

WOMEN WHO'D VOTE DISAGREE

WHAT'S A SUFFRAGIST AND WHAT A SUFFRAGETTE?

And should or should not the word "militant" be applied to "The Methods" - Mrs. Loebinger's Preface Approved - Parade of Protest, Maybe.

The women fighters for the franchise are not bothering themselves much in these days about the anti. They are too busy determining the precise shade of difference between a suffragist and a suffragette.

There has also been much puckering of brows over the exact meaning of the word militant. In fact, a large part of the secret session of the Interurbanites which was held last Tuesday at the Hotel Marthia Washington was devoted to a worthy battle between the conservatives and the radicals who have recently allied themselves with it regarding the proper methods to be employed in the coming campaign for the freedom of woman and the proper terms to describe them.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who was presiding, said that she did not want the word militant to be applied to anything that she did or to anything that was done by an organization of which she was a member.

Mrs. Lillian Loebinger, who was representing the Women's National Progressive Suffrage Union, which had just been admitted into the Interurban Council, asked at this point, why typewritten communications containing the statement that the Interurban had gone on record as not approving of all of the methods of her organization had been sent to absent members. She declared that the W. N. P. S. U. had joined the Interurbanites at the special invitation of the president, Mrs. Catt, and had been assured that their methods would not be interfered with in any way. Mrs. Loebinger said furthermore that she had been present at the previous meeting of the council and did not remember that any action whatever had been taken regarding official approval or disapproval of the union's methods, although she did remember that one person had objected to what she called "suffragette methods."

Mrs. Loebinger then asked that the matter be set straight so that she might take an accurate report concerning the Interurban attitude back to her union.

After some discussion the statement to which Mrs. Loebinger objected was stricken from the minutes by vote of the council.

After committees had been appointed to patrol all county fair grounds in a search for signs of the great suffrage petition and another committee had been appointed to make conversation with Conroy Island Mrs. Catt announced that she was about to say something which would stir her audience.

Mrs. Catt's revelation proved on the whole to be not so revolutionary as some of them expected. She simply said that she believed that the time had now come when more effective methods must be adopted by sincere suffragists and that she had become convinced that it would be entirely in order for the Interurbanites to act as sponsors for a parade in New York. Some of those present objected to what she called "suffragette methods."

Mrs. Catt replied that it wouldn't, because suffragettes in England had paraded long before the suffragists came into existence, and that there were times when a parade would be only a fitting demonstration to the public that the adherents of the cause were in earnest.

When Miss Russell came back she said that she was in a new play by Edmund Day called "The Widow's Might," the scene of which is laid in Wall Street. George Brown, president of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, is also writing a play for her founded on life in Washington.

LILLIAN RUSSELL SAVES UP. And While Still Young Starts for Europe to Start a Racing Stable. Lillian Russell, the perennial girl actress, who has frequently refused to celebrate her forty-sixth birthday and looks as if she never were going to have it, sailed yesterday by the American liner New York. She said she was going to take a long rest in Europe and probably would spend most of her vacation in Paris. She was not going to buy a single gown there, as she could get better fitted for a few dollars in London. She and her husband and the reporters how well she looked in an American gown - a tight one. She said that by frugal living she had saved a little money and was going to invest some of it while in London in a couple of yearlings and race them on the other side and in this country in a few years.

IN SOCIETY.

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, accompanied by her young daughter, Elin Mackay, will come home next week after two months abroad. Mrs. Mackay does not go to Newport or other places where social gayety rules in the summer months. Mr. Mackay will remain a while longer on the other side. Mrs. John W. Mackay is expected to give some very grand affairs at her fine establishment in Carlton Terrace before the end of the London season.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor is now in Paris. She will return to London for part of the season. Mr. Astor will go abroad later in the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Astor will occupy their country place at Rhinebeck in the autumn as usual.

The marriage of Miss Florence Vernon and William Griffith, formerly of Kansas City, will take place next Friday in St. Bartholomew's Church. The bride, who is the youngest daughter of the late Thomas Vernon, has passed the last few years in England. The bridegroom will be assisted at the wedding by Sydney Porter as best man and Dr. George C. Hall, Charles A. Meade, Henry S. Beardsley of New York and Carroll Burton of Philadelphia as ushers. The bride, who will wear a costume of white satin with point lace and orange ribbons, will be attended by her cousin, Miss Virginia Vernon, and Miss Louise Griffith, a sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaids. After the ceremony the reception will be given at 88 West Fifty-seventh street, where Mr. Griffith and his bride will be at home after a brief honeymoon trip.

Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt has decided to return just after July 4 and will no doubt entertain considerably at Harborview, her Newport house, which has been added to and improved in her absence.

The wedding of Miss Helen Fox and Mason Trowbridge will take place on Saturday at the country place of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Henry Fox, at Glen Cove, L. I. Her sister, Mrs. Henry R. Russell, will attend as matron of honor and James Trowbridge will assist as best man.
