

WAR TIME GIVES A STIMULUS TO STUDY

Young Men Feel Greater Need of Good Education Than When World Is at Peace—Y. M. C. A.'s Notice Difference.

The following is an interview with Edward L. Wertheim, educational director of the West Side Y. M. C. A., New York. The educational department of the Y. M. C. A. in Greater New York is in personal contact with some 100,000 young men each year seeking suggestions for study. Last year over 100,000 different men were instructed. In a time of war and devastation men seek more than in times of prosperity. The American war is doing more to make men of America think than any one thing that has happened in the last fifty years. Men grow careless in times of peace, but when everything is moving and they are obliged to do their best, they begin to think earnestly to work and plan for the future.

"This was true during and immediately following the civil and the Spanish-American wars. A great number of men went to college and started in new lines of business as a result of resolutions that they made to themselves during their term of enlistment. In times of threatened disaster men will do this. They ought to have done all along as a regular part of their programme. Human nature is apt to be just as lazy as it can afford to be. It takes some event to wake men up so that they get down to work."

Why Men Are More Serious Minded.

"With the large number of men already out of work and many expecting to lose their positions, men are planning for careers that will undoubtedly come. Thousands who have felt secure in their positions are being dropped, and others with nervousness are wondering when their time is coming. They are taking themselves seriously and asking questions of themselves. They do not have to be concerned about going to war unless they have some foreign connections as reservists. The temporary anxiety when the security of their positions or the getting of another position is trivial compared with the horrors and suffering abroad. They are not afraid to go to war, but they are ready to go to the front. It is not 'pull' but 'push' that returns them."

"However, the men of America probably do not have to be reminded that with all their present anxiety they are not daily perishing. They do not have to be concerned about going to war unless they have some foreign connections as reservists. The temporary anxiety when the security of their positions or the getting of another position is trivial compared with the horrors and suffering abroad. They are not afraid to go to war, but they are ready to go to the front. It is not 'pull' but 'push' that returns them."

The Incentives to Study.

"The European war has already brought its stimulus to men of the United States. The first effect has been the stimulation of business. Its next effect will be to open up enlarged opportunities for the American and European trade. There is much discussion about it already. Men are asking questions when the security of their positions or the getting of another position is trivial compared with the horrors and suffering abroad. They are not afraid to go to war, but they are ready to go to the front. It is not 'pull' but 'push' that returns them."

TELLS OF ITALIAN HATRED OF AUSTRIA

Student of Italy's History Says Country May Be Forced Into Conflict.

PUBLIC OPINION THE CAUSE

By ARTHUR BENINGTON, Chevalier of the Crown of Italy and Vice-President of the Dante Alighieri Society.

Italy shall enter the European war if it will be because the people of Italy demand it, not because the King or the Government wants it. No Government in the world is more sensitive to public opinion than that of Italy. Her Parliament is not divided into two great opposing parties, one of which is in power through having a majority, but is made up of many groups, no one of which has a majority. The Cabinet is composed of men selected from several of these groups, which agree to act together for the time being. It is an unstable combination that is upset by the slightest chance. Even the King reigns "by the grace of God and the will of the nation," to quote the words that appear at the head of every royal proclamation or warrant.

It may be said without fear of contradiction that there was not a member of the Italian Cabinet or diplomatic corps who contemplated for an instant the possibility of Italy's joining Germany and Austria in the war.

Two other alliances were considered: Strict neutrality or going to war on the side of England, France and Russia. The temptation to take the latter course was strong. The Ministers knew that a declaration of war against their former allies would be received with the wildest enthusiasm from one end of Italy to the other. By such a war Italy would have realized the long dream of all her people, the final reunion of Italy by the addition of Trieste and the Trentino, which every child is taught in school are Italian provinces wrongfully withheld by Austria, and in which almost all the population is Italian.

But Italy's King and his Ministers know that Italy has more to gain in the long run by keeping out of the war. She is still impoverished by the expense of the war with Turkey and the conquest of Libya, which she met by internal taxation. She is engaged in enormous public works for the development of her manufactures and commerce and education. Her large merchant marine and heavy trade with South America, has an opportunity largely to increase this trade at the expense of Germany. Therefore it was the policy of wisdom to maintain peace, even at the risk of running counter to public opinion.

However, public opinion may yet be too powerful for the Government. The clamor for war does not represent the most enlightened public opinion, but that of the masses. Even the Socialists and Syndicalists (I. W. W.s) are now protesting loudly against neutrality, and they, because of the supposedly uncompromising principles that war had been counted on as a strong prop to the Government's neutral policy.

All of this is due of course to the hatred of Austria that broods deep in the heart of every Italian. How intense this hatred is can be understood only by one who knows the history of Italy for the last thousand years, and realizes that the most of our country's history is the history of Italy.

"During the last year it is estimated that at least forty thousand men have consulted the various educational departments of the Y. M. C. A. in Greater New York and have either been enrolled as students or directed to other institutions. The following figures from the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. in Greater New York:

Brooklyn—	Different	Total
Students	Subjects	Enroll.
Brooklyn—	1,000	1,200
Central District—	200	250
Eastern District—	200	250
Western District—	200	250
New York—	200	250
East Side—	400	500
Harlem—	400	500
Twenty-third Street—	1,500	2,000
Union—	100	150
Washington Heights—	50	100
West Side—	100	150
Y. M. Institute—	100	150
Total—	3,800	4,500

"In the country at large there have been 84,577 different men who studied in Y. M. C. A. classes during the last school year. This educational budget of over $1,000,000, toward which these men paid three-quarters of a million dollars in tuition fees. The value they received from this investment must have reached a much higher figure.

"The influence of war and business depression is already making itself felt in the Y. M. C. A. A larger number of inquiries are coming in than in previous years. Thousands of men out of work seem to be realizing that if they must get money they ought to be a change for the better and are seeking the advice of the educational secretaries as to the line they should follow. Many of these men are beginning to realize that they must get ready for the prosperity that is surely coming.

"The Y. M. C. A. was never more ready to meet men at the point of their most need. It is now preparing to take the care of the great throngs of men who look to it for advice and for help in helping themselves. These men, whether they are being driven by the impulse of adversity or drawn by the ambition to prepare for property, the Y. M. C. A. receives and places under expert leadership and guidance. From their numbers will no doubt come many of the business leaders of the future."

MOUNT PLEASANT ACADEMY.
Mount Pleasant Academy, Ossining, N. Y., opened its one hundred and first academic session at 8:15 o'clock last Thursday evening with an excellent registration. The usual chapel service was conducted by Rev. Charles Frederick Bruehl and the faculty, who welcomed the return of the old boys and gave warm greetings to the new cadets entering the old school for the first time at the beginning of a new century.

Notwithstanding the serious effort of the war on all lines of business, the registration at Mount Pleasant Academy is excellent and Mount Pleasant Hall has a larger entering class than ever before. The first Sunday Bible talk was given by Associate Principal Edward D. Graber. As a clergyman will recognize their regular work except Mr. Alden of the history department, who has leave of absence for post-graduate work at Columbia University.

MONTESSORI SCHOOL.
Mrs. A. Rino Margulies, director of the Montessori Children's House, 532 West 187th street, New York city, returned recently from her annual visit to Rome. After going through many difficulties and hardships due to the war, such as being left without sufficient funds to buy a ticket home, she finally, through the good offices of the United States Government, succeeded in getting passage together with 725 other Americans on an emigrant ship.

Mrs. Margulies reported her Montessori Children's House for September with additional classes for older children. The past year was such a successful one that Mrs. Margulies is more than ever convinced of the importance of Montessori training.

Mrs. Margulies also is taking a limited number of students in training in the Montessori method. The classes open November 1.

Every Italian has drunk in hatred of Austria with his mother's milk. German oppression has formed the basis of the tales he heard in the nursery, of the most thrilling pages of his school text books, of many of the finest novels and plays in his language. Every child has shuddered over the account of the massacre of the people of Milan by Barbarossa in the year 1161. And that, far back as it is, was only the culmination of nearly seven centuries of oppression and invasion by the savage Germanic tribes. It began in 476, when Odoacer swept down from the Danubian wilds and, in the words of John Addington Symonds, "inaugurated that long series of foreign rulers who have successively contributed to the misgovernment of Italy from distant shores of empire."

The Italian's blood boils when he reads of the Peace of Utrecht and the Treaty of Vienna, by which Italy was cut up by strangers and the fragments were distributed as prizes to the victors in those wars; when Italian provinces and cities were gained for and bought and sold by foreign kings, and not a thought as to the desire of the Italian inhabitants, who were never consulted. Four times within the century following 1717 was Italy chopped to pieces, and always her fairest provinces fell to the lot of the Hapsburgs.

It was the Austrians who destroyed the proud Venetian republic that had lived 1,100 years. It was Austrian princes who became the despots of the nominally independent duchies after the fall of Napoleon. It was the Austrian Von Haynau whose atrocities in Lombardy earned him the title "the Hyena of Brescia." It was the Austrian Radetzky under whose rule the women of northern Italy were punished for patriotism with the bastinado and the lash.

This much and more the Italian child learns at school. But an equally terrible story is told him by his father and grandfather, who fought under Carlo Alberto or under Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi to win freedom from Austrian oppression. Every little town has statues of the heroes of 1848, 1859 and 1861. Every effigy of those great leaders of Cavour, La Marmora, Ricasoli, Pepe, Mazzini, Manin and all the other national champions is an eloquent
