

ETEL'S PLAN TO DASH OUT HELD A BLUFF News of Her Internment Expected After Time Limit Expires.

NO U. S. ESCORT FOR GERMAN SEA RAIDER

WASHINGTON, March 29.—It was authoritatively denied here today that the battleship Alabama now en route to Hampton Roads in view of the imminence of the date when the Prinz Eitel Friedrich must either intern or get out, would escort the German sea raider out of the three mile limit of the territorial waters of the United States.

No Duty to Suffer Here.

As no duty to suffer here on the part of this Government that the British cruisers waiting for her will violate United States neutrality by attacking her within the three mile limit, the United States Government is not under any obligation to furnish an escort for the German vessel. The obligation is upon belligerents to respect neutral territory.

Explorer Chapin Back, After Six Years Spent in Depths of African Jungle, Has Fine Collection for Museum Here.

James Chapin and an African dwarf in a Congo forest. The inset is another picture of Mr. Chapin.

Bronzed by the rays of an African sun, James Chapin, a young explorer of New York and co-leader with Herbert Lang of the American Museum of Natural History Congo Expedition, has just returned from Africa to New York after an adventurous career of six years spent in the depths of the jungle and along the banks of the great Congo River, collecting specimens and gathering valuable data for the museum.

Altogether Mr. Chapin covered over 6,500 miles of territory and secured over 6,000 specimens of rare birds, together with several thousand reptiles, fishes and invertebrates.

The museum's Congo expedition was organized about six years ago in cooperation with the Belgian Government, which contributed $1,300 toward defraying the expenses of the expedition. It was originally planned to continue the work of the expedition for three years, but as the work developed it was extended to six years.

A unique feature of the expedition was the length of time Lang and Chapin remained in the field without succumbing to fever or illness. Most of their traveling was accomplished on foot and no mule rides were taken by Mr. Chapin. They were accompanied by about fifteen native assistants and an army of porters.

"We arrived there on June 22, six years ago, and in 1,200 miles into the Belgian Congo, by steamer. After our arrival at Stanleyville we traversed for twenty-three days through the forest to Three at Cologne Go Straight Up When Roofs Open as Fans.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun. PARIS, March 29.—The intense interest which Paris feels as to the number of Zeppelins there are which will be visible from Cologne is being increased by the fact that a list of the Zeppelin stations in Belgium, where the start for Paris is usually made, there are three sheds at Cologne, two at Berchem, a suburb of Brussels, and one at Brussels itself, making seven in all.

The Cologne sheds are 245 meters long by 45 meters wide. The roof opens as a fan and the dirigibles can rise directly from their sheds without sliding forth into the open as at other stations.

The "L-8" landed violently at Tirmont on March 5 and was destroyed. It was decided to send the framework to Cologne, where it is being used for the enjoyment of the spectators of its breaking up.

SHIP NEWS IN A QUANDARY.

All Bewildered Over Alleged Arrival From French Trenches.

A rough rider from the trenches of northern France, where it is well known, the cavalry prances to and fro defying German shells, egg and otherwise, arrived yesterday by the American liner New York to New York, the captain and the blind fighting for what they were worth. Whether he said it or not matters little, but that is the spirit in which the war is being fought on both sides.

the company. Then the girl went home. Since then David Slade has not seen her, he says.

Mr. Spiegelberg and his wife sat frequently in a restaurant where Miss Tanzer's brother is employed as a musician. In this way the brother has come to know Mr. Spiegelberg by sight.

That evening (Thursday) Mr. Spiegelberg and his wife entered the restaurant and Tanzer went over to his table. He thought his sister was getting herself into a lot of trouble, and he asked Mr. Spiegelberg to tell her what to do.

Spiegelberg refused to call on the girl, but he said if Rae had anything to tell him she could call at his home, 41 Seventh Street, Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The next evening the girl called at the apartment house. She was accompanied by her nephew, a son of the musician, and outlined her story that she was mistaken in her selection of a husband.

Mr. Spiegelberg representing a bond company which was established to furnish the $5,000 bond necessary to furnish the girl from being sent to a jail pending trial.

Last Wednesday, when the first hearing was held, the girl sat in court four hours and a half, most of the time being in the feet of James W. Osborne and his wife. She saw the lawyer on the witness stand, which was not more than fifteen feet from her, and watched him as he testified for more than half an hour.

Not Worried, Says Slade. "She came and told me the story last night and in the civil complaint. I employed a detective to check up the visit to the Kensington Hotel, and he reported that the visit had been made, and that she had reported the detectives made me feel that the girl was telling the truth."

"I never heard of the girl before March 7 and 8 and she was not sent here by any friend of mine.

My conduct has been subject to any investigation and I have authorized the police to give Mr. Marshall a full account of her visits to them, including the statements she made.

David Slade said yesterday that in view of the day's developments the civil suit against Mr. Osborne for breach of promise will probably be dropped from the calendar.

James W. Osborne made one visit to the Federal Building in the afternoon to see how Miss Tanzer's confession of mistaken identity was going on. "Later."

Sought by Three Girls. An intimate story concerning a man who used the name of Oliver Osborne and whose description is in the national file of the missing persons, was disclosed yesterday.

Miss Osborne, 216 East 107th Street, is willing to tell the Federal Bureau of Investigation all she knows of Osborne, who was last seen in the summer of 1914. When Oliver arrived he brought two suitcases, a few days later a trunk came, and then another trunk. Then Oliver began to stop up on clothing and haberdashery. He told some of the following facts of his father's search and raising an Osborne that the other Oliver told the girls he admitted.

Oliver had lived there a few weeks when a girl came to see him. He was out and when he returned he found the girl and called her appeared disturbed. Then another girl, a governess, called to see him. A few days later a third girl came to the hotel for him, but Oliver was successful in missing them all.

The day after he heard of the visit of the third girl he disappeared for parts unknown, said Mrs. Osbourne, who is a party of facewoman, had telephoned

SUBMARINE F-4 FINALLY LOCATED

Admiral Moore Reports She Lies Within a Fixed 50 Yard Radius.

43 TO 60 FATHOMS DEEP

WASHINGTON, March 29.—A cablegram received last night from Rear Admiral Moore at Honolulu indicates that those who have been engaged in the task of locating the submarine F-4, which submerged off the harbor of Honolulu Thursday morning and whose officers and crew are believed to be dead, have finally located the boat.

Rear Admiral Moore's cablegram shows that the F-4 has not been brought to the surface. The dispatch says that after a thorough search those engaged in it are of the opinion that the F-4 is below the waters somewhere within the radius of a fifty yard circle that has been marked out and which is now surrounded by the searching party.

Rear Admiral Moore's message to the Navy Department reads as follows: "We know location, within a radius of fifty yards, depth varying from forty-three to sixty fathoms; Honolulu harbor light bearing 24 degrees true, distance twenty-eight yards.

This cablegram came to the Department last night by an ordinary mail early in the day by Admiral Hill, acting secretary of the Navy, asking for specific information as to the probable location of the submarine.

Rear Admiral Moore's despatch confirms the fears of naval officials as to the character of the bottom where the submarine went down. The article indicates that the F-4 may have been in the opinion of officials here the volcanic character of the bottom and indicates that the F-4 may have been in the opinion of officials here the volcanic character of the bottom.

Naval engineers believe it will be very difficult to raise the submarine. They fear that it is below the depth to which a diver may safely descend.

A court of inquiry will be ordered as a matter of course by the F-4 disaster. There will be nothing done in this direction, however, until the vessel is raised, as it is considered that nothing could be accomplished by an attempt to investigate in advance of the vessel being available for examination.

It has been the custom of the Navy to employ a court of inquiry in cases where the vessel is not all the equipment required for such work, particularly in cases where the vessel is not all the equipment required for such work, particularly in cases where the vessel is not all the equipment required for such work.
