

STRINDBERG DRAMA VERY WELL ACTED

Nothing Happens, but Almost Every Minute Some One Says Something.

Two Plays at Matinee Pupely Intellectual Drama Under MacDowell Club Auspices.

The Stronger—At the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

It is due to the committee on drama of the MacDowell Club that two more plays by August Strindberg have been added to the number acted in this city.

The action of this interesting dialogue passes in a woman's restaurant. Both characters are actresses. One is married. Evidently the profession of the stage enforces in Sweden greater conventionalism on its members.

It became evident when she met her former friend in the coffee house alone on Christmas eve reading the newspapers that there had been some sort of a relation between this single woman and the present husband of the arrival who sat gazing while waiting for her cup of chocolate.

While all the arrangements for the wedding of Miss Edith Carolyn Roosevelt, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, to Dr. Richard Derby, of this city, have not been completed, some of the plans will be announced.

STULL, WHO PAINTED FAMOUS HORSES, DIES

Perfected His Artist's Gift by Study of Animal's Anatomy.

SOON GAINED A FORTUNE. Whitney, Lorillards, Belmont and Keene Were Among His Patrons.

Henry Stull, painter of thoroughbred horses, died yesterday at his home in New Rochelle after a long illness following an operation. He was 62 years old. He had painted practically all the great horses developed in this country, England and France in the past thirty-five years and in his field was regarded as an artist without a rival.

As a boy he came to New York from Hamilton, Ontario, his birthplace. He joined the staff of Leslie's Weekly in the days before the camera was used for newspaper illustrating and the experience that he got in making sketches rapidly for Leslie's stood him in good stead when he later became a painter of horses.

D. A. Buck, editor of the Spirit of the Times, saw the promise of Stull's work and engaged him to make pictures of famous horses for that magazine. Immediately men who were interested in breeding and racing realized that here was a young man who could paint the horse as he really is, whether standing still or tearing down the homestretch.

So many commissions came in that Stull gave up his job with the Spirit of the Times and went to work for the Times which he sold to owners. But first he took a two year course in a veterinary school in order to master the anatomy of the animal. It was this knowledge, combined with his love for horses and his artist's skill, that made him a great painter of horses and incidentally won him a fortune.

These are only a few of the men from whom Stull obtained commissions: August Belmont, Pierre and George Lorillard, the Rothschilds and Edmond Bellamy of Paris, James R. Keene, Col. William P. Thompson, William C. Whitney, Harry Payne Whitney, William O'Brien McDonald, for whom he painted Ormond, James B. Haagen, Stephen and John Sanford and Marcus Daly. His last work that Stull did was for Johnson Camden at Versailles, Ky., in October, 1912.

He was known at all important American race tracks and every year he went to England for the Derby and to France for the Grand Prix. The Connoisseurs and Jockey Club, of which he was a member, and several clubs have good collections of his paintings, most of them depicting the winners of the Suburban Handicap and other big races.

He is survived by his wife. A funeral service will be held at his late residence at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

DR. PRINCE A. MORROW.

Noted Authority on Leprosy Dies at Age of 66.

Dr. Prince A. Morrow, one of the foremost authorities on leprosy and skin diseases in general, died at his home, 66 West Fourth street, on Monday evening aged 66. He had been in poor health and had seen several patients in the afternoon.

For many years he had been a specialist in the treatment of leprosy. He had been a member of the New York Hospital from 1890 to 1904. He was a member of medical societies in this country and Europe.

Dr. Morrow was a prolific writer of medical literature and was president of the American Society for Sanitary and Moral Prophylaxis since its organization in 1905. He gave particular attention to the "social diseases" and first attracted general attention by a translation of a work by Fournier on disease and its relation to marriage. His own work, "Social Diseases and Marriage," published in 1904, was widely read.

Born in Mount Vernon, Christian county, Kentucky, Dr. Morrow received his preliminary degree from the New York University medical college in 1874. He was attending surgeon of the City Hospital in New York from 1884 to 1904 and was attending physician in the skin diseases department of the New York Hospital from 1890 to 1904.

Dr. Morrow is survived by a wife, who was Miss Lucie B. Slaughter; two sons, Dr. H. S. Morrow and Robert L. Morrow, and a daughter, Mrs. Frederick Seaman.
