

He has no right to speak for the President of the United States. This bill carries out every pledge made by the Republican party. If any Republican Senator desires to vote against it because of his individual views he may do so, but he cannot speak for a majority of the Republican party without hearing a protest from the majority.

Senator Nelson, also of Minnesota, embraced in the remarks of the Senator from Rhode Island. "It takes more than the Senator from Rhode Island to read the State of Minnesota out of the Republican party," he said.

In concluding the work of disposing of the tariff measure the Senate today adopted the corporate tax amendment. It adopted the provision in the bill offered by Senator Clapp making the net incomes of incorporated holding companies liable to the 2 per cent. tax.

things the memorialists assert that the advance prices on worsteds which has been announced, following the steady deterioration of fabrics in weight and quality which resulted from the operations of the Dingley bill, would add to the retail price approximately $2.50 on a $10 suit of clothes, $3 on a $15 suit and $5 on a $20 suit, or from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. to the cost of the clothing to the consumer.

The aggregate burden of the increased cost of men's and boys' clothing to the American people under the present advance price of $120,000,000 for the year 1910, which is twice the value of the annual wool clip. Although the bill has not yet actually become a law yet it is clearly seen how it will operate and the foregoing demonstrates the results already apparent to the actual manufacturers of clothing.

In concluding their statement the memorialists say that the membership of the National Association of Clothiers is largely Republican protectionists, and that they are confronted by an acute situation which forces us to demand a change in the tariff on goods used in clothing.

In protesting against the provision of the bill which would operate on the market prices for those in foreign countries in determining the basis of valuation for customs purposes the memorialists state that the tariff on goods used in clothing should remain the same this provision will undoubtedly result in a material increase of the present duties, with the result that the American people will be forced to pay higher prices for domestic goods.

The memorial is signed by Marcus M. Marks, Ludwig Stein, Slegmund B. Bonserboer, David F. Bragg, Charles K. St. John, Frank R. Chambers, William Goldman and E. R. Smith, the members of the special committee.

DIED AT MANAGERS' MEETING

G. W. JACQUES STRICKEN IN METAL EXCHANGE DEBATE.

Abolition of the Price Committee Over Which Scandal Has Arisen Was in Dispute When the Senator Was Ended by a Stroke of Paralysis.

George W. Jacques, one of the managers of the Metal Exchange, died suddenly yesterday of apoplexy at a board meeting which had been called to act on the Hughes commission's recommendation that the charter of the exchange be revoked.

At the meeting, it is understood, a resolution was passed abolishing the price committee. This action was being reviewed on a motion to reconsider, put by a member who favored continuing the committee for a time at least, when the death of Mr. Jacques brought the discussion and the meeting abruptly to an end.

The severest censure of the Hughes investigating commission was directed at the method of making quotations on metals, through the agency of a committee of the exchange, which was held in force to day that did not necessarily have any relation to actual sales.

It is said to have been the hope of the manager who brought the resolution not only to abolish the committee but also to facilitate a resumption of trading in the metals, particularly in copper, on the floor of the Metal Exchange.

WOMAN KILLED BY BURGLAR

She Was Struck on the Head by the Revolver of the Burglar Who Had Entered Her Room.

The light from the moon that came through windows on the stairway. Staber, with his face pressed so close against that of his antagonist that the fellow's breath filled his own mouth, could only see a stubby chin, set below lips that were parted, and two close set eyes.

The two men rocked in the impetus of supreme effort. Staber managed to force the pistol hand down and back of the burglar's waist, but just as the weapon was at the level of his thighs the burglar pulled the trigger. The report filled the hall and the bullet buried itself in the wainscoting along the bedroom door.

A new outburst of screams sounded from the room where Staber's sisters were huddled. The door of the window Mr. Staber, Sr., threw up the window in his bedroom and began to call hoarsely for help. The father and mother were both kept in bed by the revolver of the second intruder, who with back against the opened door kept them back with warning gestures.

The burglar, who was standing in the doorway, saw the woman who was lying on the floor. He stepped forward and picked up the revolver which he had dropped. He then turned and fled.

At the head of the stairs he paused and fired twice at the only figure he could see in the moonlight down the flight. The bullet struck the woman on the forehead, and she fell with a clatter, and then disappeared.

Edward did not follow further than the kitchen door, where he saw the burglar's footprints on the gravel outside. He went back upstairs to find the man had dropped and he ran in pursuit.

Neighbors had begun to thunder on the front door by this time. There was an uproar on the street. When they were admitted they found the woman lying on the floor, and the burglar had fled.

The whole district was clouded with police, afoot and mounted, within an hour. Acting Captain Farr of the Parkside station led the force to the Flatbush avenue station, with them were joined by Borough Inspector Holohan.

A trail of blood led out of the kitchen door, through a break in a hedge back of the house, to the rear of the building and across an open lot where the new Congressional edifice is in course of construction.

Believing that the man they had was returning to his work, the police were following their efforts in turning over every possible hiding place. It was shortly after 10 o'clock that the Police Commissioner and Sergeant Moley, scouring the Flatbush Woods not far from where the first of the suspects had been picked up, stumbled upon a man who was sitting on a bench, concealed by weeds and green branches.

SECRETARY MEYER DENIES IT

Did Not Violate the Regulations at the Yale-Harvard Boat Race.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The reports from Boston that Secretary of the Navy Meyer violated the regulations of the Department of Commerce and Labor by snoroching on the course of the Yale-Harvard boat race at New London last week caused officials here to issue three sources to-day. Statements by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hill and Capt. Ross, commandant of the revenue cutter service, make it seem very clear that the Secretary of the Navy was guilty of no breach of the rules.

A statement by Secretary Meyer himself is quite specific, although he does not say in so many words that the Dolphin's launch, in which he followed the racing shells, was at no time inside the line of pleasure craft which were drawn up along the course. When Mr. Meyer does say that his launch was "outside of the course" and that "at times" it was back of the vessels lining the side of the course, it is generally admitted that if the Dolphin's launch moved down along the side of the racing course inside the line of yachts there was a breach of the rules, although the vessel may not have proceeded along the middle of the course.

Whatever course was taken by the Dolphin's launch having on board the Secretary of the Navy there was justification in the fact that a permit had been issued to the Secretary, signed by Assistant Secretary McHarg of the Department of Commerce and Labor and by one of the assistant secretaries of the Treasury Department, granting to Mr. Meyer the privilege of following the racing shells of Yale and Harvard. From the statements issued to-day it was apparent that Secretary Meyer did not avail himself of this privilege, at least to the extent of proceeding down the middle of the course. Secretary Meyer said to-day: "I was not on the course at any time during the race. The Dolphin's launch followed the crews down the river, but was outside of the racing course. It was back of the vessels lining the side of the course."

Capt. Ross, commanding the revenue cutter service, said to-day: "The report published in the morning papers to the effect that Secretary of the Navy Meyer had followed the Harvard-Yale boat race at New London, Conn., on July 1st was entirely without foundation. Secretary Meyer was in the Dolphin's launch, but he was not on the race. The Dolphin's launch was back of the vessels lining the side of the course."

Members Return in Expectation of Passage of the Tariff Bill. WASHINGTON, July 8.—For the first time in two weeks a quorum confronted Speaker Cannon when the House was called to order to-day. Democrats were also summoned back to Washington, and when the Speaker's gavel fell at noon nearly every member was present.

TWO ECONOMICAL CURES BY CUTICURA REMEDIES. "My case was a very bad ulcer sore on my ankle and I was laid up three months with it. I was reading an advertisement for Cuticura Remedies so I purchased a cake of Cuticura Ointment and a large bottle of Cuticura Soap. I used the ointment on the ulcer and the soap on the rest of my body. The ulcer was healed by washing twice a day with the Soap and using the ointment directed. Before I used the Cuticura Remedies my sore was getting worse all the time under other treatments. Furunculosis had become a habit. My feet were very itchy and the Cuticura Soap has been a fine thing for me. He had scurf on his head and we tried every way to remove it but failed until we used the Cuticura Soap. It moved it almost at once. George M. Hall, Brunston, N. Y., Dec. 24, 1905."
