TWO NICARAGUAN REVOLTS

DR. CASTRILLO FLEES FROM MURDERERS IN COSTA RICA.

Promising Plans Against Zelaya Fall Through. Leader Killed in Battle—Comrades on Both Sides of the Border—Trouble for Salvador Too.

MOULI, July 13.—Fleeing from Costa Rica, where he says his steps were constantly dogged by assassins, Dr. Salvador Castriello, a prominent attorney of Managua and the head of the anti-Zelaya movement, fled here to-day from Port Limon.

Dr. Castriello says that his flight from Central America is due to the defeat of a revolutionary movement on June 30, which was started at Omatope, an island in Lake Nicaragua.

It had been the plan for Dr. Castriello to invade Nicaragua with about a thousand Nicaraguans revolutionists as soon as the Nicaraguans at Omatope were called Moyalgalpo, but as this never happened the leaders in Costa Rica had to take to cover.

Dr. Castriello went to a little place called La Colorado to take a coastwise boat for Port Limon. While there, he says, he learned that four spies were lying in wait to kill him.

He was able under cover of night to get on board a coasting vessel and thus reached Port Limon, where he took passage on the Turrialba for this port. Plans are unformed for his capture, but he may remain here until the trouble in Nicaragua blows over or Zelaya's government is overthrown.

Dr. Castriello says there have been two unsuccessful attempts at revolution in Nicaragua since May. The first of these he says occurred at Bluefields about May 13, but the insurgents were defeated and many driven to Costa Rica.

Dr. Castriello says there are fully 15,000 Nicaraguans exiles in Costa Rica. Most of them are apparently quiet, but he says that there is an unrecurrent feeling for the revolutionists of Nicaragua.

Dr. Castriello says that he is ready to join at any time a revolutionary movement against Zelaya, but he says that he has remained in Costa Rica to conduct further plans for revolutions, but Zelaya demanded that he should return to his native land.

GARY GOES, COREY COMES.

Steel President Echoes Chairman's Words on Prosperity in the Trade.

William Ellis Corey, president of the United States Steel Corporation, and Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors, greeted each other in the Narrows by waving their hats as the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm Dr. Gross, bound in, with Mr. Corey, headed for Quarantine, and the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, bound out, with Judge Gary, steered a course for the Ambrose Channel.

Mr. Corey said that the iron and steel industries of the country were in very good shape. Prices, Judge Gary said, are advancing and orders are piling up to such an extent that the Steel Corporation has found it necessary to start additional furnaces.

Mr. Corey said that European financial and industrial conditions justified the prediction that there would be a revival of the iron and steel trade in the United States.

Other passengers by the Kaiser Wilhelm Dr. Gross were Lloyd Griscom, former American Ambassador to Rome, who said that direct trade with Italy is forever and was going fishing in Canada, and Mrs. Arthur Graunville Langham, whose husband, was killed by a cannon blast on the Fourth of July at Seymour, Ind.

HIS BLOOD SAVES A BABY

Successful Case of Transfusion at Beth Israel Hospital.

A young Jew, Meyer Berkofsky of 25 Chrystie street, went over to the Beth Israel Hospital yesterday morning and gave up a lot of blood in order to save the life of a baby, the son of a man in whose family he has been living.

Last Saturday Julius Schwartz, 2½ years old, tumbled off a fire escape and cut himself so badly that he was taken to the Beth Israel Hospital. The surgeons came to look at him they discovered that the child was a victim of hemophilia.

As a last resort they turned to blood transfusion, but it was a good deal of a problem to find a fit subject. The father of the child, Dr. Schwartz, would have been a suitable donor, but he was unable to give blood because of his own condition.

Dr. Charles Goodman, the chief surgeon at Beth Israel, connected the radial artery in Berkofsky's arm with veins in the arm of the child. Almost immediately the child's condition improved and he was discharged from the hospital.

Dr. Goodman said that the case was a very interesting one, and that it showed the value of blood transfusion in cases of hemophilia.

NEW TRIAL FOR HEALER.

VIEWS OF DIRECT PRIMARIES

MASSACHUSETTS OBSERVERS FAR FROM UNANIMOUS.

Some Think They'd Be Good in Congested Districts, but Not in the Country. While Others Think Conventions Better for Cities—McCarthy Sums It Up.

BOSTON, July 13.—The direct nomination system received knocks and boosts from various men called upon to testify before the special committee of the New York Legislature at the State House to-day.

Nathan Matthews, former Mayor of Boston and still more recently chairman of the finance commission, went on record as opposed to it. Chairman William F. Garcelon of the Committee on Election Laws of the Massachusetts Legislature, who occupied the stand for the most of the day, said he thought the direct nomination plan good in compact districts easily covered.

Senator Patrick H. McCarren took much interest in the doings and asked many questions. In response to one of the Senator's questions Mr. Garcelon said that direct nominations in a compact district like Boston got out a larger vote, but he did not believe that it improved the quality of the candidates.

He said that of sixty Democrats in the Massachusetts House this year ten had told him they did not believe in direct nominations but had voted for them because they felt pressure from home.

Mr. Garcelon then went into detail on the matter of investigating campaign expenses. He ridiculed the Massachusetts "corrupt practices" act especially its "personal expenses" provision. Mr. Garcelon read the law, which showed that the candidate could spend as much as he pleased for posters, postage and other literary matter.

When asked if he thought direct nominations would work well in New York State, where no educational qualification is required of voters and where a large proportion can neither read nor write their own language, Mr. Garcelon thought there would be need for exceptionally competent election officials.

Judge Walter H. Knapp, counsel for the committee, read a letter from former Representative Robert Luce on the subject of direct nominations. Mr. Luce is at Bar Harbor and wrote that he regretted his inability to attend the hearing, but that he spoke in favor of direct nominations except in congested districts and in large cities, such as Boston, where he thought conventions were preferred.

Senator McCarren had been sitting back in a long chair in one corner of his mouth, but he listened intently to the testimony, and suddenly summed the matter up with this statement: "There is no question about it. Direct nominations minimize independent candidates and maximize party candidates."

END OF DOMINIE WHITES.

Church of the Marrying Parson to Give Place to a Tenement.

The old Methodist church at Bedford avenue and South Third street, Williamsburg, of which the Rev. J. J. White, known for many years as the marrying parson, was the pastor, is being torn down, and on its site will be erected a six-story apartment house.

The building has been a landmark for more than half a century. It was originally a Universalist church and its pastor was the late Bernard Peters, after whom the church was named. The church was sold to the city by the Rev. J. J. White, who was made the pastor of the church in 1880.

It was said that eloping couples from the city used to come to the church for a wedding. When they came alone his wife and one of his two daughters could always be pressed into service as witnesses. The pastor, when the news of storm meetings between the pastor and the parents of runaway couples, it was said of Dominie White that he married more eloping couples than any other minister in the city.

After Dominie White's death the church became known as the Bedford Avenue Pentecostal Church. The society disbanded a few years ago and since then the property has been on the market.

NEW TRIAL FOR HEALER.

Against Whom Patient Got a Judgment for Malpractice.

Julius Benjamin, defendant in an action styled by the Court as a suit against "a so-called Christian Science healer for malpractice," will have a new trial by order of the Appellate Division.

The higher court finds that certain evidence tending to show that Benjamin held himself out as a physician was wrongly admitted.

GEN. PHISTERER DEAD.

"Father of the National Guard of This State," He is Buried by Gen. Henry.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 13.—Gen. Frederick Phisterer, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel and chief of the State Bureau of Records of the War of the Rebellion, died here to-day after a long illness of heart disease. Gen. Phisterer was twice brevetted as Brigadier-General on December 22, 1868, and as Major-General on January 2, 1905.

He had a notable record as a soldier. Gen. Phisterer was born in Germany in October, 1836. He enlisted as a private in the Regular Army, Third United States Artillery, on December 8, 1855, when he was 19 years old, and rose from the ranks. In 1861 he enlisted for the civil war in the Eighteenth United States Infantry, becoming successively sergeant-major and Second Lieutenant, First Lieutenant and Captain. He continued in the service after the war until August 4, 1870.

In the National Guard he became Captain of the Governor's Guards, Ohio National Guard, in 1877. He came to this State in 1880 to become Colonel and acting Adjutant-General. He was promoted to State under Adj.-Gen. Frederick Townsend.

He had continued in the State service since, and in the Spanish-American War was awarded the Medal of Honor. He was Adjutant-General on the staff of Major-General R. C. Fredericks, Phisterer, Coast Artillery Corps, stationed at Fort Wadsworth, and the other Karl Phisterer, who lives in Rutherford, N. J.

General orders to the National Guard issued to-day by Adj.-Gen. Nelson H. Hendrick include the following: "The life of Gen. Phisterer during a long career of public service has been characterized by loyalty to country and unwavering devotion to duty. Few officers have done as much as he to promote the efficiency of the State military forces, and he is entitled to be called the father of the National Guard of this State."

In his death the State mourns the loss of a born soldier and a man of unquestioned integrity who discharged the duties of his position with the most efficient and ably and conscientiously. His funeral will be held at half past 11 o'clock at the headquarters, armories and State arsenals until retreat on the day of his funeral.

The Belvedere restaurant on the roof of the Hotel Astor was opened to the public, or to that portion of the public holding the special tickets issued by the hotel management, last evening. The restaurant is over the new portion of the hotel extending from Forty-fourth to Forty-fifth street, and is the first part of the new Astor addition to be opened to the public.

The new roof contains besides the Belvedere restaurant, the rose garden, the palm garden, and a promenade a quarter of a mile in extent overlooking every part of the city. Many new features have been added, including a flag gallery which contains the flags of every nation. Each of these as it is displayed from the two steel flagpoles will be illuminated by two electric lights and will be visible for miles.

An ironing machine which produces a nine-ton iceberg for use on the roof is another innovation. In the winter the Belvedere restaurant will be enclosed with glass and heated by steam. The roof as now enlarged has room to accommodate more than five thousand guests, having an area equal to twenty-eight city lots.
