

5,000 SUFFRAGISTS MARCH ON CAPITOL

Bear Petition Demanding Passage of Votes Amendment to Constitution.

SIGNED AT MASS MEETING

Paraders Received by Committees From Both Houses of Congress.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—More than 5,000 women suffragists, representing every State in the Union and marshalled with military precision, tramped Pennsylvania avenue to-day from the White House to the Capitol bearing the legend "We demand the passage of the Bristow-Mondell resolution."

It may be explained that the Bristow-Mondell resolution provides for the amendment of the Constitution legalizing woman suffrage in all States.

In remarkable contrast to the parade of suffragists held March 3, 1913, no disorders of any kind hindered the marchers. Every sixth platoon of the feminine column had a patrolman to escort it. The throngs of the avenue kept well back from the curbing and under their brilliant banners, streamers and guidons of violet, white and yellow, the women paraded, the bands blared and the good natured crowd applauded.

The object of the procession was to convey from the great mass meeting early in the afternoon at the Belasco Theatre the documentary evidence of the united action of the suffragists. At the meeting Senator Bristow of Kansas, Senator Mondell of Wyoming, Chairman of the resolution amending the Federal Constitution, addressed the assembled women.

Bristow Criticizes Wilson.

In the course of his remarks, Senator Bristow took the President to task for sidestepping the suffrage issue last autumn when he was petitioned by the National Association leaders under Dr. Anna Howard Shaw. At that time President Wilson took the ground that as woman suffrage was not promised or opposed or even mentioned in the Democratic platform and as his function in office was to do the bidding of the party, he could not in the absence of specific instructions from his party take any defined position on the issue.

Keep after the States and when you get enough States it will not be necessary for your President to consult his party platform to know what he stands for."

Among the prominent suffragists who addressed the meeting were Mrs. Donald R. Hooker of Baltimore, Miss Caroline Lexow of New York, Miss Rheta C. Door, editor of the Suffragist. Then by unanimous vote the meeting adopted a resolution calling on Congress immediately to pass the Bristow-Mondell resolution. Mrs. Ernest Thompson Steton of Hartford, Conn., had presented the resolution and it was seconded by Mrs. Mary M. Lockwood, treasurer of the Women's Congressional Union.

Pretty Girls in Line.

With the adjournment of the mass meeting the procession for the Capitol started. The marshal was Mrs. Juliet Tubise. The line, having scores of pretty girls on horseback interspersed among its infantry women and followed by a battery of several scores of mounted women, passed down Seventh street, and into Pennsylvania avenue, with every hand playing "The Woman's Marching Song." Part of the time the marchers sang with the bands for accompaniment.

At the Capitol the paraders were received by the special committee of both houses. All the committeemen were either from suffrage States or themselves women. The committee consisted of Mrs. Julia Tubise, the line, having scores of pretty girls on horseback interspersed among its infantry women and followed by a battery of several scores of mounted women, passed down Seventh street, and into Pennsylvania avenue, with every hand playing "The Woman's Marching Song." Part of the time the marchers sang with the bands for accompaniment.

Petitions Enough for All.

For each member of the House and Senate the special delegates among the marchers bore copies of their petition for immediate action on their measure of reform. Upon every member's desk on Monday morning he will find a reminder that the women are hoping for something to happen quick, and in the day to come the Congressional meeting his present opportunity will have occasion to regret it. Of course their specific threat of reprisal in the resolution is all very polite, but it has a "kick" in it. On the west front of the Capitol the marchers, together with members of the Congressional reception committee, posed to have themselves photographed standing rank above rank on the great stairs of the main portico. After that the party moved inside the rotunda for the formal reception. As they ascended the steps ten massed bands played "The Star Spangled Banner."

FINDS CITY PRISONS WASTE MUCH FOOD

Investigator Reports Same Expense Could Buy More Variety.

$800 A DAY THROWN AWAY

Dr. Davis Adopts Changes Urged at Penitentiary and Workhouse.

Waste of food in the workhouse and penitentiary on Blackwell's Island is disclosed in a report made to Commissioner of Correction Davis by William Golden, an investigator from the office of the Commissioner of Accounts.

Mr. Golden finds that the city's allowance of 16 cents a day for each inmate is not only ample but that if the waste were stopped there could be more variety of food.

In one day's dinner and supper observation at the workhouse Mr. Golden found that 724 pounds of food was returned to the kitchen unused and forty-two gallons of soup was thrown out. Nothing is said as to the quality of the soup.

At the penitentiary on April 22 more than a pound of food for each person was returned from the mess hall. Mr. Golden says the amount should not exceed more than a quarter of a pound per person and that $50 a day is wasted in the two institutions.

He says that both at the penitentiary and the workhouse the inmates get more meat and bread than they need, showing "poor management." The same bill of fare is used day after day—bread, syrup and coffee for breakfast, soup, meat, vegetables and bread for dinner, bread, syrup and coffee for supper. It seems that on April 22 the penitentiary prisoners had a pea soup for dinner. In its preparation 320 pounds of dried peas was used, which, according to the investigator, is six times more than was necessary.

Mr. Golden's report shows that Miss Davis says, "what should be expected where there is no supervision over the work of the various institutions and where a central office is not able to know just what food is being supplied to each prisoner each day at all the institutions. My personal experience at the State institutions enabled me to ascertain from an inspection of the food that a more suitable dietary for the inmates of our institutions at the same, or lower, cost per inmate."

Several changes suggested by Mr. Golden have been made.
