THINK LAW SHOULD CHECK FOOD PRICES

Commissioner Suggests Clause in New Constitution to Govern in Crises.

Joseph Hartigan, Commissioner of the Mayor's Bureau of Weights and Measures and secretary of the Mayor's Committee on Food Supply, said yesterday he believes public sentiment against abnormal food prices may find expression in a provision of the new State Constitution under which some form of a commission may be established for the regulation of food prices when an emergency arises.

Commissioner Hartigan pointed out that the ever increasing trend of the population to the city and away from the country has been brought about by the tendency of the times to exalt industrial over agricultural occupation, and that legislation for fifty years has also favored securing at the expense of agriculture.

"The growth of the population of the great cities," he said, "has extended the computation zone to most of the territory within a radius of fifty miles from the city, pushing the producing farmer further back and away from the city and making it more and more difficult for him to get into personal daily touch with the city consumer. Produce still comes to us, but not the producer."

"The rapid growth of the city of New York in the past twenty-five years, with increasing complex conditions of the consumer, has made for him the convenience of the neighborhood grocer, butcher and baker. The aid market places patronized by old residents passed with the shifting of the residential sections of the city. The problem of to-day is to bring the producer closer to the retailer."

"Some methods of helping the consumer through the retailer would be the establishment of large terminal wholesale market facilities at advantageous and convenient locations on the waterfront of the city, the elimination of costly delivery systems and the purchase by cooperative associations of retailers of produce in quantity at consequent lower prices."

Mr. Hartigan said that expedients tried by other countries in times past for curbing the avarice of food speculators have usually taken the form of laws prohibiting dealers to charge more than a certain sum for a given article.

"In England," he continued, "under the ancient common law and under several statutes, to raise the price of food was a crime. The common law offence of forestalling, regrating and ingrossing were made part of the statutory law. Advancing along the line of enlightened progress, the critical temper of the times is inclining more to regard human rights before property rights, and the biblical maxim 'that a man may do as he will with his own' is destined to meet with further limitations."

"The general principle of freedom of trade and freedom of contract is so firmly established in all matters where the public welfare and human rights are so jeopardized that no objection should be made to exceptions which are necessary for the public good."

A bumper business was done in the city's open markets on their fifth Saturday yesterday. General prices were as follows: Apples, 35c. half bushel; California grapes, 30c. seven pound basket; pears, seven quart basket, 15c.; peaches, sixteen quart basket, 35c.; muskmelons, 5c. each; oranges, 5 for 10c.; lemons, 7c. a dozen; beets, 3 bunches for 5c.; carrots, 3 bunches for 5c.; celery, 5c. bunch; cabbage, 5c. a head; cauliflower, 5c. a head; cucumber, 5 for 5c.; egg plants, 6c. each; green corn, 5 ears for 10c.; lettuce, 5c. a dozen; lima beans, 5c. a quart; onions, 5 pounds for 5c.; green peppers, 8 for 5c.; potatoes, 7 pounds 10c.; sweet potatoes, 5c. quart; Brussels sprouts, 10c. quart; string beans, 5c. quart; tomatoes, 10c. a quart basket; eggs, 35c. a dozen; print butter, 37c. a pound; lamb chops, 30c. a pound; shoulder of lamb, 13c. a pound; Poultry—Fresh killed broilers, 23c. a pound; roasting chickens, 20c. and 22c. a pound; ducks, 18c. a pound; Pat Bluefish, 8c. a pound; clams, 12c. a dozen.

SHE MAY BE STATE SECRETARY.

Mrs. Agnes Riddle of Colorado Likely to Be Fusion Candidate.

DENVER, Oct. 3.—Colorado, in all likelihood, will have a woman Secretary of State in the next administration. The Republican and Progressive campaign committees are negotiating a trade whereby John E. Barber, Republican candidate for Secretary of State, will retire from the field in favor of Mrs. Agnes Riddle, Progressive. In return the Progressives plan to put Harry E.
