

HOME RULE RIOT IN PARLIAMENT

Disorder Follows Asquith's Motion to Rescind Monday's Vote.

ADJOURNMENT CALLED

Ministers Leave Commons Amid Shower of Paper Cones and Balls.

CHURCHILL HIT BY BOOK

White With Rage He Starts Af- ter Assailant—Friends Intervene.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, Nov. 13.—Serious disorder was occasioned in the House of Commons to-day when Premier Asquith's resolution to rescind the decision of the House on Monday in adopting a hostile amendment to the Irish home rule bill was brought up for discussion. To restore order was an utter impossibility and as a consequence the session was adjourned until to-morrow.

Before Mr. Asquith moved his resolution to rescind the amendment proposed by Sir Frederick Banbury, a Unionist, and passed by the Opposition on Monday by a "snap" division, Bonar Law, the Unionist leader in the House, asked whether there was a precedent for such a resolution. The Speaker in reply said that he had searched the records and had found no precedent for rescinding a decision of the House reached during the passage of a bill. However, the resolution of the paper was in order, but without precedent.

Premier Asquith then rose to move his resolution. He admitted that the amendment which he wanted rescinded was of a vital and far reaching character, and if allowed to stand the Government would be unable to proceed further with the home rule bill. Premier then moved the resolution, which is to the effect "that the decision of the House on the amendment moved by Sir Frederick Banbury, whereby it was proposed to insert certain words in the government of Ireland (money) resolution be rescinded, notwithstanding anything in any standing order in this House."

Immediately Bonar Law moved the adjournment of the House and the motion for the adjournment was put to a vote and defeated by 327 to 218, this indicating that the Liberal coalition was present in full force.

The chamber was in a continuous uproar after the two party leaders had spoken and the Speaker suspended Sir William Bull of the Unionist side for yelling "traitor" at Premier Asquith. Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney-General, attempting to carry on the discussion met with such disorder that his words were inaudible and the Speaker was forced to suspend the sitting for an hour.

When the House reassembled Sir Rufus again attempted to speak and was again met with abuse and shouted down, while the Speaker vainly appealed to the Opposition to allow the debate to proceed. In the ensuing din Sir Edward Carson of Belfast and "solemn covenant" fame cried out: "There will be no more business ever in this House."

The Speaker eventually rose and said it was quite obvious that the Opposition was determined not to allow discussion. "Therefore," he said, "I am compelled to say that a state of grave disorder has arisen, and under the standing orders I must adjourn the House until to-morrow."

As the Government Ministers left the Opposition swarmed across the chamber floor, shouting taunts and some throwing paper cones and balls at them. The Liberals gathered around Premier Asquith to protect him, as they feared violence. Fierce imprecations were exchanged by individuals and the Liberals, the eyes of many on both sides blazing with passion as they screamed at one another. It was a scene worthy of the Hungarian Parliament.

Suddenly an unknown Unionist snatched from a table a small yellow bound volume of Parliamentary procedure from which the Speaker had quoted. The Unionist hurled the volume and it struck Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, on the left cheek. The First Lord winced mechanically, but instantly faced about, pale with anger, and his flashing eyes swept the ranks of the taunters to see who threw the book. He then made a hasty dash forward as if to attack his assailant.

John William Gulland and Sir Maurice Levy, both Government supporters, who were nearest to Mr. Churchill, laid hold of the Minister, and other Liberals joined them, attempting to persuade the First Lord from going further. Mr. Churchill yielded. He smiled, evidently having quickly realized how the dignity of his position would suffer by scrapping like a schoolboy with an ill mannered assailant, and he passed out of the lobby.

The evidence in connection with the assault, including the small book, was collected by the officials of the House some time after the incident and it will be submitted to the Speaker, who is not likely to treat the offender lightly. John Edmonds and Matthew Keating, both Irish Nationalists, who were near the scene, say that the man who threw the book was Ronald McNeill, a member of the Opposition.

They believe that he aimed at Mr. Churchill and not at random. The First Lord was merely stung, the book being too small to injure him.

There is every indication that the storm will burst again to-morrow. About the whole body of the Unionists approve to-day's demonstrations and say that Premier Asquith acted arbitrarily in departing from the recognized forms of procedure; therefore they are justified in preventing the continuance of Parliamentary business under the present conditions. They declare that Mr. Asquith's motion imperils the very existence of Parliament.

The Government is fully aware of the content of the Opposition and its determination, but up to the present the Ministers are resolved to put Premier Asquith's motion again to-morrow and face the storm. It is probable, however, that Mr. Asquith will confer with his colleagues in the forenoon to-morrow and they may decide upon another course.

The Liberals say that two remedies can be applied: The Speaker can suspend all the disturbers, or the Government may apply the "closure" immediately the debate is made impossible and carry resolutions by mechanical majorities without discussion.

MARQUARD SUEW FOR $25,000.

Joe Kane Says Rube Stole Blossom Seely's Affections.
Joe Kane, the husband and former manager of Blossom Seely, vaudeville partner of Rube Marquard, who has been on the trail of the pair in Atlantic City, the Hotel Endicott and elsewhere in the last few days, brought suit in the Supreme Court yesterday under his real name, Joseph Cahen, to recover $25,000 from Marquard for alienating Mrs. Blossom Seely Cahen's affections.

In his complaint Kane alleges that his wife met Marquard to induce him to go into vaudeville with her, and alleged that Marquard then started out to persuade her that Kane wasn't good enough for her.

Kane said that Marquard harbored his wife.

WOMAN DIES IN AUTO FALL, MAN HELD FOR ROBBING HER

Rosenthal Loses Control of Car and It Backs Over 150 Foot Drop.

Mrs. Ruth Frich Reid, 27 years old, of 276 Clifton avenue, Brooklyn, was killed last night in an automobile wreck on Snake Hill, a continuation of Highland Boulevard, East New York. Three young men in the machine escaped serious injury. One of them ran away and the other two were arrested, charged with homicide and later one was held for grand larceny in connection with the disappearance of a chamois bag containing $5,000 worth of jewelry from the dead woman's person.

Mrs. Reid's husband, Andrew Reid, is said to be a well to do wholesale confectioner. The automobile was owned and driven by Michael Rosenthal, a young man, who says he lives at 79 Grand street, Brooklyn, but refuses to say anything more about himself. His companion is James Burke of 1143 Hancock street, Brooklyn.

Rosenthal had had the machine about two weeks. Last night he picked up Burke at Broadway and Halsey street and later Mrs. Reid got into the car downtown in Brooklyn. There was a third man in the party whose name the police do not know.

The party went out Highland Boulevard in the direction of Cypress Hills. When Rosenthal got to Snake Hill, the scene of many automobile accidents, he became nervous. Half way up the hill, where the road cuts a letter "S," he decided to turn about.

He reversed and the car backed over the edge of the road and began a long descent, half rolling, half falling over the precipitous and broken slope that fell off at that point. It was a drop of about one hundred and fifty feet.

The wrecked car stood on its side and pinned under one corner was Mrs. Reid's body. Her back had been broken against a rock. Rorke had a cut lip and Rosenthal was not hurt.

The first known of the accident was when some one, supposedly the third man of the party, called the home of Mrs. Reid's parents, the Frichs, on West Seventh street, Coney Island, and told of the accident. Two sisters of Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Susan Ward and Miss Mabel Frich, and the latter's fiancé went to East New York in a machine.

The police had already heard of the accident and had removed the woman's body to the station. Mrs. Reid's sisters asked concerning jewelry, which they knew Mrs. Reid wore. They said she had $6,000 worth. On the dead woman's fingers were two diamond rings and in her ears diamond pendants. A chamois bag containing more jewels could not be found.

The police then searched the two men. They say that on Rosenthal they found a chamois bag that held $5,000 worth of diamond jewelry. Rosenthal was then charged with grand larceny. He and Rorke had already been booked for homicide.

CHINESE CABINET CRISIS.

Entire Provisional Government Threatened on Mongolian Situation.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Peking correspondent of the Daily Telegraph states that a serious Chinese Cabinet crisis, threatening the whole provisional Government, has been produced by the anti-Russian commotion over Mongolia. All the political parties have held a meeting, sunk their differences, and have decided to form a vast and united Republican party, which will be determined at all costs to protect the integrity of the republic, if necessary by arms.

The present ministry was hotly denounced and assailed on all sides yesterday and resigned. The upshot is still uncertain and Yuan Shih-k'ai is greatly worried.

An unending stream of telegrams has been arriving calling for action. The army is especially excited, demands that the Government cease trifling and to despatch large forces to northern Mongolia.

The correspondent concludes by saying that sensational developments are certain.

WILL SAY WEBBER SHOT ROSENTHAL

Gunmen to Charge Him and Vallon With Actual Killing.

ACCUSED MEN DECOYS

Counsel Indicates Dago Frank Was Not Even on Scene.

CASE AGAINST FOUR IN

Rose's Story of Hiring Them to Murder Gambler Is Not Shaken.

The main points of the defence that will be begun this morning on behalf of Gyp the Blood, Whitey Lewis, Lefty Louie and Dago Frank, the four Zelig gangsters now on trial before Justice Goff for the actual killing of Herman Rosenthal, were outlined by Charles G. F. Wahle, their chief counsel, in his opening address to the jury last night upon the completion of the prosecution's case against the gunmen at 6:15 o'clock.

The defence, as outlined in Mr. Wahle's opening address, will be that Rose, Webber, Schepps and Vallon charged in front of the Metropole upon Rosenthal, firing as they ran toward him; that Webber and Vallon did the actual killing of the gambler; that Gyp the Blood, Whitey Lewis and Lefty Louie had been decoyed by Rose specifically to within a few feet of the Metropole entrance while the shooting was going on, so that Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps could later try to fasten the killing upon the four Zelig gangsters; that Dago Frank was in an elevated train far to the north of Forty-third street on his way home at the time Rosenthal was killed, and that the four gangsters, not only terrified but completely taken by surprise when Webber, Vallon, Rose and Schepps began to fire at Rosenthal a few feet away, turned and fled to the subway station in Times Square as soon as the shooting began.

Gunmen to Take Stand.
Mr. Wahle in his opening address last night also explained in a general way why Gyp, Lefty, Whitey and Dago Frank disappeared for a long time after the shooting. And to-day the gunmen, so Mr. Wahle said, will take the stand in turn, with Whitey Lewis probably the first to be called, and tell their stories to prove the story outlined by their counsel.

Mr. Wahle opened for the defence after an all day session in which the State's star witness, Jack Rose, was in the witness chair during all of the forenoon and the greater part of the afternoon session. Rose's direct testimony against the gunmen lasted only from 10:30 to 11:40 A. M., but Mr. Wahle then took the hairline gambler's hand for a cross-examination that lasted until 1:15 P. M., and after a recess then until 2:50 P. M. was continued until 4:10 o'clock in the afternoon.

Rose's story that he had hired the four defendants to kill Rosenthal remained unshaken. Giovanni Stanish, the Austrian gunman, who identified Whitey Lewis during the Becker trial, stood to establish that he had seen the gunmen in his house, and the State thereupon announced that its case against the gangsters was complete.

Mr. Wahle, in rising to make his opening address before an adjournment was taken for the night, spoke from 6:15 o'clock until a few minutes to 7 o'clock. He pleaded with the jurors to establish sentences for a more kindly feeling toward his clients than probably they had obtained from discussion and reading of the four gangsters.

"Bad, but Not Murderers."
"They're bad, without a doubt, each of them," cried Mr. Wahle, pointing to his clients, who throughout the day had recovered more than their usual gayety but now for the moment were silent and solemnly attentive. "They are wicked, without a doubt, each of them; but not one of them is of the kind that traffics in murder."

Here the gunmen's counsel briefly went into the respective lives of the four defendants and dwelt upon their youth, the good home and school training some of them, especially Lefty Louie, had had, and the confidential positions held at times by Lefty and Dago Frank. Later Gyp had become "a cheat, a pool shark and was convicted of stealing," said their defender. Whitey "has a record" and Dago Frank has a prison term against him in his past, Mr. Wahle admitted.

And the lawyer was about to proceed then that it could be proved that despite these bad marks they were not the kind who could be hired for murder when Justice Goff interrupted.

"All of this is improper," said the Justice a bit impatiently. "These things cannot be proved here. These defendants are on trial for the crime of murder."

LIVES WITH BROKEN NECK.

Harry Brown's Second Vertebra Was Broken a Month Ago.

Harry Brown, 16 years old, of 27 Halsey street, after a month's treatment at the City Hospital in Newark, N. J., for a broken neck was able to leave last night. He was taken to the hospital October 18 last. Two X-ray examinations were found necessary to locate the exact point of fracture. At first it was believed that the sixth vertebra had been broken, but a later test revealed that it was the second, much higher in the neck.

This development led the doctors to place considerable hope in their efforts to save the boy, for the location of the fracture was such that it was not believed the spinal cord had been torn.

Young Brown was the victim of an automobile accident in Washington place.

BOMB THROWN FROM ELEVATED.

Lands in Greek's Store and Scatters the Contents.

Some one standing on the platform of a second avenue elevated train threw a bomb into a store run by S. A. Touris, a Greek, at 258 First avenue last night. The place was shut up and no one was in it, but great damage was done to a stock of cheeses, currants, raisins, wines and casks of olive oil.

The usual bomb crowd soon collected, but reserves from the East Twenty-second street station controlled the excitement.

Touris says he has no enemies of whom he knows.

HYDE TRIAL AFTER GUNMEN'S.

District Attorney Ready for Ex-City Chamberlain's Case.

District Attorney Whitman yesterday notified Justice Goff that he was ready to go on with the trial of former City Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde, who was indicted for bribery and receiving an unlawful fee. The trial will probably begin next Wednesday, when the gunmen are out of the way.

None of Hyde's attorneys were in court, but the District Attorney filed an affidavit of notification and Justice Goff granted the motion. Mr. Whitman then asked for a special panel of 100 talemens, which was granted.

YATES ILL FROM PIN SCRATCH.

Former Governor of Illinois Re- ported in Serious Condition.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 13.—Former Governor Richard Yates is seriously ill at his home here as the result of a pin scratch in his side.

The wound was lanced to-day for a third time.

MONEY PROBE AGAIN PUT OFF.

Pujo Committee Was to Have Re- sumed Next Week.

The investigation of the so-called "money trust," which was to have been resumed on November 20 by the Pujo committee, has been postponed to a later date, it was learned on reliable authority yesterday. The reason for the postponement, or the day on which the committee will begin sittings again, could not be ascertained, as none of the members could be located yesterday. The reply in each case was that they had left Washington, when the inquiry was made there.

The last session of the Pujo committee was held in this city on June 13. Adjournment was taken then since die because of other work requiring the attention of Congressman Pujo and his associates. At that time it was announced that future sessions would be held in Washington.

SHERIFF TO BE HIS BEST MAN.

Jersey Man, in Jail, Will Be Wedded Under Guard.

New BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 13.—Gilbert Buchannon, to be married to-morrow night and his "best man" will be Deputy Sheriff Edward Houghton.

Buchannon, who is a former life insurance agent, is in here charged with embezzlement and forgery. He was to have been married some days ago, but on the night before he was arrested.

Miss Ethel Brower, the fiancée of Buchannon, still has faith in his innocence and will wed him to-morrow night.

WILL MAKE PLEDGES GOOD.

Gov. Wilson Not Communicative About Extra Session.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 13.—Gov. Wilson said to-night:

"I am going through my mail as rapidly as possible. I find very few suggestions as to the extra session question or about the Cabinet. The letters are almost all of a congratulatory nature, with now and then a word about the Cabinet. Nobody seems to think it necessary to ask questions about the tariff or monopolies."

"Do you mean that people seem to take it for granted that your campaign pledges will be carried out?" was asked.

"My pledges certainly will be carried out so far as I am concerned," replied the Governor. Then he said:

"The tariff has been a subject of investigation for many years. I have studied it all my life."

To-morrow Gov. Wilson will review the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., which is to have a practice drill on the site of the battle of Princeton. Gov. Wilson has been invited to attend the Gridiron Club dinner in Washington on December 7 and declined because he will be on his vacation at the time.

UNITED FRUIT HAS ITS CHANCE.

Company May State Its Side Before Action Is Taken.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—It was learned to-day that while the Department of Justice investigation into the affairs of the United Fruit Company has practically been completed, the Attorney-General will give the officials of the company an opportunity to state their side before any definite action under the Sherman anti-trust law will be determined upon by the Government.

SERVIA YIELDS TO AUSTRIA; BIG EUROPEAN WAR AVERTED

RUSSIA IS MOBILIZING -DESPITE PEACE RUMORS

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 13.—

Despite reports that Austria and Serbia have reached an agreement, and that a general European war will be averted, there are persistent reports that Russia is mobilizing in the Kieff, Warsaw and Vilna districts. A traveller from Kieff to-day says that extensive military preparations are in progress there. Government officials profess to be hopeful of a peaceful solution of the Balkan problem.

Odessa reports that a despatch from Kishineff, eighty-five miles from the Black Sea port, states that active mobilization is proceeding on both sides of the Russo-Rumanian frontier. A similar despatch has been received in Odessa from Kieff in regard to the Russo-Austrian frontier.

A despatch from Geneva says that all the Austrian officers belonging to the army reserve living in Switzerland have received word from the Austrian War Department to report at Vienna on Monday. A special train for transport is in readiness.

England has also called to the reserve men in Canada to hold themselves in readiness for a summons to muster.

MAD DOG TEARS CHILD FATALLY; BITES MOTHER

Animal Waits Until Young Mas- ter, III, Is Alone and Attacks Him.

WOMAN TACKLES BRUTE

Battles to Save Children Though Wounded—Policemen End Fight.

In spite of his mother's heroic efforts to save him Harry Pecher, 11 years old, is dying in the Harlem Hospital, following an attack by his pet bulldog Boy yesterday morning.

Harry lives in the basement of a large flat building at 8 West 119th street, where his mother, Mrs. Mary Pecher, is the janitress. Mrs. Pecher is suffering from several bites on the body.

Harry has been ill for several weeks, and when his mother went out to buy some things for luncheon yesterday she took with her four-year-old Anthony, leaving Harry propped up in a chair, with the bulldog for company.

Mrs. Pecher had scarcely reached the street when she heard the barking of the dog and shrill cries of "Mamma, mamma!"

She ran back and found Harry screaming on the floor, with Boy savagely attacking the little fellow's face. As she ran in Harry cried: "Oh, mamma, take him away; take him away!"

As Mrs. Pecher went to the prostrate boy the dog released his hold on the boy's face and began to tear his arms. Attack after attack followed as the woman tried to save her child, but the dog would not be beaten off.

Mrs. Pecher then seized a broom and attacked the beast with it. Boy suddenly stopped tearing at Harry and sprang at Mrs. Pecher, and despite a heavy skirt and two petticoats the dog buried his teeth in her right thigh.

With the dog hanging at her waist Mrs. Pecher seized Harry with one arm and Anthony in the other and started for the hall. When she had the two children safely outside she went back for enough to get the dog's body inside. Then she closed the door on Boy's jaws, and under the pressure the dog let go and fell back into the room.

In the meantime Mrs. Pecher's screams had aroused the tenants in the building and had drawn the attention of Policeman McMahon of the East 126th street station, who was off duty and was passing the house.

McMahon blew his whistle and Policeman Callum of the Lenox avenue station came, closely followed by seven other policemen from the same station. A hurry call was sent in for an ambulance from the Harlem Hospital and in the meantime efforts were made to capture the dog.

The maddened animal could be seen from the street running about the different rooms in the basement and none of the policemen cared to risk an encounter with him. Accordingly they all opened fire on the dog, shooting through the glass of the windows, but failed to hit him.

Then the policemen pulled down one of the upper sashes and took closer aim. Thirty more shots were fired before McMahon and Callum hit the dog and wounded him. They then entered the basement and killed him.

Dr. Nott came with the ambulance from Harlem Hospital and removed Harry and his mother. The boy was found to have been bitten four times in the face, twelve times in the arms, and his right hip, thigh and leg were badly lacerated. Practically no hope is held out for his recovery.

Mrs. Pecher was bitten about the face, hands and hips, but after receiving medical attendance at the hospital she went home.

Little State Is to Get Outlet at Salonica and Possibly the Use of a Port on the Adriatic.

ALBANIA AN AUTONOMOUS PRINCIPALITY

Bulgaria Is Disposed to Accord Rumania's Wish, Granting Her Northeastern Corner of Ferdinand's Territory.

Special Cable Despatch from THE SUN Correspondent.

BUDAPEST, Nov. 13.—We have been making history in the last few days, and every effort has been exerted by the great Powers to insure peace. While I cannot send you the details, I am morally certain that the danger of a general European war, or hostilities that might lead to it, has been averted.

The danger of war between Austria and Serbia is practically eliminated. Serbia, whose demands for an Adriatic port and the partition of Albania will not be enforced by any Government, is preparing to yield to Austria, who is ready to allow her an outlet at Salonica and possibly the commercial use of an Adriatic port over the Bosnian railways.

Albania will become an autonomous principality under the nominal suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey.

Salonica will be internationalized.

The Servian army probably will abandon its march to Durazzo, on the Adriatic.

Bulgaria appears disposed to accord Rumania's unexpressed wish for Silistria and the territory enclosed by a straight line drawn from the Danube, north of Ruzhchuk, to the Black Sea, north of Starna. (Varna?)

I am steadfastly convinced that these solutions will be adopted.

The above cable despatch is from one of the best informed men on European politics, who frequently contributes to THE SUN, but who objects to his identity being disclosed.

FLIES OVER ADRIANOPLE.

Aviator Dropped Handbills Urging Besieged to Surrender.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
VIENNA, Nov. 13.—The correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse at Sofia telegraphs that he talked with the Russian aviator Efmoff, who was recently serving with the Bulgarians at Adrianople. He was instructed to fly over the city and to drop handbills printed in the Turkish language appealing to the populace to surrender.

The aviator flew to the correspondent: "My machine was very old and I had difficulty in riding. When I was 4,000 feet up I threw out the bills. At Fort Karasagh I saw a considerable number of infantrymen shooting upwards with rifles. I did not hear the shots, but when I noticed that four bullets had struck the apparatus I knew for whom the shots were meant. I flew on, but when the guns in the forts fired shriek and the apparatus had been struck several times the situation became critical."

"Every moment I feared I should have to descend, and I seized my revolver, intending at the moment of falling to shoot myself in order not to fall into the hands of the Turks. Fortunately, however, only the wings of the aeroplanes were hit, and not the motor. So I could keep on, and in twenty minutes I was once more safe at Mustapha Pasha, where the apparatus was repaired and used again."

HURLS ACID AT HER CHAUFFEUR

Fires at Him and Tries Suicide Be- cause He Jilted Her, She Says.

BUFFALO, Nov. 13.—After throwing acid in the face of her chauffeur, Arthur C. Ferris, 34 years old, Mrs. Anna Hill, 29 years old, a widow with two small children, fired a wild shot at the man and then turned the revolver on herself, inflicting a trifling wound in her right temple. The affair occurred as Ferris opened the door of his employer's motor car for her to enter.

Mrs. Hill was arrested and the man held as a witness.

Early this morning Mrs. Hill again attempted suicide. Evading the watchfulness of the matron at Police Headquarters she stole into the lavatory and turned on the gas. She was discovered unconscious, but quickly revived and will recover.

Ferris dodged most of the acid. His burns and Mrs. Hill's slight wound were dressed at the Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. Hill gave as the reason for her attack upon her chauffeur that he had broken his promise to marry her, having recently married a girl in Syracuse. Mrs. Hill lives with her father at 237 Rose street.

WILSON LEADS IN CALIFORNIA.

Now 47 Ahead, but Split Delegation Seems Probable.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13.—Thirty-six of the fifty-eight counties in California have officially reported the result of the Presidential election and Wilson now has a lead of forty-seven votes. This margin of course is based on the unofficial reports from the mining companies.

There are still five precincts in the State from which no returns have been received. They are in isolated districts off railway lines and poll a small number of votes.

Democrats here claim Wilson will get the State by 250. Another more conservative Democratic claim is that he will have 136 margin. The figures at the Capitol, however, give forty-seven as Wilson's lead. A split electoral delegation seems probable.

SEES AMICABLE SOLUTION.

Berlin "Tagblatt" Vienna Cor- respondent Also Predicts No War.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
BERLIN, Nov. 13.—The Vienna correspondent of the Tagblatt states to-day that an amicable solution of the dispute between Austria-Hungary and Serbia in regard to the latter's ambitions for a port on the Adriatic seems in sight.

Serbia, it is stated, is to renounce her claim to an Albanian harbor on the condition that she is granted special rights at two Montenegrin harbors with which her frontier will be directly linked. In addition to this Serbia is to get special commercial facilities at an Albanian harbor if the independence of Albania is proclaimed in the near future as a result of the European settlement of the present Balkan war.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Vienna claims the ability to give a more accurate summary than has been available hitherto of Austria's communication to Serbia on November 9 through the Austrian Minister at Belgrade, Saint Ugron d'Abrafanava. The correspondent asserts that it is the basis of diplomatic
