Women Attempt Disturbance at Liverpool, but Are Driven Away.

They subpoenaed what a newspaper calls "two fool creatures in male clothes" to go to the strangers' gallery of the House of Commons and play with toys.

The children of the whole incident can only add to the ridicule the suffragettes have long evoked. The excuse for the lads to handle the toys is their youth.

An attempt of a few tergiversants to disturb the visit of the King and Queen to Liverpool failed. The women were armed with pokers and smashed several windows along the line of the royal procession.
