

Johnston Beats Champion Williams; Meets McLoughlin To-day in Final--High Scoring in Women's Golf

WILLIAMS NOT TO RETAIN HIS TENNIS CROWN

Johnston Puts Champion Out of Tournament in Hot Five Set Duel.

COMET BEATS PELL; FINAL CLASH TO-DAY

Two Californians will compete for the national lawn tennis championship in the final round of the thirty-fifth annual tournament this afternoon at the Wood Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, N. Y.

Williams was a 5 to 1 favorite. The crowd was about as representative as a gathering has come together at a sporting event in this country.

Williams was extraordinarily lucky to have prolonged the match for five sets. The coast man led 6-1 in the first set and four times was within a single stroke of taking the set, only to have it pulled out against him finally.

Johnston was superb and his victory was a popular one. He was finally taken down by surprise. The young Californian had come within an ace of both the first and third sets, when he had been down and so when he came within an ace of the final set, the crowd was not sure that he would take the match when it did come his way.

TWO OF TENNIS TRUMPHIRATE NOW OUT; LIKE GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

HAS TASK BEFORE HIM

By J. FARMLY PARET. With the downfall of Champion Williams yesterday in the national tennis tournament at Forest Hills two of the great triumvirate in tennis have followed in the footsteps of Travers, Outmet and Evans in golf last week, and it only remains for McLoughlin to lose today to complete the smile.

One curious result that is rather disappointing for the experts of this season is that the final round of the singles tennis national championship will be played between two Californians this afternoon, and the final of the doubles tomorrow with four Californians on the court.

But of yesterday's play itself it can only be said in fairness that the better man and could not find any real excuse for Williams either. He played well at all times, fully up to his average game, if not better, but he was outwitted and outplayed.

Did Match Please McLoughlin or Not?

It would be interesting to know what were McLoughlin's feelings as he and the other Californians sat in the enclosure watching Johnston beat Williams. The Comet must have been torn by conflicting emotions, for surely he must have wanted to see his fellow native son win, and being human, he must have wanted to get another chance at Williams to-day, to try and even up the Newport score.

had the Westerner won any of the four points in the first and the one he needed in the third set his victory might have been a straight, instead of a five set one. In the pinches Williams was very strong. Facing the loss of the first set by a single error, he hit the ball as fast and accurately as ever and fairly earned the pullout that he got.

Johnston's play was absolutely first class in every department of the game. He is to-day probably the hardest hitting ground stroke player in the country, if not in the world. He has all the ability, speed and accuracy to go with his more speed. His backhand is as safe, though perhaps not quite so brilliant as Larned's, but his service and volleying are distinctly better than those of the old champion.

JOHNSTON MIGHTY MITE

have seen before. On his backhand particularly in the way he dragged across the short crosscourt shot with a twist of the body in place of follow through, he resembled the late R. F. Doherty to a remarkable degree. Johnston, on the other hand, plays in the purely American style, with a higher elbow in all his strokes, and his form was distinctly better than the champion's.

Against McLoughlin in the final today it is difficult to say what he will do. The two met last July in the exposition tournament on asphalt courts in San Francisco, and it took five sets for the Comet to beat his rival. Even at that Johnston led 4-1 in the fifth set only to lose by 6-8.

JUDGE MOORE GOES ON TAKING RIBBONS

Harness Classes Swept by His Horses, but He Is Beaten in Four in Hands.

NEWPORT SHOW CLOSES

NEWPORT, Sept. 6.—Judge William H. Moore of Prides Crossing continued his winning to-day in the last day of the nineteenth annual Newport Horse Show and late in the afternoon, when it came to the championship classes, all with its consequent increase in the keenness of the competition for the thirty-two places in the championship division, lower scores than usual were expected, but a high wind and a course heavy from recent rains upset the calculations.

First honors for the hunters went, as was to be expected, to Glen Riddle Farms of Glen Riddle, Pa. Their Willy King being picked as the champion and their Bloodstone as reserve. In saddle horses first honors went to the New York horse Gossp, owned by John Hartley.

MRS. VANDERBECK LEADS MISS HYDE BY A STROKE

Philadelphia Woman Gains Medal at Onwentsia, With 85—High Wind and Soft Links Send Scores Soaring.

LARK FOREST, Ill., Sept. 6.—Although the field that played in the qualifying round of the women's national golf championship on the links of the Onwentsia Club to-day was the largest that ever has competed for the title in the history of the United States Golf Association, the scores were unusually high.

Miss Stirling played her usual steady game and seemed to have a little more confidence than she had last year at Nassau when she was participating in her first national championship. Miss Hollins and Mrs. Barlow played the kind of golf that has helped them to win so many matches in the past and their high place in the list was in no sense surprising.

Probably the greatest surprise was the coming of Mrs. Stirling, the newly crowned Western champion and who was runner up for the national title a year ago. She was an early starter, getting away shortly after it had stopped raining and before the sun had come out, and 101 was the best she could do.
