

REPUBLIC WILL WIN DR. HILL BELIEVES

Pastor of Metropolitan Temple Back Here From China and Japan.

MESSAGE FROM WU TO TAFT

Can't Tell Contents—Wu Gives His Republicans Six Months to Win In.

The Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill, pastor of the Metropolitan Temple, is back from China with first-hand news of the revolution and hearing a message from Dr. Wu Ting-fang to President Taft.

Dr. Hill's first business in the Far East was to organize a branch of the International Peace Forum, of which Mr. Taft is the honorary president and of which Dr. Hill is the international president.

After getting the branch launched in Tokio, Dr. Hill went to Shanghai, where he saw the revolution in full swing and where he had several talks with Dr. Wu, the republic's Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Dr. Hill returned to Shanghai on September 1, said Dr. Hill yesterday. "The international peace forum was desirous of starting a branch in Japan and the Japanese were eager to cooperate because the forum has a department for industrial peace, a department which seeks to settle questions between capital and labor."

"I left here on September 1," said Dr. Hill yesterday. "The international peace forum was desirous of starting a branch in Japan and the Japanese were eager to cooperate because the forum has a department for industrial peace, a department which seeks to settle questions between capital and labor."

"Well informed and intelligent people of both countries know very well how peaceful and friendly a relation exists between the United States and Japan, but in both countries there are many who might be misled in their judgment by false representations, and in removing whatever misrepresentations there may be I have no doubt that the forum and its work will be found efficient, and I hope that the amicable relations already existing between the two countries may not only be maintained but be considerably enhanced by its efforts."

I went to Shanghai about November 16, and Dr. Hill was there during the fighting with excitement. The revolutionists had just captured Shanghai and the people were tremendously elated. I saw 20,000 quines out in one day. The quine, you know, is the badge of serenity thrust on the Chinese by the Manchurian dynasty. The money of the new republic was everywhere eagerly received.

When I called on Dr. Wu Ting-fang he told me that rich Chinese had put as much as $10,000 for a single $10 military bank note. They wanted to manifest in that way their enthusiasm and their confidence in the public, as well as to contribute largely to the expenses of the revolution. Dr. Wu gave me as souvenirs several bank notes, among them a five dollar note, which he displayed a greenback of the Chinese Republic. It is a "military note" for $10, printed on plain white paper, with a red seal in the center, and other marks in Chinese. The face was engraved in a light brown and blue color. "The Republic of China Military Bank Note," it reads in Chinese characters.

I found Dr. Wu firm in the belief that a republic is the only possible salvation for China. He is certain that the Manchus cannot put up a fight for more than six months, and that the revolution will be the end of all monarchial rule for China. In Shanghai Wu Shin Kai is considered a weather vane. His great abilities are recognized in the first days of the great revolution, or America when the colonies rose against George III.

Dr. Hill returned to Tokio about the middle of December and had an audience with the Emperor. He found the ruler of Japan to be a quiet, slow spoken man, but obviously intelligent and alert. He was much interested in Dr. Hill's impressions of the revolution and had some opinions Dr. Hill had formed as to the permanency of the republic.

Government Will Try to Show Conditions Described by Miles Continued in 1907.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—When the name "W. D. Miles" was called in the United States District Court here today in the packers' trial ten men, everyone reputed worth millions and all under indictment, grumped their chairs and hastily moved toward the witness stand to hear what the former packers' manager was to unfold.

He followed Henry Veeder, former secretary of the old pool, which the Government maintains was the origin of the alleged price fixing combine in fresh meat.

Until the moment Miles took the stand Attorney Pierce Butler conducted the examination of the witnesses for the Government. Miles, however, he turned over to Special Assistant District Attorney James Sheehan.

Mr. Sheehan lost no time in getting to business. He tried to obtain from the witness anything he might know about the packers' trade in the East.

SOME VIOLENCE YESTERDAY

Hand Laundrymen Say They're Victims of a Quarrel in No Way Their Own.

The laundries in Brooklyn and Jersey City, according to the leaders of the laundry workers' strike yesterday, will not wash the linen that the New York strikers refuse to handle and will be tied up this morning.

William Armour, president of Laundry Workers' Union 120, said last evening that Local 34 at 137, the latter controlling Brooklyn, will have all their members on strike by this afternoon, which will mean an ironed shirt famine in Brooklyn and as much of Jersey City as these unions can control, as well as in the Manhattan laundries not affected by the strike yesterday.

THE STRIKE AFFECTS HAND AS WELL AS STEAM LAUNDRIES, he said, "as the demands have been made apply to both. Probably 20,000 laundry workers are at present idle directly and indirectly through the strike. That number will be largely increased to-morrow. The people coming out as fast as our committees reach them and in some cases quit without waiting for our committees. We believe our demands are fair and will have a conference with representatives of the Steam Laundrymen's Association to-morrow forenoon."
