Capture Several Towns and Imprison Soldiers—Revolt Gains Headway.

END OF MARTIAL LAW

New Cabinet Abolishes Military Rule in Constantinople to Quiet People.

Constantinople, July 24.—Reports reaching here tell of the defeat of the Turkish troops near Djakova in Albania and the routing of the garrisons of Djakova and...

The general success of the Albanian revolution creates the belief that the situation in Turkey is desperate.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 24.—The rebellious Albanians have attacked and captured Pristina, in the village of Kossovo. The Turkish garrison surrendered. It is also reported that the Albanians have captured Prizrend and are threatening Uskub. The Albanians have captured or attempted to capture these places before, but the Turks eventually got them back either by fighting or placating the Albanians.

The cabinet decided to-day after an all night session to seek to avoid another revolution by abolishing the martial law under which the city has lived for three years.

Moukhtar Pasha announced to-day that he does not want to defy the army, but that the Sultan named him Premier and intends to remain Premier as long as the Sultan wants him instead of retiring in Kiamil Pasha's favor, as the soldiers demand.

Kiamil says he does not want the post, preferring to remain Minister of Foreign Affairs. It is uncertain how the army will take the Premier's announcement.

The cabinet has entrusted a commission under Reichid to proceed to Albania to negotiate with the rebellious tribesmen. Military operations against the Albanians were suspended yesterday.

The Minister of Justice has announced that the Government does not intend to dissolve the Chamber of Deputies, but instead intends to repeal all the illegal measures of the previous Government. Among these are the law against public meetings and the press. The fullest freedom of speech also may be granted. It is said the meeting of the Chamber will be postponed until the Government has drawn a definite programme.

The commandant of Constantinople and the commandant-general of the gendarmerie have been dismissed. These were objections to the general public.

LONDON, July 24.—Additional police guards were detailed to-day to protect the cabinet Ministers, their families and homes against suffragettes. It is believed that Scotland Yard has been warned that an unprecedented vigorous protest for women's suffrage is planned.

Though Dr. Ethel Smyth, the musical composer arrested yesterday, says she has a perfect alibi the authorities stick to their charge that she was concerned in the attempt on July 13 to burn Colonial Secretary Harcourt's home at Oxford and will push the case in the police court on Friday. Dr. Smyth is out on $5,000 bail.

SINGLE TAX WORRIES ENGLAND.

Report Lloyd George Will Agitate It Arouses Nation.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, July 24.—Rumors that a Government land policy and a Lloyd George campaign, which it is supposed will aim at a single tax something on the lines of the late Henry George in New York years ago, are agitating politicians, land owners, financiers and others.

This agitation is based to a considerable extent on the statement printed in the London Times this morning to the effect that Lloyd George was likely to resign from the cabinet and lead a great campaign for land reform.

Nobody knows the exact lines of the Government's policy, which as yet has not been framed definitely.

Viscount Haldane, the Secretary of War, in reply to a question in the House of Lords to-night, said the Government plan was not likely to include the single tax scheme.

The Liberals declare the rumor that Lloyd George is to resign from the cabinet to conduct such a campaign is an absurd canard.

A CORRECTION.

Miss Rosenbaum Wrongly Named in Article Regarding Sharpers.

An article in THE SUN of June 26 told how an attempt was made to swindle Henry C. E. Stengel, a leather manufacturer of Newark, who with Mrs. Stengel was a Titanic survivor. According to the story alleged to have been told by Mr. Stengel, a man who was also a Titanic survivor became acquainted with him on the Carpathia and later, in New York, tried to make him a victim of the time honored swindling scheme. In this article reference was unfortunately made to Miss Edith Rosenbaum, also a survivor. The article was sent to THE SUN by its Newark correspondent after its publication in Newark and was printed in THE SUN in good faith as a matter of current news. It gives us pleasure to state after careful inquiry that Miss Rosenbaum's name should not have been mentioned in connection with the article in any way, and any unfavorable inference as to her which might be drawn from the article was an unfortunate error. The SUN regrets that Miss Rosenbaum and her many friends have been subjected to any embarrassment or annoyance in the matter and gladly disclaims any imputation upon her conduct or character.

STRAUS BEGS ITALY AND TURKEY TO ARBITRATE

Mohammedan Countries Must Be Shown That Peace Is for All.

NATIONAL RIGHTS SACRED

Fourth Birthday of Turkish Constitution Celebrated at the Hotel Astor.

Sixty Turks and Americans interested in the politics of the Ottoman Empire met in the Hotel Astor last night to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the adoption of constitutional government in Turkey.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, July 24.—Oscar S. Straus, ex-Ambassador to Turkey; Youssouf Zia Pasha, the Ottoman Ambassador to the United States; ex-Congressman W. S. Bennett, Dr. Talcott Williams and Djelal Bey, Turkish Consul-General, were in the company.

Oscar Straus said that both Turkey and Italy ought to submit the Tripoli trouble to international arbitration.

"I hope the day is near," he said, "when Italy, which has violated the noble precedents of international peace, will see her way clear to come before the tribunal of nations and lay her claims to the colonization of Tripoli before an impartial court, so that the Mohammedan nations of the world may know that international rights are as sacred when they pertain to them as when they affect Christian nations."

Unless this is done we force the Mohammedans to the belief that they cannot expect justice from enlightened Christian nations."

Mr. Straus said that the relations between the United States and Turkey had already been friendly. In fact, we were the first nation to make a treaty with a Mohammedan nation, he said.

He added that he had seen both the old and the new regime in Turkey, and he referred to the benefits that sprang from the new system of government.

"I was the only foreign Ambassador who saw any hope in the new republic," he said. "No one of them believed that we would ever be here to-day celebrating the fourth anniversary of that event."

"I know of no country where the transition from tyranny to liberty was accomplished without wading through blood. As friends of Turkey and sympathizers with her in her movement toward progress we Americans are interested to see that the good she has done will not be lost. It has been with deep regret we have witnessed the event which may obliterate these good achievements."

Consul-General Djelal Bey offered a toast to the President of the United States to which there was a warm response. The Turkish Ambassador spoke in response to a toast to the Sultan and the Constitution. The other speakers were Admiral Colby M. Chester, Ambassador Youssouf Zia Pasha and Dr. Williams. Vahan Cardashian, a Turkish historian, was toastmaster.

MARSHALL GUEST OF KING.

Ambassador's Invitation Significant Regarding Naval Debate?

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, July 24.—The fact that King George gave an audience to Premier Asquith and the British ambassadors at Berlin and Paris and a luncheon to Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, the new German Ambassador at London, while one of the German attaches was on his way to Berlin calls attention to the disposition to connect Winston Churchill's speech about the naval increase and the reply to Germany's programme to the debate over the navy which will be resumed in the House of Commons to-morrow.

Mr. Asquith then is expected to make an important statement on imperial defense and the advanced radicals intend to arraign British diplomacy in Europe in connection with armaments.

STOP PLAN TO BREAK CASINOS.

French Authorities Expel Americans Who Had Novel Programme.

PARIS, July 24.—Two Americans who had planned ingeniously to "break the banks" at various watering places have been expelled from France.

Walter Thornton Lewis of Shelbyville, Ill., and Frederick M. Sibley of Peoria, Ill., are the two men who have been found guilty of having dishonest intentions against a great industry.

The Ministry of the Interior issued a decree of expulsion after learning the details of the Americans' plans.

Lewis and Sibley, who were arraigned to-day, are accused of having induced employees of a firm that makes most of the roulette apparatus for the resorts outside of Monte Carlo to give them possession of the wheels for a time before their delivery.

The Ministry declares, for the purpose of "fixing" the wheels, that the police testified that they found in Sibley's apartments a wheel so "modified" that the ball always fell on certain numbers in a certain order.

The Americans proposed, according to the official reproduction of their plans, to "fix" enough wheels to enable them to make a round of all the principal casinos. Knowing beforehand how a wheel at Dinard, for example, would behave, they meant to play it heavily until the bank was broken.

KNOX TAKES UP FALL'S CHARGE.

State Department Believes Mexico Acts in Good Faith.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Secretary of State Knox, who returned to his office to-day from a trip to his summer home at Valley Forge, Penn., at once took up the matter of the sensational attack on the State Department and the Mexican Government made by Senator Fall of New Mexico on Monday.

Mr. Knox declined to discuss the attack, but will probably draft an answer to the charges, which will be issued within a few days. Whether the reply will be given publicity through the press or sent to the Senate has not been determined.

State Department officials confirm a statement issued by the Mexican Foreign Minister, in which he says that the Mexican Government has adjudicated a number of the claims of American citizens growing out of firing across the border at El Paso, Tex., and Douglas, Ariz. A large number of claims have been laid before the State Department, amounting to several hundred thousand dollars.

In such instances, it was stated, the claims were referred to the Mexican Government, whose people did the shooting. The department, it is said, has not assumed the responsibility of rejecting the claim of any one.

PEACE WITH MUSICIANS.

Yesterday afternoon, more than forty conductors of theatre orchestras had a three hours conference with Abraham Erlanger, representing the theatre managers. A committee of stage employees also had a conference with the musicians.

No one would tell just what had been accomplished, but all agreed that the atmosphere was clearing.

LAWYER SHOT DEAD IN OFFICE BY LITIGANT

Machinist Kills Joseph Fetterch in Latter's Rooms Overlooking Park Row.

YOUNG CLERK WOUNDED

Assassin Hit by Bullet in Struggle Which Follows—Two in Hospital.

Joseph Fetterch, a lawyer in this city for forty years, senior partner in the firm of Fetterch & Seybel, a school trustee in the old Nineteenth ward, and a figure in the Methodist Episcopal Church, was shot yesterday in his office on the ninth floor of the old Times Building, at the prow of Nassau street and Park row.

His assailant was Joseph Conroy, a machinist, who fancied he had been ill used in a lawsuit wherein Fetterch was referee. Fetterch was wounded in the abdomen and he died an hour later in the Volunteer Hospital.

Running toward Fetterch's door when he heard the shot, Norman Bergh, a young clerk in the law office, was struck by a second bullet from Conroy's revolver. The bullet was deflected by a silver monogram on Bergh's wallet in a hip pocket and made only a slight flesh wound in the upper part of his right leg.

The pain and the sight of the assassin's pistol did not deter Bergh from rushing in at Conroy with club and knife.

In the tussle a third cartridge exploded and the bullet furrowed Conroy's hip.

Conroy is in the Volunteer Hospital, where yesterday afternoon he was relieving his agitation by looking at the comic supplement of a newspaper. He will be well enough for arraignment in two or three days.

Bergh, who may have saved other lives, was dazed by a bullet from a policeman because Conroy said that Bergh had shot him. He was paroled in the care of his counsel, former Judge Edward S. Clinch.

Conroy lives at No. 124 First place, Brooklyn, with his parents, who are elderly and crippled. Years ago the family, including the parents, Joseph Conroy and his sister, Mrs. Lily Bergenson, agreed to pool their earnings for mutual benefit. Three years ago Mrs. Conroy, the mother, sued the rest of the family for an apportionment of the estate. In his decision as referee Mr. Fetterch ruled that upon the death of their parents Joseph Conroy and his sister should share and share alike.

The referee's finding irritated the machinist. For months he has been visiting Fetterch, and saying that since the fund of the Conroy family was made up mostly of his own earnings his ultimate share should be larger than his sister's. He was further disturbed because the cost of the referee's hearings were charged to him, and because he was being sued in the Municipal Court for the services of the stenographer.

On Tuesday Conroy tried to see Fetterch at the lawyer's office in Gloucester Mass., with his wife and two daughters. At about 9:30 yesterday morning he called again. Fetterch had not arrived yet. Conroy said he would wait in the hall outside.

In a few moments Fetterch walked briskly in. Conroy, a tall, flushed man, with head gray where it is not bald and wearing a paper collar, followed him. He was for going right into Fetterch's private office in the Nassau street corner of the building. Norman Bergh, the clerk, stopped him and demanded to know his name and business.

"Oh, you know who I am," said Conroy. "Mr. Fetterch is in now and I'm going to see him."

He brushed by Bergh and Frank L. Brooks, head bookkeeper, and pushed open the door of Fetterch's room. The lawyer had just seated himself at his desk.

Those in the outer office, among them two women stenographers, heard Conroy say, "You needn't get up," followed by a rush of loud words.

But Fetterch got out of his chair and was advancing toward Conroy when the clerk threw away his cigar and stepped forward to stop him. The bullet entered the right side of Fetterch's abdomen, but he did not collapse then. He ran at Conroy with both hands pressed against the shooter's chest, pushed him into the outer office.

It was then that young Bergh went running across the room with upraised club. The Conroy family was equally divided between the son and daughter. The revolver went off again and wounded Conroy. Still he fought. From another chamber came Frank J. McCoy, another man who had followed Conroy. He too clutched Conroy, yelling, "Somebody take the revolver." In the scramble Conroy got many bruises, some of them on his face. Bergh and McCoy, who were armed with clubs, were also wounded.

With Conroy finally in hand Bergh raced down to Park row and brought back Patrolman O'Reilly. The policeman was poised, but Conroy said, "Don't hit me. I'll be quiet. There's lots to be said on both sides of this case."

Meanwhile Fetterch had staggered back into his office. When a surgeon arrived from the Volunteer Hospital he was in his chair with his head resting in his hands on the desk. In a few moments of consciousness at the hospital he identified Conroy as the man who had shot him. His son, Charles S. Fetterch, a law partner of Judge Clinch on the ninth floor of the same building, was a member and sometimes a surrogate of Westchester county, died in 1910. In 1887 Fetterch was a candidate for Judge of the City Court. He was a member and sometimes a surrogate of St. Paul's Methodist Church in West End avenue. He lived at 335 West Eighty-eighth street. He was a member of the Union League Club, the Hardware Club and the Bar Association.

His wife, his son, Charles S. Fetterch, and four daughters—Mrs. Edith Marsh of Arlington, Mass.; Mrs. Arthur Knight of Malden, N. Y., and the Misses Emma and Grace Fetterch—survive.
