CONCERNING TIGERS' CHANCES IN THE YALE GAME.

Dartmouth's Attack Must Be Strengthened to Make an Impression on Harvard—St. Paul's Beats Morris-town—Practice of the Varsity Teams.

Bill Edwards, reads a news item, "says the Tigers have a chance against the Elis."

Certainly they have. There wouldn't be much use going up to New Haven if the Elis were better equipped for all around play and for meeting the game of their adversaries last year or the year before, and it is also probable that they will be called on to meet a game of wider scope of attack.

The Tigers have gone to Farmington, Conn., to get the benefit of a change of scene and air, and it will be remembered how chipper they were two years ago when they spent two days prior to the game up in a secluded corner of Connecticut. If as usual this year will be the case, they reach the New Haven game in top condition and they can get the jump of the Elis in the first half as they have done for two years they have all of a chance. For two years Princeton's defense has been equal to holding an attack of the vigor seen at Yale, but last Saturday it was seen that the Nassau defense was better organized and more substantial than has been customary at Princeton a week prior to the Yale game.

The quick moving defense counted with ability to diagnose the attack quickly, and that is one thing which for a long time has been badly needed by Princeton in coping with Yale.

A point is how strong the Dartmouth attack was compared to what Yale's will be, whether also the Dartmouth offense was weak in itself or whether the aggressive nature of Princeton's defense made it look weak. Naturally if it was the latter condition it makes the outlook more hopeful for Princeton. So far this season the Dartmouth's offense all around has not been productive of much scoring. The more Princeton can worry Yale with a stiff defense the more helpful will be Cunningham's ability to score. Princeton has kicked a field goal against Yale in six of the last ten years, but in only two of these ten years was there a sufficient combination of ability to make points in some other way and defensive strength.

As to the other side of the question, Princeton offense and Yale defense, all we know is that Yale hasn't been scored on since Princeton will need a stronger attack in the last twenty-five yards than anything she has yet shown to carry the ball over Yale's goal line. That Yale is a stronger team than in 1907 and 1908 there is no doubt. That Princeton, with the material at hand, ought to be better than for two years ago there is no doubt. Reports from Princeton speak glowingly of the form being shown the final week. Like reports in the final week were heard last year and the year before, justified by Princeton's form in the first half only. Yet last Saturday there was a change in Princeton's telling of the groundwork on which could be based more rapid development in the final yards than in any other year.

Princeton, a former Yale back took a New York friend the other day that he liked to play football in the last twenty-five yards. Evidently he thinks little of Princeton's chances. Nevertheless there is sufficient room for uncertainty in Princeton to have a chance. Each football game is an issue separate unto itself.

In the matter of Dartmouth's attack it will have to be altogether better and go with that goal line. Individual prowess is up for Harvard unless the individual players more than make up for the backs last Saturday. Dartmouth has two or three backs who are strong, fast runners, and they are not likely to be found at getting around the end if any kind of a path is cleared for them. A back can't get this help, must rely on his own strength, and the Dartmouth backs could when they find themselves left with a clear path to the goal line.

The eleven of St. Paul's School of Garden City played its eighth game yesterday at Morris-town. The game was a close one, St. Paul's was entirely too much for Morris-town School and won by a score of 14 to 0. The feature of the game was the play of the second half when the whole second team of St. Paul's was sent in. All the scoring was done in the second half. The team being about evenly matched with Morris-town. Seelye and Smith were the main stars of the game. Seelye is a strong interschool player and will go to Yale next fall. St. Paul's has a strong team, coached by Lambert, the former crack halfback at Williams. The game was a feature of yesterday's play.

Nov. 10.—There was no practice for the varsity football eleven this afternoon at Yale field, all the efforts of the coaches were directed to the practice of the eleven in showing the men how to block the drops of the scrubs, and incidentally of the scrubs. More than two men were completely recovered from the injury which he suffered in the early part of the game when he fell on the ground. The physicians did not believe he would be able to walk before Christmas.

Nov. 10.—Practice for the varsity football eleven at the field to-day was Logan, but there is no possibility of his being a regular in this year. Like Haines, he is recovering from the Harvard game to get his letter as a slight recompense for the trouble and hard work of the past three years. Harry in Vaughan who has taken Logan's place at right end is coming along nicely and perhaps will be a regular in the near future. A strong run for the all American. Vaughan says the varsity machine worked extra hard to take the Harvard game to the gains. The scrimmage between the second and third teams this afternoon resulted in a very close tie. The men were not so vigorous in ten minutes and then were in by the coaches. Practice for all the candidates broke off early.

half. Although the second string backs were used by the varsity the team ripped things up from the very start, scoring three touchdowns and kicking two goals. The play which are being formulated in preparation for the Yale game were used in practice today, and it is very likely that they will be used on Saturday.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 10.—With Saturday's game against Western Reserve in view the midwestern team used an unusually fast practice this afternoon. The scrubs were strong and the regulars scored but played in a good half hour of play. One of the touchdowns was scored by a player from Dalton Richardson, fullback, took a day off, and his place was filled by McCarty. Richardson is fast developing into a star in that position. Weens was again the star in the game, and it is probable that this will be the permanent arrangement unless Cap. Meyer gets into shape to resume his old place at right end. The game was the Navy's best end, and was in the game a short time this afternoon.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 10.—Continued secret practice of the varsity team to-day with the hard scrimmages between the first and second teams. The second team used a variety of formations throughout and made several long gains. One of the touchdowns was scored by a player from Dalton Richardson, fullback, but he was unable to score through the heavy Yale line. The varsity ran well with the ball and scored one touchdown on the scrubs. The playing was snappy and aggressive and showed a decided improvement over last week's work.

The New York University football team had its third day of hard practice before the varsity team yesterday afternoon. Coach Hammond did not meet the eleven in practice yesterday as was expected, so the varsity practiced on their own. The team used a long scrimmage. The second eleven, coached by Tom Reilly '10, offered a stout defense. The varsity team did not score in the practice, but watched it from the side lines. While making an end run at full speed the player who was carrying the ball, turned in sharply to avoid a tackler and strained a ligament in the left knee. The worst injury of the game was a concussion of the head which occurred when the player was running with the ball to make substantial gains on end runs. An experiment was tried when the varsity took the ball to the yard line and tried to make the touchdown against a team of seventeen or eighteen substitutes. The tandem play was very successful at blocking the line. The varsity made a touchdown and a field goal.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—The Dartmouth team last scrimmaged today in the season to-day when it was put on the defensive for fifteen minutes against the scrubs. The varsity team was able to get the ball over from the 5 yard line. The squad was called out at 3 o'clock this afternoon and they had charge of a long punting practice. Marks continued to do a good deal of the kicking and got away with several touchdowns. The team under Coach Randall, Reedy and Bruce were given their last session with the backing of the varsity. The team was very hard on the backs a try at the kicking strap and kept them fighting every minute. The team was very hard on the backs a try at the kicking strap and kept them fighting every minute. CARLEISLE, Pa., Nov. 10.—With the idea of putting the Carlisle Indian football eleven on keener edge for the Gettysburg contest at Carlisle, Pa., the team was to be played in New York city, the Carlisle Indian coaches gave the varsity men on the line a hard practice. The team was very hard on the backs a try at the kicking strap and kept them fighting every minute. The team was very hard on the backs a try at the kicking strap and kept them fighting every minute.

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 10.—Instead of the hard midweek scrimmage usually given to the varsity there was a long drill in the morning and a shorter one in the afternoon to-day. No scrimmaging, tackling or interference was used, but every play was run through slowly. It was an exceptional day for the varsity. The team was very hard on the backs a try at the kicking strap and kept them fighting every minute. Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—In preparation for the Michigan game Pennsylvania's football team will have a practice at Franklin Field this afternoon. At 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon the entire "varsity" squad, consisting of thirty-three men, will leave for Winklow Junction, N. J., where the coaches intend to put the finishing touches on the team's preparation for the Wolverines. Ramsdell is still in bed and will not accompany the team. Coons and Marle are expected to be in the line-up while Lambertson has an abrasion on a tooth and is run down generally. Lambertson is expected to be in the line-up, but will go away with the team.

Smith, Mulford and Stevenson worked with the backfield for over an hour showing them the different formations and plays that will be used on Saturday. Hutchinson and his brand of play will be used in the first line-up on Saturday. Joe Torrey and Craig Mitchell worked with the line-men, while the other two valuable instructions. Pike was played in Lambertson's place at guard and will start Saturday in case Lambertson is not well enough to play. The end men were in charge of Coach Scarlett, who gave the players special instructions on how to block and up interference.

The varsity and scrub teams were then lined up against each other for twenty minute scrimmages. The first team played by far the best game that has been seen this season. The varsity scored two touchdowns against the scrubs. The playing was snappy and aggressive and showed a decided improvement over last week's work.

Owing to a misunderstanding the Fordham eleven did not line up against New York University yesterday afternoon. Instead of that practice taking place at Fordham and this was followed by a short rehearsal in punting, during which the entire squad practiced the kicking of the ball. The varsity took charge of the line-men and drilled them in several new line plays of the season. The team was very hard on the backs a try at the kicking strap and kept them fighting every minute. COLUMBIA SENIORS WIN. They Overwhelm Juniors in Deciding Football Game. By overwhelming the juniors in the deciding game of the Columbia intercollegiate football championship series on South Field yesterday afternoon the senior class team, with a score of 23 to 0, won for the third successive time class football honors at the formation of the intercollegiate series. The seniors were outwished and later outplayed, but in the first period they put up a spirited fight and were scored on only once in the closing moments of the half. The seniors had an easy time in the second half, mauling the juniors and scoring on them for three touchdowns.

The game for the greater part of the first half was a hammer and tongs affair, with the seniors having a little the better of it, for they kept the ball in the juniors' hands for most of the time. The seniors braced and took the ball on down on their own 10 yard line and a couple of lucky kicks kept the ball in the seniors' hands. The seniors were outwished and later outplayed, but in the first period they put up a spirited fight and were scored on only once in the closing moments of the half.
