calling the Stock Exchange men thieves and signed by George H. Kendall.

The signs were on canvas 4x12 feet and read:

"This plant has been practically idle for sixteen years owing to the thieves of the New York Stock Exchange in not settling the public to have stocks and bonds manufactured by anybody but the 'fixing trust.' We can get no redress."

"Thieves of the New York Stock Exchange. Yours is no petty larceny, but $5,000 a day that the corporations could save on their engraving bill if you allowed them to buy here instead of from the Bank Note Trust."

Another sign assured the people that he, George H. Kendall, assumed responsibility for calling members of the Stock Exchange thieves.

Mr. Kendall said that the Stock Exchange discrimination had no affected his business that he did not know but it would be better for him to shut up his shop and release the capital he has invested in the plant. He began putting up the signs only "after twenty years of unsuccessful courtesy," he said.

The bill before the Legislature now would not only relieve his company, but eleven other engraving companies from Boston to San Francisco, Mr. Kendall declared.

Telephone girls in New York and Albany who put up the connections on the days when Senator Kendall and Mr. Kendall are said to have conversed over the telephone, especially on those days when listeners took down what was said, had been summoned to appear before the committee to-morrow.

The first witness, however, will be Mr. Field, whose direct examination by the Attorney-General had not been completed when the committee adjourned for the day.

At the morning session Kendall showed up in his answers today that he was not disposed to permit counsel to drag from him anything he believed had no bearing on the case.

His evasion of questions exasperated Wilson time after time and a ruling was asked from the chair as to whether or not Kendall should answer the questions directly.

Wilson asked Kendall why he did not at the outset ask Assemblyman Knott, at whose hotel Kendall lived for several months in the year to draft and introduce the bill in which he was interested. Kendall refused to answer.

"Was it because Assemblyman Knott knew you?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"I refuse to answer," replied Kendall.

"But will you not give me something upon which I can base an inference?" pleaded Wilson.

M'ADOO SWINGS AXE IN CUSTOMS SERVICE

Four Philadelphia Officers Out and Other Heads Are to Fall.

LOOKS FOR NEW BLOOD

Smuggling Investigations Will Be Pushed by the Department.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Investigation of the removal of officers in many ports and the introduction of "new blood" into the service, is being put under way by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo.

McAdoo is said to have demanded, of four of the highest officials at the port of Philadelphia, Charles W. Hill, collector; Percy M. Lytle, surveyor; Fred P. Vincent, appraiser; and Walter T. Merrick, naval officer.

Secretary McAdoo denied that their removal was due to frauds, although it is understood he held that the situation there was found to be deplorable and that business was being conducted in an unsatisfactory manner.

The resignations of customs officers in Philadelphia have been requested, not because charges have been preferred against them, but because it is deemed essential that these places shall be filled by persons who are in sympathy with the purposes and policies of the Administration and also because it is considered vital in the interest of the public that new blood shall be brought into the service.

Those four men, like practically all other officials in the customs service, are Republicans. It is pointed out that the Democratic Administration might naturally expect a stronger sympathy with its purposes and policies from Democratic appointees.

Today's action indicates that the situation in Philadelphia is such that the Secretary felt he could not wait until political appointments could be made in the regular course of events.

"New blood" is being introduced into the Treasury as well as all other departments by the gradual appointment of assistant secretaries, division and bureau chiefs from the Democratic party.

The Secretary has started out on a vigorous crusade of "purification" and will clean the dead wood out of the service without waiting for the routine political appointments.

Although Secretary McAdoo is being assisted in these investigations by James P. Curtis, assistant secretary in charge of customs under the Taft administration, who has been temporarily retained until his successor can be selected, the summary dismissals in Philadelphia and many others that are expected shortly are construed in some circles as a reflection upon the efficiency of the customs service under the last administration.

Investigations are being carried back several years. Senators and others with whom Secretary McAdoo has discussed the customs service find that he is not satisfied with it. Many of the more important policies of the last administration are not to his liking.

Buffalo Troops Fire in Buffalo Strike

By Brig-Gen. Samuel Welch of the Fourth Brigade.

Early in the afternoon the wires supplying the Niagara street car line with power were cut, but were soon repaired by the company's men protected by the police.

A Main and Summer streets truck was blocked by a disabled truck that straddled the tracks. Strikers took advantage of the accident to break all the car windows and stone the crews until they fled. A rock hit a motorman and he was carried unconscious to the Sisters Hospital.

William B. Fitzgerald, strike leader, says the calling of the militia has in no way affected the attitude of the striking employees. P. J. Downey of the State Board of Arbitration will ask the State Commissioner of Labor to order a public investigation of the trouble.

An urgent protest against the calling of the militia was telegraphed to Gov. Sulzer by Mr. Fitzgerald. The message follows:

"The street railway men of Buffalo have been forced to strike to secure their American rights to organize for a living wage and humane treatment. We have just been informed that the State troops are ordered out this morning. If this is true it is for the sole purpose of assisting this arrogant company and to intimidate these workmen. We have been and still are willing to submit our contentions to arbitration. This has been absolutely refused. In the name of labor we appeal to you against this unfair and unwarranted discrimination."

The authorities are unable to make any clear estimate of the number of injured in the battles waged in different parts of the city.

Brig-Gen. George B. Dyer, commanding the First Brigade of the National Guard of the State, said yesterday that he believed it would not be necessary to send any of the city regiments to Buffalo.

"This morning I received a telegram from Adjt-Gen. Hamilton," said Gen. Dyer, "asking me to designate one regiment which might be sent to Buffalo if circumstances should make the move necessary. I replied that the Seventh was the first regiment in the point of seniority with the Seventh first second in this respect. Consequently if it does prove necessary to call out any of the National Guard these two regiments will go before any others, in the order given."

"I want it understood, however, that no orders relating in any way to the Buffalo situation have been issued to these or any other regiments here."

Orders were given by Gen. Dyer later in the day for the Seventh and Seventy-first regiments to be in readiness. It was explained that this step was customary in cases of the kind, but that the actual calling of New York troops to Buffalo was not probable except in the case of extreme danger to life and property.

Frank V. L. Hopkin, the adjutant of the First Brigade, was at headquarters last night and kept in communication with Gen. Dyer. When the adjutant left headquarters no further orders had been received.

Customs Agents Call Him Strong Arm Man of Glickstein Band.

Federal Troops Drive Rebels Several Miles Off.

LOUIS LEVY, a thick-limbed, heavy jawed man of middle age, was held in $5,000 bail for examination on April 5 by United States Commissioner Shields yesterday. He was arrested in connection with an opium and cocaine selling conspiracy which the Federal authorities say was engineered by Dr. Abraham Glickstein of 208 Henry street, who is under three indictments.

Levy, according to Special Customs Agent Walter P. Murphy, was Dr. Glickstein's strong arm man. It was his duty, so the story runs, to accompany the Glickstein agents assigned to the distribution of the opium or cocaine and protect them from what the customs men call the "drug bandits." The customs authorities say that it is almost a daily occurrence for one of the opium traffickers to be robbed and beaten, sometimes to the point of death, by another of his fellows.
