

AMERICAN LEASES WARWICK CASTLE

Henry W. Marsh of New York to Occupy Famous Historical Seat.

DATES FROM 14TH CENTURY

Earl and Countess Have Long Sought to Let It for Financial Reasons.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, Feb. 22.—Henry Wheelwright Marsh of New York has leased historic Warwick Castle from the Earl of Warwick.

In 1912 the Earl of Lytton rented his Hertfordshire seat, Knebworth, at Wyfold, near Reading, to Mr. Marsh. Since then Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have gone in for entertaining and have had the able assistance of Lady Paget.

It is announced that Mr. Marsh will allow the public to visit the castle as heretofore.

Warwick Castle is one of the historic sites of England, and some very valuable documents are in its archives. The Countess of Warwick, formerly the Babbling Brookie of Tranby Croft baccarat fame, who has been writing sketches for the movies, said recently that she found much material for historic plays in the archives of the castle.

The Earl and Countess have been in financial difficulties for some time and some of the paintings in the castle were sold to help pay their debts. The Countess also undertook a lecture tour in the United States in 1912, but it was a financial failure.

Warwick Castle is one of the first places Americans visit on their arrival in England and they have always been welcomed there.

Warwick Castle stands high above the River Avon a little less than 100 miles from London. Extensive lawns and gardens are enclosed within the walls, which are flanked by towers dating back to the fourteenth century. The highest of these reaches an altitude of 147 feet. The view from the castle is one of the most attractive in England. There was a fire in the castle in 1871, but the great hall and other apartments which suffered were restored.

The castle was involved for many years in the wars of early England. It was strengthened after the Norman invasion and much of the castle as it is today bears a date more recent than the battle of Hastings. Tradition, however, dates the first castle at Warwick back to the time of Ethelred, daughter of King Alfred. It was the headquarters of King Henry III in the wars against the barons and Edward IV. was imprisoned there. Queen Elizabeth was one of the sovereigns who were entertained there. She was entertained with pageants which were reproduced in London in July, 1906, under the direction of Louis N. Parker, the playwright.

LE CLAIROU ROLLAND HONORED.

Famous French Bugler Decorated With Legion of Honor.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. PARIS, Feb. 22.—M. Rolland, the aged bugler who in 1845, after he had been captured by the Arabs in Africa, sounded an order for a charge which gave the French a victory, was decorated by President Poincare to-day with the rosette of an officer of the Legion of Honor.

Rolland, who is 94 years of age, was seated between President Poincare and M. Nouleins, the Minister of War. He received a tremendous ovation when the President pinned the rosette on his breast. He maintained the same serenity during the enthusiasm as he did in 1845, when, instead of sounding a retreat, as the Arab chief ordered him to do, he blew a "charge" order which gave victory to the troops.

LOOP THE LOOP TOGETHER.

Hamel Defeated by Garros in International Races at Javisy.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. PARIS, Feb. 22.—Despite the disagreeable weather a large crowd attended the international flying races at Javisy to-day and the gate receipts amounted to about $3,000.

The starters were Gustave Hamel, representing England, and Roland Garros, flying for France. Both used the same make of aeroplane. There were two races of eighteen miles each and the men exchanged machines for the second race. At the start the wind blew at a rate of 25 miles an hour, but later fell to 10 miles.

In the first race Hamel started a minute after Garros, but abandoned the race after covering nine of the ten rounds and Garros won by three seconds.

An exhibition of fancy stunts followed. Both men looped the loop at the same time and rolled their machines in the air until they looked like porpoises at sea. For twenty-five minutes the two men kept this up, flying at a height of from 1,000 to 2,000 feet.

A return match between the two men has been arranged to take place in England.

PRINCE AS FARM LABORER.

Erik of Denmark Has Been Working Quietly on an English Farm.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, Feb. 22.—Prince Erik of Denmark, a nephew of King Christian X., after working unobtrusively on an English farm at Fairford, in Gloucestershire, for some months, will shortly go to Holland and Belgium to continue his agricultural education.

It is said that the stay of the Prince in England is due to the advice of Ministers of Agriculture Pedersen, who encouraged his own daughter to study domestic life as a maid servant here. It is well known that Denmark is facile princeps in dairy farming, but M. Pedersen while visiting England some time ago was impressed with the profitable English methods of using waste lands in hog rearing, which he is alleged to have described as the best he has ever seen. Accordingly he urged Prince Valdemar, father of Prince Erik, to send the latter here.

The Prince lives in a farmer's family on an equal status with its members. He works hard and for long hours. Occasionally he pays a visit to his aunt, Queen Mother Alexandra, at Sandringham.

MRS. PANKURST ESCAPES!

Report Her Bodyguard Fought With Police and She Fled.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, Feb. 22.—The officials of the Women's Social and Political Union say Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, for whom the police have been looking since her speech last night, left her temporary residence on Globe place to-day. She was escorted from the house by a bodyguard, who fought the police waiting outside to get hold of her and take her to Holloway jail. In the melee one girl's head was cut and two were struck by the police with their fists. Mrs. Pankhurst escaped during the night.

This statement is not confirmed. The newspapers are not watching Mrs. Pankhurst but are ignoring her doings as far as possible.

ADAMSON TO LEAD CANAL TOLLS FIGHT

Will Handle the Repeal Bill in House, as Underwood Declines.

A VICTORY IS EXPECTED

Senator Chamberlain Attacks Railroads as Responsible for the Repealer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—At a conference to be held in the White House this week ways and means will be devised to pass a bill in Congress repealing the provision in the Panama Canal act that permits American coastwise vessels to pass through the Isthmian waterway without payment of tolls.

There are obstacles in the way of the repeal bill that must be removed by the President himself. The proposed legislation will be initiated in the House of Representatives.

Representative Underwood of Alabama, the Democratic leader in the House, is opposed to this particular Administration policy. Although disposed at all times to fall in with President Wilson's wishes Mr. Underwood believes that he would stultify himself if he undertook to direct the fight to be made in behalf of the repeal bill.

Representative Kitchen of North Carolina, who was expected at one time to handle the repeal bill in the House, has informed the President that he is against the measure.

It is therefore incumbent upon the President to cast the burden on Representative Adamson, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, who already has on his hands a part of the anti-trust program of the Administration. Mr. Adamson will handle the repeal bill in committee and on the floor of the House.

With Underwood, Kitchen and other Democratic leaders remaining virtually inactive it was not easy task to pass in the House the bill repealing the tolls exemption provision of the Panama Canal act.

There will be many Democratic desertions from the Administration on this question, but the President and his advisers have no fear as to the outcome. They have been assured of strong Republican support in the House for the repeal bill.

While the opponents of the bill declare that sentiment in the Senate on the tolls question is about evenly divided, their claims are not borne out by the situation in that body as it is understood by the Administration leaders. The latter insist that while the debates in Congress may be prolonged the repeal bill will be passed before this session comes to an end.

Senator Chamberlain's Statement.

Senator Chamberlain voiced his opposition to the repeal of the tolls exemption legislation to-night. He said:

"It is my opinion that the demand for the repeal of that portion of the Panama Canal act granting exemption from tolls to coastwise vessels is inspired in the first instance by the Canadian Pacific Railway and this in turn by the transcontinental railroads of this country. These latter roads have always opposed the construction of a canal. Their emissaries were in Washington to oppose the passage of the Panama Canal act, and having failed in that they are now resorting to the field of diplomacy, ready if need be to plunge the country into a bloody war to accomplish their purpose. Suppose Congress yields to the demands of Great Britain and repeals the tolls exemption clause of the act; will that satisfy her? Not by any means, for yielding to this demand will be followed by other insistent demands, and among these will be the opening of the canal to railroad owned ships. This is the real secret behind which the transcontinental lines are hiding, both those in Canada and the United States."

"If these demands are complied with it will be insisted that we have no right to fortify the canal; that we have no right to pass our national canal act; that in time of war, that we cannot honor our treaty with Panama which provides for the passage of her vessels through the canal; in fact that we have no right whatever except to suspend the $15,000,000 per annum in the maintenance and operation of a great national highway built by American ingenuity and with American money."

A True American Policy.

"There is no question that there are international complications which make the subject a delicate one at this particular juncture. American American policy demands that the Panama act should stand as it was enacted in spite of these complications and the United States ought to maintain its position at any hazard or cost."

"Throughout the United States sustains the view that there is no sound basis for the argument that the law violates any treaty obligations, but aside from the question of treaty stipulations there are compelling political, military and economic reasons why the party now in power should not undertake to repeal the tolls exemption provision, nor, as I view it, even to suspend its operation."

"It seems to me that the time has come when we ought to take a firm stand with Great Britain as we have taken with Japan and insist upon our rights to control our internal affairs in whatsoever manner we see fit. If we have to fight to maintain our rights we might as well do it now as to yield to the demands of every foreign Power and practically fetter the commerce between the United States and every quarter of the globe."

DEWEY SENDS ALL TO HIS BOOK.

Won't Discuss Manila Incident or Related German Excitement.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Agitation in Germany over what took place between the American and German naval commanders in Manila Bay in 1898 will not alter Admiral Dewey's determination to make no statement regarding the encounter, it was learned here to-day. Admiral Dewey refused absolutely to discuss the controversy in any way other than to refer all inquiries to the statement contained in his autobiography.

Naval officers here are rather at a loss to explain the vehemence with which certain elements in German official life and naval circles have taken up the matter. The Admiral's book has been out for nearly two years and it had not been supposed that at this late date there would be agitation over any statement contained therein.
