

NOW THE FOLLIES OF 1909

ZIEGFELD'S ANNUAL REVUE SEEN ON THE NEW YORK ROOF.

The Show This Year Falls to Arouse the Audience, Though Ushers and Waiters Work Hard—Nora Bayes, Jack North and Bessie Clayton Win Praise.

Every known variety of girl was gathered on one roof last night when the Ziegfeld "Revue of the Follies of 1909" opened the season at the Jardin de Paris, familiarly known as the New York Roof. Whatever varieties may have been lacking on the stage were supplied in the audience, where all the show girls in town who weren't working had gathered to watch their sisters work.

The burlesques were so very burlesque that many people didn't seem to understand what they were all about. Besides, the troubles of rival opera managers were doubtless very funny last winter some time, but things move fast, and opera wars are soon forgotten. The same with the adventures of the hunter in Jungland. After the cartoonist, the magazine humorist and every other variety of pen and pencil had exhausted the subject it isn't wholly edifying to be obliged to sit through even half an hour more of it on a hot night.

While Mr. Roosevelt and Kaiser Wilhelm divided the honors of the first act, Shakespeare and Miss Anna Held were the equally notable combination in the second, which was designed to show the great superiority of the entertainment offered by the latter.

To Miss Nora Bayes must go the honors of really starting something, for until her entrance in the first act the pieces lagged pretty badly. But her song "Mad Opera House," and more particularly Miss Bayes herself, picked things up and gave them the first real push toward success.

Miss Bessie Clayton danced so beautifully that every eye registered that she didn't do more of it. Her encores were the kind that had nothing of the marks to order brand about them.

The stage pictures, many of them, were most elaborate, and while there were no especially striking novelties they were for the most part satisfactory. The jungle scene was carefully put on and the human animals who inhabited it were more than ordinarily amusing.

A summer audience has the reputation of being easily satisfied, but this gathering from Diamond Jim Brady's stage party, that reached across the whole front of the house, to the last man in the last row—was as chilly as though it were the first night of a Shakespearean tragedy.

NEW SPANISH CHURCH.

Charles P. Huntington files plans for Washington Heights Edifice.

Charles P. Huntington, as architect, filed with Building Superintendent Murphy yesterday plans for the new Spanish-American Catholic Church to be built for the congregation of Our Lady of Guadalupe on the border of Audubon Park in 154th street, west of Broadway, overlooking the Huntington Art Museum of the Hispanic Society, around which a thriving Spanish-American colony is growing.

PRESIDENT'S BOY HAD NO CASE.

Young Cabrera Gets Nothing for Being Kicked Out of Whittell's House.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—Diego Cabrera, son of the President of Guatemala, was thrown out of court to-day when his damage suit for $20,000 against George Whittell came on for trial. Cabrera alleged that he had suffered a grievous physical injury and "deep humiliation" on New Year's morning, 1908, when Whittell kicked him out of his home, to which he had been invited by young George Whittell.

CITY HALL CLOCK WRONGLY SUSPECTED.

The City Hall clock stopped at 3:50 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Some persons blamed the heat, others thought the absence of Marty Keese explained everything. The real cause was this: Electricians who are rewiring the tower stopped the clock themselves so that it would not interfere with their work.

John Luther Long Sues Leslie Carter.

St. Louis, June 14.—John Luther Long of Louisiana filed an attachment suit here to-day against Mrs. Leslie Carter for $4,064.43 which he claims is due him as royalty on the play "Kassa" produced by her in Delmar Garden here last week.

DIVORCE FOR MRS. CHETWYND.

New York Woman Wins Suit Against Sporting Baronet's Son—Runaway Match.

SPECIAL CABLE DISPATCH TO THE SUN. LONDON, June 14.—The wife of George Guy Chetwynd, who was Rosamund Secor of New York, obtained a decree nisi in the divorce court to-day on the ground of her husband's cruelty and misconduct.

Mrs. Chetwynd was the daughter of the late Charles Secor of New York. Chetwynd is the only son and heir of the famous sporting baronet, Sir George Chetwynd. The couple made a runaway match in 1902, being married under special license in London. The first that either family knew of it was when they turned up at the home of the bridegroom's mother in Paris.

From the beginning the match was unhappy. Chetwynd was fonder of the racetracks than of his home, and his neglect of his wife caused continuous quarrels. At last he tired of it and in January, 1908, he fled to France for refuge to hunt lions, leaving behind him the following note:

"ROSAMUND: I am in receipt of your letter asking me to return to you. As I have already told you it is useless to ask me to live with you. I intend living my own life in future and you may take what steps you like."

Mr. Chetwynd when interviewed said: "I found my position intolerable." In January of this year she brought a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights, in other words to compel Chetwynd to live with her again. The Court granted a decree in her favor, but of course Chetwynd paid no attention to it. This exactly suited the lady, as the step was taken simply to secure the refusal to obey the Court's mandate, which under the English law constitutes the extreme cruelty necessary to enable a woman to secure a divorce from her husband. The couple have one child.

The divorce suit between Chetwynd's sister and the Earl of Argyll was one of the most unsavory ever heard in the British courts. The presiding Judge refused to grant a decree to either party.

NEW THEATRE BY THE SEA.

Percy Williams's New Brighton Opened With Good Vaudeville Bill.

Percy Williams's newest theatre, the New Brighton, which is on the Ocean Boulevard midway between Brighton Beach and Coney Island, was opened last night with a strong vaudeville bill. The new house is a modern, handsome theatre. The interior is finished in green, blue, shell pink and mother of pearl. The structure itself is built of brick and concrete and is fireproof. The stage is 100 feet wide and 40 feet high. The first night before the first number was put on and nothing but praise was heard for the entire scheme of decoration.

The bill given by Mr. Williams to open the new house was generous. He has long been of the opinion that a first class theatre built in a more permanent way than the wooden shanty gets would be welcomed by the public.

NEW WAGNERIAN BARYTONE.

Leopold Demuth of the Imperial Opera House in Vienna to Sing Here.

Andrea Dippel has engaged for the Metropolitan Opera House next season Leopold Demuth, who has been for several seasons the leading barytone at the Imperial Opera House in Vienna, where he succeeded Theodor Reichmann.

NEWS OF PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Lillian Russell Returns From Tour—New Star in "The Man From Home."

After a tour that has extended from New England to the Pacific coast Lillian Russell returned to New York yesterday morning. She picked up a number of Chinese porcelain and other trinkets which she says are worth $25,000. She superintended the removal of them from the train and then went to the Ansonia, where she will occupy several seasons of the new play next season.

Henry Hall succeeded William Hodge as Daniel Voorhees Pike in "The Man From Home" at the Astor Theatre last night. Hodge is on his honeymoon. Mr. Hall is no stranger to the principal part in the Farquhar-Wilson comedy, as all season he has been playing it in the city and outside of New York while Mr. Hodge was entertaining Manhattan audiences.

Mrs. Fiske is presenting "Salvation Nell" at the Vanities Theatre in San Francisco this week. Her tour will close in Minneapolis on August 4. After a brief holiday Mrs. Fiske will resume with "Salvation Nell" in the latter part of the season.

The first half of the week is to be given up to "Twelfth Night" and the last half to "The Taming of the Shrew," with a special matinee on Friday. Among the supporting company Rowland Buckstone as Sir Toby Belch, and Frank Fletcher as Feste, the jester, were applauded particularly.

The navy yard lunch room arranged for by the welfare department of the National Civic Federation was opened yesterday under the auspices of the women of the department and 500 men were served at tables accommodating four each. The navy yard mechanics who came to the restaurant seemed appreciative of the service. Besides good food at cheap prices they found magazines and books. A phonograph was among the attractions.

SUFFRAGISTS PLAN TO WORK

REV. ANNA SHAW CALLS HALT ON THE ERA OF TALK.

Various Brands of Beliefs Are to Be United and a Campaign of Persuading Legislators Started. She Declares and 400 Women Almost Cheer Her.

The movement to enfranchise the American woman will no longer be confined to mere talk. All officeholders and would-be officeholders are going to be heckled in the most approved English fashion until they are forced to recognize that the most downtrodden woman has rights which they are bound to respect.

The declaration was made yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor by the Rev. Anna Shaw, president of the National Woman Suffrage Association, and it evoked a bigger demonstration than has any appeal for the cause yet made in Greater New York. Not more than four hundred women heard her, but many of those cheerfully stood through a meeting which lasted nearly three hours.

Miss Shaw brought her own two watchwords from the international suffrage convention in London to which she was a delegate, and the suffragists at the Astor meeting held in honor of the international president, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, seemed ready to adopt them as a campaign slogan without any discussion. They were "union" and "militant methods."

"The psychological moment for action in the United States has arrived," said Miss Shaw. "When I was in Oxford a reception was given to me at St. Paul's Church, and some one asked what I would do just now if I were an English woman. 'What would I do if I were an English woman with the political beliefs that I now hold?' I asked. 'Well, I would join the Liberal Women's Union right away, and then I would strike!'"

"There is no need, however, to be an English woman in order to strike. We must strike right now in America. It is only by showing the men of this country that we have some power that we can ever hope to gain the ballot."

It is already planned so to perfect the scheme of organization at the coming national convention to be held in Seattle, continued Miss Shaw, "that the most radical as well as the most conservative suffragists will be able to work under the general board. I don't want any one's methods interfered with and I don't want any one to be muzzled any more than I want to be muzzled myself. All I want is concerted action on the part of all the women who really have the cause at heart, for that is the only way in which we can win the victory over those who oppose our efforts to gain citizenship for ourselves and for our women."

"If you women do not treat us with contempt when we ask for our rights and who converse with each other and go to sleep when we are making an appeal to them in their legislative committees, realize that we have some power. The thing to do is to find out just what men vote against our bills in committee and if possible just what they do in the Assembly and Senate are opposed to them and work hard to see that those men are not re-elected."

"Great" cheered half a dozen enthusiasts, and the entire audience gave the speaker one of the best hands of the afternoon. "As for the methods of the English suffragists, they went on Miss Shaw, 'I do not exactly understand the object of them all, but I believe that those women are fired with the spirit of the age, and for that reason I am sure that I meet lots of women in London who would not hesitate to die for so doing they could bring freedom to their countrymen.'"

The speaker smiled and accepted the challenge. "I would gladly go to prison or be hanged," she said firmly, "if I thought it would give me greater freedom than the one I am now enjoying. But at present I cannot see that it would. One young English girl thanked me for some words of cheer, and I thought it would give me greater freedom than the one I am now enjoying. But at present I cannot see that it would. One young English girl thanked me for some words of cheer, and I thought it would give me greater freedom than the one I am now enjoying. But at present I cannot see that it would."

"Now it does not seem to me," explained Miss Shaw, "that any particular connection between going to prison for fighting a policeman and getting the ballot. If I did see one I would fight the first policeman I met, but I would not see clearly the connection between the thing I want and the thing I do to get it. However, no personal opinions should prevent us from working in concert with others who don't agree with us. If we can't do the same kind of work we can do what comes to hand and respect the point of view of others. The suffrage unions in England work very much as the churches do. They lay more stress upon winning some one over from a particular organization than they do upon securing a convert from the ranks of the anti."

The suffragists indicated that they would certainly have cheered had they not thought that Miss Shaw had been unduly pleased with the effect of her remarks.

Mrs. Catt, who was greeted by a rising vote of welcome, gave a detour in the which was listened to with much interest. Mrs. Frederick Nathan made a speech in eulogy of Mrs. Catt's services to the cause.

Miss Mary Garrett Hay said that the Interparliamentary women's meeting at the Hotel Marlborough Washington to-day is a coming campaign and appealed to every one to join a club that belonged to the county association, which belongs to the State association, which belongs to the national association, which belongs to the international association. She also explained just how one cent out of every woman's dues to her home club finally finds its way into the international treasury.

Miss Ida Craft presided at the meeting and with her on the platform in addition to the speakers were Mrs. Ella H. Crosscut, president of the State association; Mrs. William Ivins and Mrs. Ida Husted Harper. Mrs. Harper said that there surely was going to be a tonight procession after Mrs. Belmont and the rest of 'em got back from Newport, but that the date had not yet been decided upon.

Dustin Farnum was a witness for the defence.

SENIORS' DAY AT PRINCETON

GRAVE AND FRIVOLOUS DOINGS OF GRADUATING CLASS.

Preferences of the Men of '09 Given Out—Vassar, Water and "The Sun" Among the Winners—The Roll of Phi Beta Kappa Men—Gifts During the Year.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 14.—After a rainy Sunday which threatened to spoil the class day festivities at Princeton the sky cleared this morning and the day was bright.

At 11 o'clock the real exercises of the day began in Alexander Hall with the class oration by Hugh Chaplin of Orange, N. J., and the reading of the class poem by W. J. Funk of New York. The crowd then adjourned to the campus in front of old Nassau to witness the planting of the class ivy, with Nathaniel Ewing of Bryn Mawr as orator.

After luncheon everybody but the bands rested. At 3:30 all who could get hold of tickets braved the heat to attend the cannon exercises and hear the "knocks" that made a good many fond families sit up in astonishment.

After the overture Horatio Turner of Princeton gave the important and peculiar events in the history of the class. He was followed by N. F. Carroll of Newark, who told of various scrapes and mishaps that many of the class had been in, ending his incidents by presenting the men involved with appropriate gifts. The stories ranged from wild auto rides to "fusing" breaks and the presents from a real artichoke to a postal card.

A view of the class as it may be twenty years hence was then shown by Norman Armour of Princeton, who pictured the future vocations of his classmates as they are to be judged by the record of the last four years. An address by E. A. Dillon, the president of the class, followed and then the class roll was read by the secretary, J. C. Brush of New York. The class song sang the class ode and the exercises closed by the entire class smoking new clay pipes and then breaking them into bits over the historic canon.

The various class statistics were published to-day and they resulted in D. O. Meese of Mansfield, Ohio, being voted the best all around and most popular man. W. N. Ottiger of Philadelphia was voted the most respected and E. A. Dillon of Lawrence, Mass., president, N. B. Cass of Faving of Bryn Mawr, Pa., was voted as having "done the class most." C. Vein, Jr., of Yonkers, N. Y., as the most Christlike and J. C. Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla., as the best musician.

The following men were elected to the Phi Beta Kappa society: J. C. Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla.; Lawrence Fenninger of Philadelphia; J. H. Huddleston, Jr., of Portland, Ore.; S. B. Thomas of Pottstown, Pa.; R. L. Thomas of Lewisburg, Pa.; M. H. Fry of Ephrata, Pa.; Spencer Gordon of Washington, D. C.; E. W. Kerr of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; William Laroo of Perth Amboy, N. J.; H. R. Medina of Brooklyn, N. Y.; C. K. Phillips of Mohrville, Pa.; J. P. Scott of Summit Hill, Pa.; William Shand of Lancaster, Pa.; and Samuel Shellabarger of Washington, D. C.

The 1921 commencement meeting of the trust was held this afternoon and Gov. Fort of New Jersey, ex-officio president of the board, was present.

Gifts amounting to $145,321.10 were announced, the largest being $100,000 from the estate of Mrs. William Earl Dodge of New York. It was announced that the fund of $75,000 for the infirmary endowment had been raised by the ladies' auxiliary and that it was the intention to increase it to a round $100,000. A number of promotions in the faculty were announced, the principal one being that of E. G. Elliott, Ph. D., the new dean of the college, from preceptor in politics to a full professorship; L. F. Eisenhart, Ph. D., and E. P. Adams, Ph. D., former preceptors, were elected to professorships in mathematics and physics respectively.

A glee club concert and the sophomore promenade closed the day's activities.

Ivy Day at Smith College.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 14.—The ivy day exercises at Smith College took place to-day. After singing the Smith alma mater song and ivy song, written by Miss Helen Spear of Newark, N. J., and set to music by Miss Helen M. Gordon of Somerville, who was murdered several months ago by a jealous suitor, the pageant passed into assembly hall.
