CATTLE GERM HUNT BEGUN BY FLEENER

Scientist Now Studying $3,000,000 Prize Herd Infected in Chicago.

ADMITS PROBLEM IS HARD

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, admitted tonight he is facing one of the hardest problems of his life. He is in Chicago to attempt to isolate the germ which causes the hoof and mouth disease in cattle, and then to prepare a serum which will immunize cattle in advance, much as the anticholera serum immunizes humans.

The famous pathologist and bacteriologist and discoverer of the infantile paralysis germ arrived in Chicago at noon, and two hours later he was at work in the stock yards in isolation hospital studying the $3,000,000 prize herd of blooded cattle which became infected while on exhibit at the National Dairy Show.

The hoof and mouth disease germ has so far eluded all efforts to isolate and examine it. Dr. Flexner is enabled to embark on this campaign through an appropriation recently made by the Rockefeller Foundation for the study of cattle disease in the United States.

Infected Herd of Cattle Discovered at Masspeth, L. I.

The most serious case of the foot and mouth disease in the vicinity was one at Masspeth, L. I., four miles from the dairy farm of Frank Goldstein at Woodhaven, L. I., where an infected herd of 283 milk cows was found.

Fifteen persons live in Wecker's farmhouse. All except a little girl have been quarantined and last night a policeman guarded the premises. The little girl has been fumigated and is allowed to run errands for the two families living in the house.

Further examination yesterday at the Woodhaven farm, which is owned by Frank Goldstein, revealed the fact that about 150 of the 283 cows will have to be killed, together with a lot of chickens, cats and the family dog.

CAT VICTIM IS NEAR DEATH; CASE USE AS A WARNING

Dr. Goldwater Says Maudlin Sentiment Will Not Halt Dog Muzzling.

Grace Polhemus, the Brooklyn school-girl who developed hydrophobia a year after having been bitten by a cat, relapsed into a state of coma yesterday afternoon and Dr. Theodore Vosseler, the attending physician, said last night that her death was only a matter of hours.

He hoped, he said, that convulsions would not return at the end. There were several physicians at the Polhemus home, 372 Monroe street, last night.

The Health Department, in a bulletin issued yesterday, pointed to the case of Grace Polhemus in emphasizing the prevalence of rabies and urging a more stringent conformity to the recent dog muzzling ordinance.

TENAFLY, N. J., Nov. 12.—Mrs. Robert Douglas Connors, who was Miss Elizabeth C. Coppell before her recent secret marriage, made a statement today calculated to take some of the romance out of the stories that have been appearing since the news leaked out that she had married her chauffeur.

"My marriage has annoyed my family," she said, "and I wished to keep the matter as quiet as possible, but not because I was ashamed of my choice. I regret exceedingly what my brothers did during my absence in putting special policemen in my home, when I had a special watchman already doing that kind of work."

FIGHTS HIS WIFE WITH BRIDAL "CONFESSION"

Bahrenberg Suit Brings Out Tale of Double Suicide Shunned.

The trial of a suit brought by Mrs. Felice Bahrenberg, known on the stage as Felice Ray, for a separation from Frederick W. Bahrenberg, a wealthy wine importer and former member of Oechs & Co., who asks for the annulment of his marriage to the actress on the ground of deceit, resulted in two surprises yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Blachard.

One sensation was the introduction of a "confession" written by Mrs. Bahrenberg when she and her husband were taking a honeymoon trip to the West Indies in March, 1913, on a Hamburg-American steamer. Both had decided to commit suicide by jumping into the sea after sending to their relatives an explanation of their act.

FINDS EMPLOYERS FAVOR UNITED LABOR

Industrial Relations Commission Will So Report to Congress, Says Member.

FEDERATION NEAR ROW

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—The first intimation of the report to be made to Congress by the United States Commission of Industrial Relations came today when Frank Walsh, a member of the board and ex-Congressman from Kansas, addressed the delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Walsh declared that the laborer is entitled to the whole results of his toil, that modern conditions of employment are unjust and impracticable in their principles.

"Of the 300 great employers of labor our commission interviewed," he said, "only three did not believe in the principle of collective bargaining with their employees, which is the plan of preventing the wealthy from driving a hard bargain with the starving man."

The speaker dwelt on the fact that the investigation had shown how slight a knowledge employers of large groups of men have of the actual living conditions of those they hire, of their aims, their thoughts and their ambitions.

President Gompers prevented what promised to be a serious mixup between the fraternal delegates representing the American Federation of Churches and the Federation of Catholic Societies. The Catholics had severely criticized Socialism despite the heavy percentage of Socialists represented.
