

EAGER EAST SIDE PUPILS

WORK OF NEWLY ARRIVED JEWISH CHILDREN.

Parents and Children Alike Keen for Education—Numerous of the Registration Teachings True to Good Use—Evidences of True Patriotism Shown.

There is no race suicide in the lower East Side. If more babies, more votes, were a constitutional provision, the city would be ruled by the East Side.

When the military parade marched down Fifth avenue during the Hudson-Fulton celebration there were 25,000 men in line. In the district immediately surrounding Chatham Square there are enough children registered in the public schools to make an equally long procession.

At the first touch of cold some Jewish children learn more quickly than American born children of the same age. The first task of course is to get their bodies in healthy condition and their minds in a receptive attitude.

Children who can speak English are apt to boss their parents. Many of the parents learn English only very imperfectly, if at all.

Children who have been born in America recently are called foreigners. They wish to be called Americans. This is true of the adults after they have been here a few years.

bright, earnest, intelligent faces they sing "America" through all the verses without a falter or mistake. How many recollections of grown up American born writers can do that?

A fine example of these entertainments was that given in one of the schools on educational day during the Hudson-Fulton celebration. Certain of the little plays written by the teachers and acted by the children were so successful that later in the week they were given in costume at the children's pageant in Madison Square.

Through the Boys Athletic League and the City History clubs the children take an active part in the government of the East Side. During the last Low Mayoralty campaign the boys took numerous pictures with pocket cameras in order to show the inefficiency of the police and the carelessness of street cleaners.

Some Tactics Which Can't Be Found in the Football Guide. In the fall of 1902 Young, the Cornell quarterback, received a bad bump on the head during the first half of one of the early games and was so dazed that he gave the signal for the same play—a tackle back—eight times in succession.

NEW RUSSIAN DANCER HERE. Exhibition Given by Mirzah Cheslir at the Metropolitan Club. That natural dancing has taken its place among the serious accomplishments and is no longer classified with mere amusements was proved the other day when at a luncheon given to the Comte de Fayette at the Metropolitan Club there was an exhibition of this art, presided by an explanation of its significance by one of the guests.

Names make endless trouble. They are changed over night and different members of a family give different Americanized forms of the same name. Often an entirely new name is adopted. The change from Rachel Pasowicz to Lena is bound to result in confusion of the records.

COLD BATH LIAR EXPOSED

PATIENCE OF JIMSON'S FRIENDS WAS AT LAST EXHAUSTED.

And They Discovered That So Far From Praising What He'd Preached Until They Were Tired, He Used Hot Water and Cuddles to Stand the Shock.

This man—Jimson isn't his name, but Jimson will do for him—was a member in high standing of the Cold Bath Liars Association.

Jimson joined the fraternity quite a number of years ago. For just that number of years he has been a nuisance to his friends; to those of his friends, that is to say, who didn't and don't take cold baths when they got up of mornings.

That woman would like to have you take her garbage. The man swore at her and said that she'd have to wait. "I think you'd better empty that can," said the girl calmly.

dip in the sea if he was in the habit, as he said he was, of taking cold baths all the year 'round, even in the dead of winter?

Jimson's bachelor friends reached the prompt and unanimous conclusion that Jimson in so far as his cold baths were concerned was and had for years been a confirmed liar. They didn't believe that he took 'em at all after the weather grew chilly!

It was a raw morning. Five of Jimson's friends privately got hold of Jimson's old black woman servant and asked her at what hour in the morning Jimson took his bath. At 8 o'clock, she replied. So his friend told her that the next day was Jimson's birthday, and that Jimson's friends in the apartment house were going to be at Jimson's apartment promptly at 8 that next morning for the purpose of presenting him with a fine bathtub for a birthday present.

TURNUED UP TROUSERS.

A Slight That Makes People Stare in Some Parts of Europe.

Carlsbad in Bohemia has annually about 300,000 transient sightseers, and of late has received each year about 50,000 persons more who stay at least the night of the week, which puts them into the class of the stay-at-homes.

One day last summer one of the American visitors saw on the Muhlbrunnal a huge, heavy man whose girth might be expected to attract attention almost anywhere. The man had on a coat that reached about half way down his thighs. It was of some white material, faced with broad gold embroidery. In front it was open, giving a view of a frilled and futed shirt front.

The knickerbockers were full, like bloomers, and they too were of white linen, with some sort of red trimming along the sides. Thick bulging calves distended the shiny black leather boots the man wore. On his head was a sort of creamy white turban marked with gold here and there. Even in that garb few turned to look at him.

Galician Jews with alpaca coats reaching to the ground and their faces framed in the long curls that come down below the ears, Turks with fennec. Goggles in their somewhat unusual native clothing, East Indians in long white robes past Carlsbad, the natives don't appear to have ever existed as if they were never there. They may appear strange to the English and Americans who go to Carlsbad, but the natives don't appear to think them worth staring at.

Now there are hundreds of Americans and British who go to the watering place every season and it might be thought that by this time the Bohemians would be used to their appearance. There is one thing about them, though, that makes the natives turn around and stare at the male visitors from the United States and Great Britain. That is the turned up trousers.

What there is so curious about that it is hard to say, but the Carlsbad who don't think that a man garbed in white bloomers and wearing shiny boots and a long white coat is worth a second glance turns and stares long and hard at the turned up trousers.

It is an American wearing his trousers rolled up goes to the Muhlbrunn or the Marktbrunn or the Schlossbrunn or any other of the springs the little girls who serve out the water will nudge one another and make remarks about the trousers. The hotel servants, who certainly ought to be used to seeing them, will point them out or will stare at them as if it were some strange freak just let loose. At first the visitor believes there is something wrong with his shoes, but after a while he gets used to it.

Not alone in Carlsbad is this the case. Almost all of Continental Europe finds the turned up trousers an exciting foreign characteristic. There was a man who spent a couple of weeks in Madrid that had the idea for a long time that people turned around and stared after him and looked hard at his feet because he was wearing low cut shoes in winter.

It wasn't until he went to a tailor's to have his trousers pressed that he found out what was the subject of curiosity. The American in question spoke to other travelers about it and he soon found out that they too had noticed it. Folks who had been in Germany, in France outside of Paris and in other countries of Europe all had been made uncomfortable because of the persistent staring at their trouser ends.

From Telephone Topics. Fishhawk built their nest on the Providence-Fall River toll line of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, in the town of Swansey. The fishhawks feed in small covepens that flow into Mount Hope Bay, and build their nests in nearby trees or other convenient places. The best place seems to be on the top of a high pine which is nearly as dense as to hold the foundation for a nest and also to protect them. They usually build in late spring.
