

TO TRY BEATTIE FOR MURDER

THE CORONERS JURY DECIDES THAT HE KILLED HIS WIFE.

Accused Man Calm When the Verdict is Announced—His Cousin Paul Goes to Pieces Again While Testifying as to the Purchase of the Shotgun.

RICHMOND, Va., July 22.—Coroner Lovell's jury rendered this verdict in the Beattie murder case this afternoon: "That Louise Owen Beattie came to her death as the result of a gunshot wound from a gun in the hands of her husband, Henry Clay Beattie."

The jury met at noon at the Lovell home in Chesterfield county and resumed the investigation of the death of Mrs. Beattie, who was killed on last Tuesday night on the Midlothian turnpike beyond Manchester while motoring with her husband. Several witnesses were examined, among them Paul Douglas Beattie, cousin of the accused man, who swore that he purchased a gun for Henry Clay Beattie on last Saturday. The jury was out only ten minutes when it came to a unanimous agreement.

Testimony will be produced at the trial to show these facts: Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., and his wife went for an auto on the Midlothian turnpike on last Tuesday night and that Mrs. Beattie was shot to death, a load of shot passing through her head. The gun used by the assassin, a single barreled breech loader, was found the next morning by the roadside by Mandy Alexander, a colored woman. Paul Douglas Beattie, a cousin of Henry C. Beattie, Jr., purchased the gun from M. Weinstein and gave it to Henry and the weapon was identified to-day by Mandy Alexander. Paul Beattie and Mr. Weinstein, the latter having returned from Newport News, testified to-day in session of the inquiry and gave his testimony on the sale of the gun.

H. M. Smith, the attorney for the defendant, indicated plainly in his cross-examination of Paul Beattie this afternoon that an effort will be made to prove that Paul and not Henry Beattie used the gun on the night of the murder. Paul Beattie was asked if he had not charged Henry Beattie a week before with dealing unfairly with him and his brother in the settlement of Paul Beattie's father's estate, if he had not become alarmed when he learned that the gun would be traced to him and had tried to put the crime on his cousin, and if he had not made the confession of the purchase of the gun to save himself?

Paul denied these assertions. He said that he and his cousin had always been on good terms, despite the fact that Henry Beattie rarely visited his house. The moment that Paul Beattie closed his statement he became faint and was escorted to a bed, where he rested for several minutes and then returned to the porch, where the inquest was held. He was questioned again. Although weak and nervous, he testified that he did not know the original story under the vigorous examination of Henry Beattie's attorney.

As the jury went to a room to deliberate on the verdict a crowd of several hundred people, held in restraint by ropes which kept them a certain distance from the house, broke through the barriers. When the baggage was opened a few minutes later and announced that the jury had voted unanimously to charge the husband of the slain woman with the crime the crowd dispersed quietly. Henry Clay Beattie without any sign of emotion heard the jury's charge. Before the last word was out of the officer's mouth the prisoner was lighting a cigarette, having kept one in his mouth continuously throughout the hearing. He was the most self-possessed person in the circle on the porch whose inquest was held. His composure caused considerable comment.

The excitement of the last several days has subsided and there is no danger of mob violence. Large crowds gathered to await trial and Paul Beattie and Miss Beulah Binford were held as witnesses. Chief of Police McLaughlin does not believe that Beattie murdered his wife. The return of Beulah Binford to the city is given as one motive for the crime. "Beattie is known to the police as a sport and a scoundrel and it was common talk that he preferred the Binford woman to his wife." The police and detectives think this explains the murder.

POLICE HAD DOCTOR'S AUTO. He Complains Because They Won't Let It Stand Where He Leaves It. Dr. Vincent Gallagher of 24 Lenox road is uncertain whether the police of the Flatbush precinct are a bunch of practical jokers or merely inconveniently angry. Scarcely dressed but thoroughly alert he strode into the station house early yesterday morning and demanded his auto of the lieutenant behind the desk. The lieutenant, on being told that he reacted for the bell. Then he recognized the physician and stayed his hand.

Was it his machine? Certainly it was and the physician went on to say that he was weary of having policemen take his rolling stock to the station house. Sergeant Stevenson was called in and he explained how he had found the machine at Church avenue and East Forty-eighth street. The auto was deserted and telephoned for horses to drag it in because none of the policemen he called to his assistance knew how to run an automobile. The auto was dragged in, with the owner making a game losing sprint in the distance. He had left his patient in time to glimpse the procession turning a corner several blocks away.

After six months ago Dr. Gallagher suffered the temporary loss of his horse and buggy in circumstances almost similar to those which caused the annoyance of yesterday. A lawyer friend of the boy's mother told Justice Russell that he had frequently admonished the lad, who would protest his innocence and at the same time pick his mother's pockets. The lad's strenuous denial of guilt misled his mother for a time. Finally she induced him to confess that he had stolen the boy to the New York Juvenile Asylum, but ordered that he first be detained at the Home for the Friendless, and then examined by a neurologist. If he is sane he will be sent to the asylum, but if he is otherwise the court will send him to a sanitarium.

FATHER STEALER MADE A MONSIGNER. Pope Pius X has elevated the Rev. Aloysius Stecher, rector of St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church in Belmont avenue, Newark, to the rank of domestic prelate. Father Stecher is rector of the largest German parish in Newark, and early in August he will celebrate the silver anniversary of his promotion to the rectorship.

TRAIN OVER THE BANK.

Derailed Baggage Car Carries It Down One Killed and Sixteen Injured.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—The engine man was killed and sixteen other persons were injured a few minutes after 9 o'clock this morning when a Philadelphia and Reading Railway train on the Wilmington division between Wilmington and Reading toppled over a thirty foot embankment a mile north of Coatesville.

The train, an accommodation, was composed of the locomotive, tender, two passenger coaches and a baggage car. The baggage car jumped a switch and tumbled over the embankment at the foot of which lies the rocky bed of Brandywine Creek. Then the entire train followed the baggage car.

The cars tumbled completely over once. The locomotive turned over twice and then lay on its side on which was Fagan's station. He was crushed to death.

NORTH DAKOTA'S TURBINES.

Time Taken for Critical Examination After a Year's Test.

The battleship North Dakota, one of the newest and largest sea fighters which the United States navy has, was put into commission in May for its regular overhauling. She has been detained far beyond the usual eight weeks for repairs on account of unforeseen difficulty in making a thorough examination of its turbine engines.

Before the rotors can be hoisted to the deck the diaphragms which are between the rotor blades and prevent the steam from rushing too quickly through the engines must be taken out. These diaphragms, which did not respond readily to the treatment of hydraulic steam, held up the work. The starboard engines have been examined and the engineers are now working with the port engine.

FAMILY CUT OFF IN WILL.

Grotta Leaves All His Estate to Charities and Outcasts.

In the will of David Grotta, died in Newark yesterday, bequests were made to relatives and charitable institutions and the testator's wife and children are ignored. The will says: "I make no mention in this my will of my wife or children because of their unkindness to me and their desertion of me in my old age. This conduct on their part I consider has forfeited any right they might have had to my inheritance."

It is directed by the will that the entire estate be sold and the stipulated bequests be paid. The holdings in the Union Publishing Company and an additional $1,000 are bequeathed to Henrietta De Vore. It is provided that $1,000 be paid to Jennie Goldstein and to the Masonic Home at Burlington and $500 to the Home for the Friendless, the Babier Hospital and the Newark Orphan Asylum. To three grandchildren $1,000 each is left in trust and the residue of the estate is bequeathed to St. John's Lodge, F. and M. for a new Masonic hall.

Mr. Grotta died while on a fishing trip in Maine on July 15. He was secretary of Wengarten Brothers Company, coat and suit manufacturers, of Newark.

BELLEVEUE CASE WAS CHOLERA

Origin of the Case Not Traced Man Came From Liverpool by Way of the Avrore—His Lodging House Disinfected—Death of Another Mollie Patient.

The bacteriological tests in the case of Manuel Bermudez, the sailor at Bellevue Hospital who was suspected on Friday of having cholera, showed yesterday morning that he had it and he was sent to Swinburne Island. It was said that there was practically no danger attending the fact that the man was in Bellevue, but it was considered desirable to get him away. At 5:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon the quarantine boat Governor Flower ran alongside the Department of Charities pier at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street. A barge was docked at the pier and Capt. Taylor of the Governor Flower had to make his vessel fast to the barge. When the captain of the barge learned that a cholera patient was to be carried across his deck he got out of the way. Bermudez was carried from his room on a stretcher to one of the transfer wagons and on that to the Governor Flower.

The physicians at Quarantine as well as those of the Department of Health are puzzled to account for the origin of this case. Bermudez came from Liverpool, South America and cannot speak English, and this together with his condition made it extremely difficult to obtain any satisfactory information from him, even with the aid of an interpreter.

"The man came here last Thursday," said Dr. M. L. Fleming, assistant medical superintendent of Bellevue. "As far as we could learn he had been ill for several days with dysentery which became severe on Thursday. He had been living at a street boarding house at 179 Roosevelt street. Dr. Hubbard examined him and diagnosed the case as typhoid fever. The early symptoms of cholera and typhoid are very similar and it was not until Thursday that symptoms of cholera were noticed."

The man already had been put in an isolated room of one of the larger buildings for the precautions against the spread of typhoid are exactly the same as those taken against cholera. Dr. J. Alexander Miller, one of the visiting physicians, has been attending the man since he was taken to Bellevue. The bacteriological examination was made by Dr. Norris, the pathologist here, and by several physicians of the Health Department in the research laboratories at the William Parker Hospital. It takes several hours for the germs to develop in the culture medium, so that we were not sure until this morning that the case really was cholera."

Bermudez said that his ship left Liverpool and touched the Azores and ports in the West Indies. No cases of cholera have come from any of these places so far. Bermudez has been in the city for three weeks, so it seems more probable that he got the disease here. It used to be thought that the period of incubation of cholera was from five to seven days, but some cases have been developed in the recent epidemic as late as fourteen days after the exposure. So possibly Bermudez got the disease at sea after all.

Bermudez was slightly improved yesterday, but his condition is serious. Dr. Hubbard, chief of the bureau of contagious diseases of the Department of Health, saw Bermudez at Bellevue on Friday and again yesterday morning. When he learned that the man had cholera he ordered that the man be taken to 129 Roosevelt street, where Bermudez had lodged last. Doctors from the Health Department made an effort also to find all the places where Bermudez had been since his illness, and they will be disinfecting Dr. De Vore, who is an assistant to Dr. Hubbard, said that there was practically no danger of the disease being spread.

SLOOP'S CABIN BLOWS UP.

It Was Full of Gasoline Vapor and a Match Touched It Off.

Following an explosion on the auxiliary sloop King in the Passaic River opposite Hoboken, Newark, late on Friday night, Matthew Ackerman, 30 years old, of 55 Joseph street, ran into the cabin and rescued Patrick Ryan, 30 years old, of 9 Lister avenue. The boat was burned to the water line. Ryan and Ackerman were seized about the head, face and arms and were removed to St. James' Hospital in a police ambulance. It is feared that Ryan inhaled fumes.

READY FOR BAY STATE WAR.

Massachusetts Militia Will Begin Work Today Preparing for Conflict.

BOSTON, July 22.—War between the Red and Blue armies composed of the Massachusetts National Guard is scheduled to start in Essex county some time on Monday morning, and this has been a busy day for the officers and men, all of whom, excepting those of the Naval Brigade and the Coast Artillery Corps, will be in camp by Sunday night.

Some of the troops already have begun to move to the front either to serve as a part of the Red army, which theoretically is in possession of Boston and its defenses, or to join the Blue army which is to try to recapture Boston and drive away or take the foreign invaders.

The situation assumes that the commander in chief of the Red army, Major-General Dwight Eastman, in Boston, issued orders this afternoon for Brigadier-General William A. Peck, Jr., to move his Red force to a position near Sautaug Lake, Lynnfield, across the Newburyport Turnpike, in order to operate advantageously against the Blue army (United States force) theoretically which threatens to advance on Boston from its position between Lowell and Newburyport, south of the Merrimack River. Brigadier-General Clark, commanding the Blue force, at the same time will be busy concentrating his command for the attack.

NAVAL MILITIA MEN BACK.

They Did Good Work in the Play Battle in Long Island Sound.

The warships that have been playing at battle in Long Island Sound came into port yesterday, bringing the 900 naval militia men who have been receiving instruction in the art of warfare afloat and landing them at the foot of Fifty-second street, South Brooklyn, and West Ninety-sixth street, this borough in the city. The Blue and Red armies, composed of bluejackets in the Brooklyn contingent. The squadron that anchored in the bay was made up of the battleships Connecticut, Missouri, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Ohio, and Maine, and the armored cruiser Washington.

Rear Admiral Aaron Ward said the naval militia men had made a fine impression on the shore, and that they had increased their popularity among the real bluejackets.

HANNAH REINER FOUND DEAD

APPARENTLY DROWNED WHILE OUT ROWING TUESDAY.

No signs of violence—Body was floating near the shore at Throg's Neck—She Was Used to Boating, but Could Not Swim—Oars and a Rowlock Gone.

The body of Hannah Reiner of 1633 Bathgate avenue, The Bronx, for whom search has been made since Wednesday, was found yesterday afternoon on the beach at Throg's Neck. The police and coroner are convinced that the young woman fell out of the boat in which she was rowing and that her death was an accident.

Miss Reiner was 22 years old and a dreamer. She was fond of rowing, and for some years had made a practice of going out alone in a rowboat once or twice a week, usually taking a book along. On Tuesday afternoon she went on one of these accustomed boat rides, renting the boat from Grosse's boathouse in Pelham Bay Park, near the athletic field. Also in accordance with her custom she left her handbag at the boathouse. This contained $1.35 and some letters from girl friends.

Miss Reiner took the boat out at 3:45 P. M. that day. At 4:45 P. M. Wednesday the boat was picked up on the shore a mile and a half from the boathouse. A copy of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," which Miss Reiner had had with her, lay in the bottom of the boat and hadn't been wet. The oars were missing.

The young woman's family meanwhile had become alarmed over her failure to come home Tuesday night. When a brother, Samuel Reiner, went to the boathouse where he knew his sister usually got her boats for these trips word already had been received of the finding of the boat. She had left her name and address on the boathouse in lieu of a deposit, as she was known to the man in charge. The brother had an alarm sent out for the young woman and the bay was searched by the crew of two police boats by the crew of the cutterhouse, the sailing station and by many of the 2,000 campers in the vicinity.

At 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Herman Michaels of 1920 Mulford avenue, The Bronx, saw the body floating near the shore while he was fishing from a boat off the foot of Phillips avenue. Throg's Neck. Michaels is a lonely section of the bay and boats seldom pass there. He dragged the body up on the shore and later it was taken to the Fordham morgue, where Samuel Reiner identified the body. The sister had been pinned up around the bottom to prevent them from being soiled. The clothing was torn and the body showed no bruises or marks. A plain gold ring was still on one of the fingers.

Coroner's Physician Riegelman examined the body at the morgue and decided it was a case of drowning. The result of an accident. The police have a theory that the boat may have grounded on the rocks between Belden Point at the end of C. Island and the shore from which Miss Reiner set out and that the young woman may have fallen overboard while trying to get it off the rocks. These rocks are covered a part of the time by seaweed and were so slippery that Miss Reiner was accustomed to boats but could not swim. The loss of the oars, the police say is not difficult to explain as boat owners in the section often complain of the loss of their oars. The sister also has her own oars overboard when Miss Reiner fell.

STOPPED PAYING ALIMONY

Harry C. Lewis, who says he is the chief accountant in this city of the Casualty Company of America, was arrested yesterday at the instance of the authorities of the District of Columbia, where he is under indictment for non-payment of alimony to his divorced wife and the non-support of his two sons, aged 10 and 5 years. Lewis's version is that he wanted to bring the order by to this city to be executed, but his wife not only refused but won't let him have anything to do with either boy. He says the children are kept in undesirable surroundings and that when the mother refused to let him improve their condition he stopped paying alimony.
