day there was no exact uniformity of penalties, but he explained that this was often because of the "personal influence" of the temperance of Magistrates differed and when a Magistrate felt "grouchy" injustice was undoubtedly frequently done. It was because of this knowledge, Mr. Jerome said, that the Committee of Seventy had enacted the bill creating the Court of Special Sessions, in which there were three Judges, the idea being that if one of the three was grouchy the other two would be in a normal condition and in consequence the defendant would get a fair hearing.

It was needed was to attract to the office of Magistrate men of the highest character and ability.

KEEPS ON SINGING COL. ASTOR.

Another Stockholder Appeals From Order Authorizing a Settlement.

TRENTON, April 10.—Henry S. Kearney through his counsel, John L. Swayze of New York, took an appeal to-day from the order of the Vice-Chancellor Emery under which Col. John Jacob Astor was authorized to settle several litigations instituted against him by the receivers of the Telephone, Telegraph and Cable Company of America by paying $11,000 in cash and relinquishing certain claims upon stock in the company held by him.

The claims against Col. Astor arose from his failure to meet a call for additional payments on account of the purchase of the stock which became due in December, 1907. In the proposed settlement, to which the receivers assented, Col. Astor agreed that in addition to paying $11,000 he would assign any rights to dividends which might accrue from the collection of unpaid assessments. Under the Chancellor's decree the receiver will not collect any interest on the unpaid assessment on the Astor stock, which amounts to about $50,000.

There is a large amount of unpaid assessments on stock other than that of Col. Astor, and it is declared that if interest is added in all cases the total amount of such debts will be several hundred thousand dollars.

STEAL A. H. SMITH'S HORSES.

Thieves Get Three Valuable Animals From Railroad Man's Country Place.

WHITE PLAINS, April 10.—Horse thieves who have been active in Westchester county lately broke into a stable belonging to A. H. Smith, general manager of the New York Central Railroad, on his country estate near Chappaqua this morning and stole three of his valuable horses. The report of the theft was sent to Sheriff Charles M. Lane and he started out in a fast auto with several of his deputy sheriffs to try to run down the robbers. "When last seen the horses were being ridden toward Connecticut."

In the last few weeks more than a score of valuable animals have been stolen in different parts of the county, and in each instance the thieves managed to get away. Three horses which were stolen from Katonah were followed as far as the Oak Tree Inn at North White Plains, where all trace of them was lost. As several big closed furniture vans were seen in that neighborhood the authorities are of the opinion that the horses were placed in the vans and the rear doors locked and in this manner taken out of the county.
