

CLARK TO MAKE ATTACK TO-DAY

Speaker's Speech Expected to Have Big Political Effect.

HOUSE SURE FOR REPEAL

Senator J. Ham Lewis As- serts Peril of War Demands It.

STATEMENT BY WILSON

Says Charge of Deal With Britain Is "Insult"—Calls Exemption a Subsidy.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—On the eve of the vote by the House on the tolls repeal bill every indication pointed to a sweeping victory for President Wilson.

Opponents of the Administration were claiming to-night that they were making inroads into the Administration forces, but the President will probably carry the day by a majority of at least 50.

The President's own friends estimated that the repeal bill would go through by a margin of more than 85.

In the Senate the situation after a day of skirmishing by both sides remains close, but with the chances favoring the President and his followers.

The vote in the House will come early to-morrow evening, but before that there will be a roar of heavy artillery from both sides. Speaker Clark will take the floor and deliver what is expected to be one of the most important speeches of his career. On it is likely to depend not only the Speaker's own political future but the prospects for harmony in the party itself.

President Wilson showed deep feeling to-day over the charge that he had made a deal with Great Britain in the Panama Canal tolls matter. He characterized the charges as an "insult."

New Light Thrown.

He threw new light on the international exigencies which, in his opinion, demand the repeal of the exemption clause, and disclosed for the first time that he did not believe the repeal would constitute a violation of the Democratic platform.

Senator J. Ham Lewis of Illinois started the Senate by declaring that the occupation of Mexico by England, Germany and France was the international crisis feared by President Wilson.

The Illinois Senator predicted that in the event of this disaster Russia would seize Alaska and Japan take the Philippines and Hawaii.

Nearly thirty speeches were made in the House in the course of the day, several of which reiterated the attacks upon President Wilson.

WILSON FEELS INSULTED.

Repeats Charge That He Has a Deal With Britain on Tolls.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—President Wilson referred with considerable feeling to-day to a charge that has been made in Congress that he had entered into a deal with Great Britain by which the latter nation was to get a repeal of the tolls exemption legislation and in return was to support President Wilson's Mexican policy.

The President characterized this as one of a number of "insults" that have been heaped upon him.

He expressed great regret at what seemed to him to be a degrading of the debate into an effort to discredit the Administration. He declared, however, that the outcome would not be affected by this.

"The whole thing reminds me," said he, "of a story I used to be very fond of telling of a very effective debater—I need not say where this happened—who sent a challenge to a country, hostile to him, to debate. The people down there did not like the job very much, but they put up the man they liked best and who was generally put up on such occasions, a great, big husky fellow whom they called Tom."

The challenger was given the first hour of the two hours allotted to the debate and he had not got more than half way through his speech when it became evident that he was convincing the audience when one of Tom's partisans in the back of the room called out: "Tom, Tom, call him a liar and make it a fight!"

The Lion Stage Reached.

"That is the stage this has reached," was the President's concluding sentence. The President also reiterated to-day the reasons which had caused him to take a stand for the repeal of the tolls exemption clause. He told visitors that the international exigency referred to by him was merely the unanimity of opinion among the Powers that the exemption violates the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

This statement from the President was a blow to the contentions which some of his supporters in Congress have been making in the last few days that an undisclosed international crisis was behind the President's insistence upon the repeal legislation.

Politicians here fear that the President may have weakened his position through to-day's statement.

They are of the opinion that the admission that the so-called international crisis consists merely in the fact that the nations of the world are united upon the meaning of the treaty with Great Britain leaves the Administration leaders with a weaker argument than they would have had if they had been able to continue to refer to the situation as being

KIRBY LEADS CLARKE BY 102.

Returns of 135,558 Votes in Arkansas, With More to Come In.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 30.—After a day during which the lead changed from one candidate to the other as returns drifted in an analysis of a total vote of 135,558 showed Judge W. F. Kirby to be exactly 102 votes ahead of United States Senator James P. Clarke. On the face of these returns he seems the winner, but later returns may again change the lead.

Judge Kirby made "free tolls" one of his main arguments. This is popular in Arkansas. Judge Kirby also won votes by charges that the national Administration had interfered on behalf of Clarke. Letters favorable to Clarke's candidacy from President Wilson and Secretary Bryan seem to have won votes for Kirby.

SAILOR EATEN BY SHARKS.

He Fell Overboard From a Vessel in Havana Harbor.

Special Cable Despatch to The Sun.

HAVANA, March 30.—A report from Isabella de Sagus says Boatswain Lunenburg of the steamer Borney Castle fell from the bridge of the vessel into the harbor to-day and was devoured by sharks before a rescuing boat could be lowered.

WASHINGTON TO PUT A CURB ON MALONE

Superiors Displeased by His Ut- terances—Not Wilson's Mouthpiece.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, is to be informed that it is the opinion of his official superiors that he ought to attend more strictly to the duties of his office.

Mr. Malone's statement in the morning newspapers commenting on the recent appointments of Gov. Glynn of New York has aroused the ire of Administration leaders. They want Mr. Malone to quit talking politics.

The intimation is to be conveyed to the Collector that his absences from the Custom House on pleasure jaunts and for other purposes are not looked upon with favor in Washington. One of the purposes of the anticipated communication to Mr. Malone is to throw a dash of cold water upon the enthusiasm with which he has taken up the task of expressing the sentiments of the national Administration upon political developments in New York State.

Friends of the President here believe that the job of Collector is large enough to engage all of Mr. Malone's energies and that adequate attention to his office will result in longer spells of absence as to what President Wilson thinks or what Mr. Malone thinks the President thinks.

Officials here have felt embarrassment at the statements bearing upon New York politics and the fight for party reorganization there made by Mr. Malone in the last few months.

This feeling was drawn to a head by Mr. Malone's action yesterday in issuing a statement declaring that the greatest number of Gov. Glynn's appointments were hopelessly bad and demonstrated that the State administration is dominated by the Murphy influence. Mr. Malone in making this statement intimated that he expressed the sentiments of the President.

The specific reason assigned for the anticipated admonishing of Mr. Malone is repeated absences from his post. These have included a number of visits to Washington and most recently a vacation trip to Bermuda.

President Wilson let it be known to-day that Mr. Malone is not to be regarded as the mouthpiece of the Administration. The President considers himself the mouthpiece and does not share this responsibility with any one.

Care was taken, however, to make it clear that this utterance ought not to be considered as casting any reflection upon Mr. Malone.

While denial was made here to-day that anybody was authorized to speak for President Wilson in regard to Gov. Glynn's appointments it was believed in official circles that the announcement of Gov. Glynn's list of appointments will result in the withdrawal of the tentative approval which the national Administration conferred on the Governor some time ago.

STUDENTS TO MAKE OWN BEDS.

Columbia Men Offer to Take Maids' Places on Sundays.

Whether or not they should make their beds one day a week is the problem before the residents of Hartley, Livingston and Purnall halls, the Columbia University dormitories. A petition was circulated yesterday among the dormitory residents asking that the maids in the three dormitories get Sundays and holidays off on condition that the students agree to make their own beds on these days. The maids work seven days a week for $5.25.

The proposition has met with general favor and up to last night nearly 40 per cent of the 800 students rooming in the three buildings had agreed to make their own beds one day a week.

MULE MAY FREE HIM OF MURDER

Owner Must Prove Animal Was Not Used After Assassination.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 30.—If Red Tom Davidson can prove that the one mule he owns was at work for a neighboring farmer on May 3, 1912, he may escape punishment for his alleged part in the assassination of Ed Callahan, the feud Sheriff of Breathitt county. The assassin is alleged to have used Davidson's mule on which to ride from the scene, but Davidson is trying to prove an alibi for the animal.

Davidson's trial opened at Winchester, Ky., this afternoon. Fifteen men are to be tried.

THIS "ENOCH ARDEN" FINDS WIFE WAITING

Capt. Welland of Osman's Army, Left for Dead at Plezna, Seeks for 85 Years.

REPORTED AMONG KILLED

Held in Russian Prison—Clue Finally Leads to Happy Reunion Here.

A gray haired man of prosperous appearance rapped timidly upon a door on the third floor of the house at 87 South Fourth street, in Williamsburg, yesterday morning. His manner was that of one who seemed to dread the outcome of what was about to happen.

The door opened. Confronting the man was a woman of about his age, gray haired too. Wonderingly she stood as he walked in, wiping her hands nervously upon her apron.

For a moment or two he struggled for speech, then he regained self-control. "Mary?" he cried, holding out both hands to the woman. "Don't you know me? Don't you know your husband? They told me you were dead. I've hunted all over the world for you and just found you were living."

The woman's face was as gray as her hair. For a moment she stood as one dazed. Then she threw herself into his arms and called his name as her husband.

The door closed upon them, while neighbors ran to spread the tidings through the house.

Followed Osman Pasha.

More than thirty-five years ago Alfred Welland, then a prosperous British resident of Cairo, Egypt, became involved in Egyptian-Turkish politics. He was intimate with Osman Pasha, the Turkish General, and enlisted in the Turkish army at the outbreak of the Turko-Russian war. Osman made him an officer and he marched away with his command after saying good-bye to his young wife and their infant son, named for his father.

At various times letters from the front reached the wife who stayed in Cairo, telling of her husband's continued safety and of a further promotion. Then for a long period no news came.

In 1877 the rumor swept through Egypt that a terrible battle had been fought at Plezna and that thousands had been killed and wounded. Official despatches confirmed this and the list of the dead contained the name of Capt. Alfred Welland.

The wife was broken hearted. She was fairly well to do and had no cause to worry on that account, but the loss of her husband made her very ill for a long time. When she recovered she sought to trace her husband's body, but learned that he had been buried in an unnamed grave.

After a year Mrs. Welland sold her home in Cairo and with her young son left the country. She went first to Australia, travelled there for a while and finally came to the United States, settling in New York. Her son grew up and some years ago he married and went to live in Boston, where business called him. His mother continued to live in her home here and for some time has had an apartment in Williamsburg. She had for years been firm in the belief that her husband was dead and had given up the search for information about him.

In a Russian Prison.

The scene now changes to Cairo. Two years after the battle of Plezna there came faintly back to that city a worn, emaciated veteran of the war. It was Alfred Welland, who had been left for dead upon the battle field and had fallen a prisoner to the enemy. When the Turkish relief corps went over the scene later they found a body that, though mutilated by shot, was identified as that of Welland. So his name passed from the rolls.

The war ended and the Russian prisoners gave up their captives. Among them was Welland. Slowly he made his way to his home. It was in strangers' hands. His wife and child had disappeared. Friends told him they had gone to Australia. He followed and heard finally that they had gone to America.

Again he took up the search, but in this country it was in vain. He was told that a woman and a boy answering to the description he gave had died in a fever epidemic.

From New York he went to Canada and settled in Montreal, starting in business as a furniture manufacturer. The years brought him success, but not all happiness. He never married again and for a long time followed many false clues to his family.

Two years ago he came back to New York on business. Then his hopes were revived at a report that a Mrs. Welland was living here. But search failed to reveal her and, he returned to Montreal. Ten days ago he received from friends information that they believed they had really found his wife.

Yesterday he came to New York and went to the wife who opened the door to him. She too had remained faithful to his memory and never married.

Last night Mrs. Welland's old home was closed. She and her husband who was found after many years were on their way to Boston to see their son. He will not know until this morning that he has a father living.

"ROASTS" FOR YALE DEBATORS.

Men Who Argued Against Suffrage Are Abused by Mail.

NEW HAVEN, March 30.—Members of the Yale debating team, which had the negative side of the suffrage question here against Harvard Friday night, decided to-night to decline the invitation of the New York State suffrage leaders to take part in a debate on suffrage and uphold the negative side of the question.

It became known here to-day that one member of the negative team received seventeen letters from suffrage agitators among them being one which concludes thus: "You ought to be sent to jail for taking such a stand on the question."

SPEEDING HOMEWARD TO DIE.

Connecticut Woman Near Death Placed on Train in Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 30.—Surrounded by her niece and nephews and attended by a trained nurse Mrs. F. A. Hammond of Riverside, Conn., was brought into Savannah this afternoon on a seaboard Air Line train bound for the North. Mrs. Hammond has been ill for several months and having expressed a desire to die in the family home her nephews, Messrs. J. H. and Edwin Tyson, are making efforts to comply with her request.

Aboard the private car Pilgrim, where the dying woman lay, the curtains were closely drawn as the train steamed in from the South, and after her two nephews had made arrangements for the remainder of the trip the train swiftly sped toward the North.

SHIPS ASKED TO WATCH FOR TWO MEN IN CANOE

Missing Since Last Sunday, When They Left Bensonhurst in 18 Foot Craft.

Two young men, members of the New York Canoe Club, left the clubhouse at the foot of Bay Thirty-seventh street, Bensonhurst, Sunday, in a canoe. They have not been heard from yet and it is believed they have been drowned.

They are Thomas Jordan, 19 years old, of 445 Seventh street, Brooklyn, and Clarence Brown, 22 years old, of 188 Bay Thirty-fourth street, Bensonhurst. Both are employed by the New York Life Insurance Company.

They went in an eighteen foot canoe named Pals. The members of the club are divided in opinion as to where Jordan and Brown planned to go. Some members say they started to go to Staten Island and others say they started for Jamaica Bay.

The Marconi wireless station at Sea Gate, the navy yard wireless and the wireless station at the Bush docks have been asked to notify steamships within reach, so that a close watch may be kept for them.

Jordan joined the club two weeks ago and this was his first time in a canoe. He is a member of the Irish American Athletic Club and recently graduated from the New York Preparatory School. He is well known in high school circles as an athlete, as is Brown, who graduated from Erasmus Hall High School.

WIRES LOST BOY IS IN NEW YORK

"Elizabeth A. Vail" Sends Message In McCarrick Case.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—A telegram in relation to the disappearance of Warren McCarrick was received by Mayor Blankenburg late this afternoon. The Mayor at once turned it over to Detective Cameron. It came from New York and ran thus:

"Warren McCarrick has been in New York city since he was kidnapped. Registered office to locate the sender of the message. The postal authorities here were asked to keep close watch for a registered letter for Mayor Blankenburg bearing a New York postmark. The letter had not been received late to-night."

New York directories do not contain the name of Elizabeth A. Vail, nor do the telephone directories, which embrace the surrounding country.

JEWELLER CHARGES MALICE.

Commissioner J. L. Walsh and Others Accused of Conspiracy.

Charging that he was the victim of a conspiracy, participated in by the National Jewellers Board of Trade and Commissioner of Weights and Measures John L. Walsh and two of his inspectors, Morris A. Forgotson, a jeweller and dealer in precious stones at 1432 Broadway, filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to recover $100,000 damages.

Forgotson said that the members of the National Jewellers Board of Trade entered into a conspiracy to ruin him, because some of the members were his business competitors and because he refused to obey the dictates of the board. He said that Commissioner Walsh and his inspectors joined the conspiracy and caused his arrest July 15, 1913, on a charge of selling diamonds under weight. An indictment was returned against him, which was dismissed, February 4, for want of proof.

Walsh charged that his arrest and prosecution were set on foot maliciously and with no probable cause, solely to wreck his business.

MELLEN MAY ESCAPE TRIAL.

Lawyers Don't Believe He Will Answer Mangle Charge.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 30.—Leading attorneys here do not believe that Charles S. Mellen, ex-head of the New Haven railroad, will be put on trial on the indictment charging manslaughter in the wreck of the wreck at Westport, Conn., in October, 1912. The court has already held that the information upon which he was arrested was faulty, and it is questionable if a new bench warrant will be requested.

At his own request Stiles Judson, State's Attorney for Fairfield county, has been relieved by Judge Joseph P. Tuttle of the task of charging Mellen. Mr. Mellen, Mr. Judson is suffering from a serious nervous disorder.

State's Attorney Hugh Aileen of Hartford county and Judge John H. Light of Newalk, Attorney-General of Connecticut, have been designated to look after the interests of the State in the Mellen trial.

MRS. SIEGEL TO SUE FOR DIVORCE TO-DAY

She Returns From Paris to Bring Action Against Former Merchant.

WILL ASK FOR ALIMONY

Husband Is Accused of Miscon- duct With Three Women.

A divorce suit against Henry Siegel, who is out on $25,000 bail with his partner, Frank E. Vogel, on three indictments growing out of the failure of the Siegel enterprises last December, will be filed in the Supreme Court to-day by attorneys for Mrs. Marie Vaughn Siegel, who recently came to New York from Paris to bring the action against her husband. Rockwood & Haldane of 60 Broadway gave the papers into the hands of process servers yesterday afternoon.

In her complaint Mrs. Siegel charges, according to her lawyers last night, misconduct with a trained nurse of this city, with a woman living in Dorchester, Mass., and with a third woman unknown to her. The alleged improper acts are said to have taken place at Dorchester and at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where the Siegel estate, Driftwood, is located, between November 28, 1910, and the present time. Mrs. Siegel alleges that Mr. Siegel entertained the nurse also at the Hotel Netherland, New York.

Mrs. Siegel is now staying at the St. Regis Hotel with her daughter, Dorothy. She has been there only a few days, it was said at the hotel last night, but her lawyers said that she came from Paris about five weeks ago. Mrs. Siegel herself could not be reached last night. Her husband has been living at the Hotel Majestic since the bankruptcy action against his concerns was started.

The complaint states that Mrs. Siegel was a resident of Manhattan up to February, 1911, and since then has lived in Paris. She says she was married to Henry Siegel on April 24, 1888. There was no issue of this marriage.

An interesting statement in the complaint, as given out last night by the lawyers, contains the request that provision be made for the proper means and support of the plaintiff, Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel, are now living at the Majestic only through the kindness of some friend, who Siegel said in his examination before ex-Judge George C. Holt some time ago, is paying his board.

Already there are three petitions in involuntary bankruptcy against him in the United States District Court in connection with the failure of the Siegel and Vogel enterprises, besides the three indictments, one charging a misdemeanor and two charging felonies, and even more indictments are said by the District Attorney's office to be coming to-day.

What assets he might have with which to pay alimony to his wife, after all those actions, is a matter of conjecture, inasmuch as the Siegel bank depositors are trying to obtain every available dollar. It was said last night that Mrs. Siegel had been prompted in her action because of the allegations made against her husband in the business affairs.

Mrs. Siegel frequently visited a villa at Cannes, but recently has been entertaining in Paris, where she has lived since she separated from her husband five years ago. When Mrs. Siegel lived in New York she was also noted for her entertainments at the Siegel town house and at Mamaroneck.

"Has anything happened to Jim?" he asked before the lieutenant had a chance to say anything.

Ahlers explained that Gallagher's eighteen-year-old son, James, had fallen from the tug Arrow in Newtown Creek, Williamsburg, and had drowned. The boy lived with his parents at 189 Russell street, Greenpoint. Last night the father was helping the harbor police in their search for the body.

WIFE DOES THE THRASHING.

Court Upholds Her in Hearing Able- Bodied Husband.

SHARON, Pa., March 30.—James Bach, an able bodied citizen of 29 Mill street, caused the arrest of his wife last night for beating him. Bach said that his wife habitually chastised him and that he could stand it no longer.

In support of his statement the husband showed bruises from head to foot. Mrs. Bach admitted that she had inflicted them. When the case was heard before Justice of the Peace S. S. Gilbert Mrs. Bach was charged with being a "habitual husband beater." She proved, however, to the satisfaction of the court that she was frequently justified in administering corporal punishment to her husband, and she was let off with payment of the costs.

"My husband must behave himself," testified Mrs. Bach. "He has no business to come home drunk and if he does he must expect a thrashing. I am boss in my home, and it will save him trouble to get wise to that fact."

GUNS GO TO BELFAST AS TEA.

Maxims Which Passed Customs Now Can't Be Found.

SPECIAL CABLE DESPATCH TO THE SUN.
LONDON, March 31.—A despatch from Belfast to the Daily Mail says Maxim guns in twenty tea chests have been landed in that city under the noses of the customs officers despite the prohibition of the importation of arms into Ireland. The guns were packed in sections and surrounded by tea. The duty on tea was paid in London, from which place the guns were cleared.

The customs officers have since learned the nature of the contents of the chests and are trying to trace them, but they are no longer in Belfast, having been secreted in some unknown place.

ALBANY TOO RICH FOR DUHAMEL

No Place for Poor Man, He Says, in Abandoning Race.

Senator James C. Duhamel of Brooklyn announced yesterday that he would not be a candidate for renomination this fall as he could not afford to live in Albany.

"Albany," he said, "is no place for a poor man and I can't afford to stay in the Senate."

Had Senator Duhamel decided to make another run for Senator he would have met with the opposition of most of the Democratic leaders in his district.

DR. MAWSON WEDS GIRL HE WOOD BY WIRELESS

Antarctic Explorer, Who Had Thrilling Experience in Ice, Is Married.

Special Cable Despatch to The Sun.

MELBOURNE, March 30.—Dr. Douglas Mawson, the Antarctic explorer who has just returned from a trip during which his two companions lost their lives and made his way back to the base after thirty days of suffering in blizzards, was married to-day to Miss Delprat, daughter of a mine owner.

The couple became engaged in 1911, when Miss Delprat was 19 years of age, before Dr. Mawson started on the last expedition. They exchanged love messages by wireless while the doctor was in the Antarctic.

The south pole was not Dr. Mawson's goal. He aimed at the exploration of the vast coast line of the Antarctic which was discovered by the American Capt. Wilkes seventy years ago and named after him. The party returned to Adelaide, Australia, on February 27 of this year. The scientific results of the expedition were said to have been very valuable. Besides mapping out newly discovered lands, extraordinary marine fauna were discovered at a depth of two miles and copper deposits and a vast coal bed were also found.

Dr. Mawson was born at Bradford, England, in 1882. He holds the position of lecturer in geology in the University of Adelaide.

$12,000 NO KEY TO SOCIETY.

Husband Blames Fattish Extrava- gance in Divorce Answer.

William W. Scheffer, a well to do hair-dresser, filed an answer in the Supreme Court yesterday in a separation suit brought by Mrs. Saldos R. Scheffer. He said his wife had attempted to enter society by spending $12,000 a year, but had failed.

"This is an example of her unwarranted extravagance," he added, "and is incompatible with the welfare and proper upbringing of her children."

Scheffer alleged that in spite of the annual allowance of $12,000 that his wife got she gave promissory notes to the butcher and grocer and bought expensive gowns. He says he has been trying to pay his wife's debts, but has had little success.

HAS FOREBODING; SON DROWNS

James Gallagher, Fireboat Pilot, Knows When Called to Phone.

A day long presentation that something was going to happen to his son caused James Gallagher, pilot of the fireboat New Yorker, to ask what had happened when he was called to the telephone late in the afternoon and told that Lieut. Ahlers of the Herbert street station in Williamsburg wanted to speak to him.

"Has anything happened to Jim?" he asked before the lieutenant had a chance to say anything.

Ahlers explained that Gallagher's eighteen-year-old son, James, had fallen from the tug Arrow in Newtown Creek, Williamsburg, and had drowned. The boy lived with his parents at 189 Russell street, Greenpoint. Last night the father was helping the harbor police in their search for the body.
