

and which is either the original or a copy of the memo prepared by Mr. Lawler. It is received from a copy of this memorandum from Mr. Lawler on September 11, 1909.

To the best of my recollection I left the memo with other papers at the President's house in Beverly on September 12, and received it in New York about a week later, together with other documents and memoranda relating to the Glavis matter.

The first and seventh paragraphs of the President's letter of exoneration are practically identical with paragraphs in the Lawler memo. One paragraph which Mr. Lawler wrote and which appears almost identically in the President's letter is as follows:

The great responsibility of Cabinet positions demands the selection thereof of men of the highest character and integrity. It is not enough to possess an ability and experience which would enable you to direct the affairs of the Department of the Interior.

Mr. Lawler made the closing sentence of his memorandum read: "Sincerely, emphatically and publicly refuted," but the President left out the words "sincerely" and "emphatically." The Lawler memorandum is a carbon copy and covers thirty-three typewritten pages.

As regards the essential facts affecting the charges against Ballinger the wording of the President's letter differs altogether from the Lawler memorandum, although the ideas in many instances are similar. It was said to-night on authority that the President before he had asked Mr. Lawler to prepare the memorandum had stated his views and beliefs to Mr. Lawler for his guidance in preparing the document.

It was said at the Department of Justice this afternoon that the Lawler letter had been sent to the Congressional investigating committee before the charges made by Stenographer Kerby had become public. The memorandum did not appear in evidence until some time after the newpapers were crying the afternoon papers on streets.

The statement by the Department of the Interior's stenographer came as a great surprise to Secretary Ballinger and his assistants. Kerby had asked last night for a leave of absence for two days to take his Sunday school class on an outing. This was readily granted by Secretary Ballinger, who up to this time had placed the greatest confidence in Kerby.

President Taft had left, however, for the golf links and then the telephone wires between the White House and Chevy Chase began to work. Mr. Ballinger went from the White House to the Attorney-General's office, where he held a two-hour conference with Mr. Wickham and Secretary Ballinger.

It was just after this, according to the stenographer, that Lawler took up his quarters in Ballinger's private office and began the dictation of the memo. Kerby says that the memo was written from the first in a form which President Taft might have adopted bodily as his letter to Secretary Ballinger if he so desired. Half a dozen drafts were made, so the stenographer said, before the final one.

Kerby says also that Lawler consulted with Secretary Ballinger, Commissioner Frederick Dennot of the Land Office, Chief of the Field Service Schwartz and one or two others in regard to the memo. As Kerby recalls it, Secretary Ballinger himself read the letter, or one of the drafts and all general criticism from the others was invited. Kerby says that Lawler instructed him to save all copies of the rough drafts.

"When we, Massey, another stenographer, and I had finished preparing the final drafts," said Kerby, "Massey took the four copies of the final draft and fastened each. Massey then asked Lawler what disposition should be made of the rough drafts. Mr. Carr came into the room about that time. The four of us, Lawler, Carr, Massey and myself, conferred as to what should be done with the rough drafts. Lawler said that it would not be safe to trust them to the wastebasket. I think it was Carr who declared that they ought to be burned.

It was decided to go to room 215 and destroy the papers in the grate there. There is a closed grate in the room, and I suppose that is the reason why the papers were not burned in the fireplace in the Secretary's room, where there is a big open grate.

"Well, we all went back to room 215. There were Lawler and Carr and Massey and myself. I can swear that Carr was there. The papers were put in the grate and somebody touched a match to them. I don't remember who it was that lighted the match. I think it was Carr. This was between 10 and 10:30 o'clock on the night of Friday, September 10.

After burning up all traces of the drafts we all went back into our offices and the final finished copies were handed over to Mr. Lawler. He took the four copies with him into the Secretary's room. Now I don't think that the Secretary witnessed the burning of the papers. I am pretty sure that he was around and in his room. At any rate Mr. Lawler took the final copies into the Secretary's room.

denied to-day that Carr had referred to the notebooks containing the stenographic minutes of the Lawler letter. It was said that he had merely spoken in a jest. It was Lawler and not Carr also who suggested the burning of the rough drafts.

Kerby said to-night that he had seen former Secretary Ballinger when he was in Washington a few weeks ago. "Did you intimate to him that you had some knowledge of the case that might prove interesting to the Pigott side of the controversy?" he was asked.

"Well, no; not then," he replied, "but as a matter of fact he knew what information I had in my possession."

"From whom did he obtain the information?" he was asked.

"Well, I am not at liberty to say that," the stenographer said that he expected to report for instructions at the Secretary of the Interior's office on Monday morning. So far as he knew he still had his job.

"If Secretary Ballinger," said he, "thinks because I told the truth I am not a fit person to be in the service he is at liberty to dismiss me. I guess he may fire me."

"What was your motive in coming out with a statement?" the stenographer was asked.

He replied that he was inspired by a sense of public duty. He felt that the country had been misled in regard to the President's letter and he felt it incumbent upon him to give the world the facts in his possession. He was asked if the carries who had induced him to make the disclosures had promised any reward.

"None, at all," said he. "But I had the personal assurance of others interested in the investigation that they would find a job."

Kerby is only 24 years old, is married and has a family. It is expected that Attorney Brandeis will ask the committee to call both him and Massey as witnesses.

H. Seymour, chief of the back division of the General Land Office, was a witness before the investigating committee to-day. He has assumed responsibility for many of the acts that have been blamed upon Secretary Ballinger, but Attorney Brandeis showed no disposition to question him along this line and dismissed him with one question.

Commissioner Fred Dennot of the General Land Office and E. C. Finney, assistant to Secretary Ballinger, two men who were named by Stenographer Kerby as having been consulted by Lawler in regard to his memo, denied on the witness stand before the Ballinger-Pigott committee to-day that they had had anything to do with the preparation of the memorandum.

"The statement that I was present at a conference when the Lawler memo was considered is a lie," said Mr. Finney with considerable emphasis.

J. J. Verree, Secretary Ballinger's lawyer, conferred with Mr. Taft at the White House to-night.

HINMAN FOR GOVERNOR. Osego Republican County Committee Pledges Him Support. COOPERSTOWN, May 14.—At a meeting of the Republican county committee of Osego county held here to-night the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the Republican organization in Osego county gives its hearty and earnest support to the Hon. Harvey D. Hinman of Binghamton, N. Y., as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of the State of New York and that the secretary of the Republican county committee send a copy of this resolution to each chairman of the Republican organization of the State."

HISTORIC BOAT AFIRE. She Was the Lady Davis of the Confederacy in the Civil War. The Coast and Geodetic Survey steamer Endeavor, which was lying in the North River at River's Two-Stroke Dock, between Brand and Sumner streets, Jersey City, was damaged by fire early this morning.

The Endeavor in the civil war was a Confederate gunboat called Lady Davis, but was captured early in the struggle. A few days ago she was laid up at the dock for repairs before being sent to Buzzards Bay. She is 110 feet long and is of eighty-six tons burden. John B. Boutelle is her commander and she has a crew of four officers and thirty-five men.

The fire started in the boiler room about 12:30 A. M. and resisted attempts of the crew to put it out. The Jersey City fire department and water squirting tugs of the Pennsylvania Railroad were called into action. At 1 o'clock this morning they had the fire under control, but a good sized hole had been burned into the hull of the Endeavor.

BURNED IN FREIGHT CAR. Fireworks Explosion May Cost Foreman His Life. Edward Moloney, assistant foreman in the Pennsylvania Railroad freight yards at the foot of North Fourth street, Williamsburg, was probably mortally injured last evening by an explosion in a case containing fireworks. There were a number of cases in a freight car and Moloney was checking them off. He was moving a case when the concussion caused an explosion within, and as the boxes were being seriously damaged he was seriously injured about the face, head, arms, shoulders and chest. He was taken to the Eastern District Hospital, where it was said he would probably die. He is 30 years old and lives at 86 Berry street.

The car was destroyed.

KING'S DEATH BOOMS PARIS SEWING MEN ENGAGED FOR A DRESSMAKERS' RUSH.

Seats for American Opera Season at the Chatelet Snapped Up by Cable-Mme. Alda's Engagement—Cavalieri Pines' Chamber—Prince Bound for Wild West.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. PARIS, May 14.—The dejection caused by the death of King Edward is gradually disappearing. The loss of the London season through the court mourning seems likely to prove a gain for the season here. The great dressmaking and millinery firms are engaging extra staffs, especially men, as a law recently enacted prohibits seamstresses from working at night.

One sign of the season's unusual gaiety is the increase in the number of cable messages from America and London engaging seats for the season of the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Chatelet Theatre. Contradictory statements in regard to Emmy Destinn's appearance have been definitely reconciled to the satisfaction of the management if not to that of the public. She will arrive on Monday. She will sing in "Alda" on May 21. She will go to London the next day. This arrangement caused great disappointment, but did not affect the booking of seats. The price of the orchestra chairs has been raised to $14. Seats for the June performances command big premiums.

Among the American boxholders are Ambassador and Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, the Countess Coloredo-Mansfield (formerly Miss Nora Iselin of New York), Mrs. Margaret Postley, Mrs. John W. Mackay, Mrs. Livingston Sampson, Mrs. Ferdinand Blumenthal, Mrs. W. H. Russell, Mrs. W. K. Moore, Mrs. MacDowell, J. P. Morgan, Henry Russell, Percy Peixotto, J. J. Harjes, George Jay Gould, W. E. Corey, Millard Hunsiker, Edward Truck, Capt. Langdon and Miss Delia Gurnee.

In the meanwhile "Salome" is the rage. Strauss's opera is being produced at the Opera, at the Gaite and at the Lyrique and draws full houses nightly, while at least two music halls are giving versions of it. The comments on Mary Garden's rendering of the part have not been wholly favorable. Many of the critics say her voice is inadequate to the exigencies of the music, while her dancing has failed to arouse public excitement. The criticism here that her French pronunciation is perfectly clear, with a delightful American accent, has naturally displeased Miss Garden, who prides herself on the purity of her Parisian accent.

Lately there has been a persistent rumor that Gatti-Casazza has been using his influence rather freely in operatic circles for the benefit of his wife's, Mme. Alda's, artistic career. It has been even specifically stated that Henry Russell, the European manager of the Metropolitan company, has been obliged to engage her for $700 an appearance in order to obtain the services of other Metropolitan stars. Mr. Russell told the correspondent of THE SUN to-day that these reports were entirely without foundation. He said: "I engaged Mme. Alda because I promised her long ago in London to do so when I first tried her voice."

Robert Wastrop Chanler on his arrival here at the beginning of the week drove hastily to the mansion of his fiancée, Mme. Lina Cavalleri, on the Avenue de Messine. There the sleepy doorkeeper, who had been aroused by Mr. Chanler's furious ringing of the bell, informed him that the diva had already left for St. Petersburg.

Mr. Chanler's keen disappointment seems to have been tinged with pique, for instead of catching the next train for Russia he settled down comfortably to become a well known figure at theatres and restaurants.

The young Duke of Montpensier, a brother of the Duke of Orleans, has left for the "wild West" for two years' existence as a cowboy. He will be assisted by two valets and a chauffeur. On his return he will utilize the experience he gains in America on his recently acquired estate in Anau, where he will build a country house and establish a model farm. The Duke de Luyne and Mr. Tracy, two of the staunchest partisans of the French pretender, will meet the Duke of Montpensier at New Orleans.

Mrs. Morton F. Plant and Miss Plant are in Paris for the season. The resolutions passed by the International Radio-Telegraphy Congress at Berlin will be applied to France to-morrow. Beginning at midnight all radio-telegraphic stations will be open to the public, who will be able to communicate with all ships provided with wireless apparatus at the usual telegraphic rates plus 10 cents a word. Communication with vessels plying regularly in the Mediterranean between France and her colonies will enjoy a special price of 5 cents a word in addition to the usual rates.

The new tax on tobacco, raising the price 25 per cent., became effective to-day. It is causing keen dissatisfaction. A league called the Smokers' Defence has already been formed with a view to taking measures to compel the Government to withdraw the tax. There was a great rush at the tobacco shops last evening, but most of them were closed, their stocks having been sold. Men of all conditions were eager to buy large quantities of their favorite cigars before the stroke of midnight.

Prof. William James of Cambridge, Mass., attended this afternoon a meeting of the Academie des Sciences, Morales et Politiques, of which he is a foreign associate member. It is said that he is likely to be asked to deliver a lecture at the next meeting of the Academy.

LADY CONSTANCE IN PARIS. London's Titled Freak Dancer to Elevate Paris Music Halls. Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. LONDON, May 14.—Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, who is allied with the Sutherland, Granville, Montmorency and Stewart of Mackenzie families of Great Britain, will appear, says the Figaro, at a Paris music hall on Monday and give a dancing exhibition.

She is already known in the London music halls.

HYDE JURY STILL OUT. Contesting Reports as to Balloting Judge May Hold Them Until Tuesday.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 14.—The indications are that the jury which since 10 o'clock on Friday night has had the fate of Dr. E. R. Hyde in its hands will not agree. It is reported that at the beginning of the balloting the division was 6 to 6, and during to-day it was 7 to 5 for conviction and 8 to 4 for conviction, according to the same source.

At no time have there been as many as nine of one mind, it is said.

Judge Ralph R. Latschew has announced that he will keep the jury locked up until Tuesday night should they fail to reach a verdict before that time. If on Tuesday night there still is no chance of agreement they will be discharged.

In the latter event Dr. Hyde may be admitted to bail. He will be tried next, should the jury disagree, of the charge of killing Christian Swope, a son of Mrs. Logan O. Swope. The trial would not take place until autumn.

ART FAKER AFTER HARRIMAN. "Count" d'Aulny Tells a Rambling Story of Transactions With Mrs. Payne. Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. PARIS, May 14.—"Count" d'Aulny de Gatigny, alias Daulny, against whom Mrs. Hamilton Payne lodged a complaint with the Paris police on April 28, charging him with swindling her by various means, including the selling to her of a number of worthless, faked or copied masterpieces of painting which adorned Mrs. Payne's sumptuous residence on the Avenue Bois de Boulogne, was called before the examining Magistrate to-day.

He said he had let Mrs. Payne have the pictures with a view to having her introduce him to the late Mr. Harriman, the American railroad magnate, to whom he wished to sell the paintings. Mrs. Payne, he added, was anxious for him to continue his musical studies, and had offered him $10,000 a year for twelve years on condition that he allow the pictures to remain at her home if Mr. Harriman did not buy them.

He also told the Magistrate he had written several musical compositions in collaboration with Mrs. Payne.

IN WALKED THEIR TRIFLE. Men Who Had Been Robbed Repaid for Staying After Hours. For some time William Wolf, a printer, and William A. Becker, a designer and engraver, who share the third floor of the building at 108 Fourth avenue, have been bothered by petty thefts from their places of business. The door had not been forced. Instead of reporting the matter to the police Mr. Wolf and Mr. Becker stayed on the floor yesterday afternoon after their places were supposed to be closed and waited.

About 4:30 o'clock a young man opened the door from the hallway with a key and entered. One of the two men on each grabbed him while the other went out and found a policeman.

The prisoner said he was Gordon Chrysty, 19 years old, of 13 West Sixty-ninth street. He is not known at that address. The police say he admitted having been in the loft before and having stolen lead, dies and other things. In his pockets were $2.28 and eight skeleton keys. The police found that he spent the preceding night at Mills Hotel No. 3, at Thirty-sixth street and Seventh avenue. He was locked up in the Mercer street station as a "suspicious person."

One of the most interesting features of our displays of Tobey Handmade Furniture is the collection of pieces made from rare woods. The logs from which these pieces have been cut represent the forests of many countries. They were secured through years of careful research in the world's principal markets.

Among the different specimens are: Amaranthe Tonquin-wood Tulip-wood Marble-wood Philippine Rosewood Australian Plum Satin-wood St. Jago Mahogany Rare Curly Maple. The beauty in each instance is wonderful, and is dependent upon grain and natural coloring rather than upon a stain. These woods, in combination with the exquisite workmanship characteristic of Tobey Handmade Furniture, produce effects of unmatched charm. We invite you to see the display. LUSTIG JURY LOCKED UP. Considered the Alleged Wife Murderer TH 12:15 A. M. Without Reporting.

The case of Maurice M. Lustig, who has been on trial in General Sessions before Judge Warren W. Foster for the murder of his wife Rhoda, went to the jury yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. After deliberating until 12:15 this morning, with a recess, the jury was locked up for the rest of the night.

The morning session was spent in summing up by both sides. Benjamin Rees, counsel for Lustig, attacked the credibility of the testimony of Melville Foster, a physical culture teacher, who said that Lustig had asked him many questions about the effect of poisons on bodies, how long after burial a body could be lawfully exhumed, and about the disposition of bodies. Forester, according to Mr. Rees, was a stool pigeon.

"All that is required to hang any one," said Mr. Rees, "is a policeman, a stool pigeon and a medical expert."

Mrs. Livingston, proprietress of a drug store, who testified that Lustig had stolen a bottle of strychnine from her store, and Janzen, her clerk, who said Lustig had tried to buy the same poison from him, Mr. Rees called liars. Assistant District Attorney Nott summed up for the prosecution, and Judge Foster charged the jury briefly.
