

SELECTED "HIGH LIGHTS" ON A VARIETY OF SUBJECTS

TIMELY BOOKS AND INTERESTING

Questions of the Day.

By Felix Adler.

Not a war book, but a work on social ethics, analyzing the causes and effects, both present and future, of the great war on civilization, taking up the question of future international peace and how we can hope to achieve it.

My Year of the Great War (Dodd, Mead).

By Frederick Palmer.

"I mean," says the author, "without purple patches or 'reeking red horrors,' to bring home the folly of war at the same time I present pictures of the struggle that came under my observation, and the thoughts they induced. I hope that every one who wants to see a long peace after this war will want this book."

Heart of Europe (Scribner's).

By Ralph Adams Cram.

This is a timely book in that it describes the beauty, art and architecture of such cities as Louvain, Rheims, Malines, Amiens, Bruges and Belgium, which have fallen victims in the great war. Mr. Cram's sense of the loss or peril of these beautiful things is eloquent, far beyond the mere marshaling of facts and figures. With thirty-two full page illustrations from photographs and photographic frontispiece.

The Reconciliation of Government with Liberty (Scribner's).

By John W. Burgess.

This book traces through the ages the effort to keep the true path between despotism on the one side and anarchy on the other. The complete reconciliation of government with liberty has been perhaps the greatest problem of history and the fact that it has never been satisfactorily solved has undoubtedly had an important bearing on the present European crisis. A thoughtful reading of this book should conduce to a better understanding of the causes of this conflict.

Schools of Tomorrow (Dutton).

By Prof. John Dewey.

A volume which will be illuminating to educators and thinking parents who are dissatisfied with the results of traditional theory, and who are seeking some adaptation to existing social conditions.

The People's Government (Appleton).

By David Jayne Hill.

A handbook on the relationship of the citizen to the State, which will be of special interest to students, librarians, business men, lawyers, teachers and clergymen. The discussion is based on a wide historical knowledge, and is presented with terseness and force.

The Stakes of Diplomacy (Holt).

By Walter Lippmann.

Beginning with the Lusitania crisis, when even a democracy like ours had to leave the affair to one man for settlement, the author attempts to picture the conditions under which diplomacy is carried on, the central problem with which it deals, and the general policy which a peaceful organization of the world requires.

INEZ HAYNES GILLMORE Author of "THE OLLIVANT ORPHANS" (HOLT.)

The Pentecost of Calamity (Macmillan).

By Owen Wister.

The tragedy of Germany, as seen by this author, who states of mind which made it possible for the nation to "spring at the throat of an unexpected, unprepared world"; the tragedy of a country that is possessed of "the marvellous of grandeur complemented by the mania of persecution."

How Diplomats Make War (Huebsch).

By a British statesman.

An expose of European statecraft, planned before the present great war, disclosing workings of British diplomacy in particular. The volume presents facts, analyzes crooked diplomacy, and asks us to have no sympathy for the intolerable system of orthodox statecraft which hoodwinks the people.

The World's Highway (Doran).

By Katharine Anthony.

Instead of striving vainly for the ballot, the women of Germany and Scandinavia, through organization and forceful individuals, have accomplished much of free speech throughout the world, mother protection women's education, women's pay and women's general welfare.

The Nearing Case (Huebsch).

By Lightner Witmer.

Inspired by the recent ousting of Prof. Nearing from the University of Pennsylvania, an act which aroused upholding of free speech throughout the country. This book contains the charges, the evidence, the arguments and many interesting documents, including the letter from Dr. Nearing to Billy Sunday, which led to the trustees' action.

I Accuse! (Doran).

By a German.

"High-ranking German" declares that his fellow countrymen have been deceived into going to war by the military faction of Germany, and in his book he blames his own country for the war.

History and Biography.

Life of Lord Stratford and Mount Royal (Houghton Mifflin).

By Beckles Willson.

An authorized biography of one of the great empire builders of the last century, throwing light on the settlement of northwestern Canada, the fur trade, the Red River uprising, dealings with James J. Hill, the building of the St. Paul and Pacific Railway and later the Canadian Pacific.

Life of Clara Barton (Macmillan).

By Percy Epler.

The first biography to be published of Clara Barton, supplemented with facts drawn from her diaries, correspondence, lectures and addresses, revealing her personality from her school teaching days through the battlefields of the civil war, the Franco-Prussian War, the Spanish-American War (front), to her death in 1911.

Memories of a Publisher (Putnam).

By George Haven Putnam.

The author continues his personal reminiscences from the date reached in his "Memories of My Youth." The book contains also a record of the undertakings of the Putnam publishing house from 1872, the year of the death of its founder.

The Life and Letters of John Hay (Houghton Mifflin).

By William Roscoe Thayer.

The authorized biography of the famous diplomat and man of letters, in two volumes. The first volume deals with his life as private secretary to and chief confidant of Lincoln; the second deals with his diplomatic career, throwing new light on our foreign relations and his famous contemporaries from Lincoln to Roosevelt.

The Story of a Pioneer (Harper).

By Dr. Anna Howard Shaw.

Frontierswoman, school teacher, preacher, lecturer, ordained minister, physician, worker among the poor and president of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association, Dr. Shaw has told her own life history in an astonishingly human document.

In the Footsteps of Napoleon (Macmillan).

By James Morgan.

The results of a five months tour, the author starting at Napoleon's birthplace in Corsica, following his "path" from city to city, from post to post, from success to downfall and death.

By Martin Gorky.

The life story of the eminent Russian author from his earliest recollection to his seventeenth year, when his grandfather kicked him out of his home, to shift for himself. A record of contrasts, beauties and brutalities crowding upon one another, and, incidentally, a revelation of the national character of the Russian people.

Germany in the Nineteenth Century (McBride).

By Heinrich von Treitschke.

The first translation into English of what is considered one of the greatest historical works of the century. It is a monument of narrative and exhaustive research, and should not be confused with his recent truceless pamphlets and utterances.

Henry Codman Potter (Macmillan).

By George H. Hodges.

An official biography of the seventh Bishop of New York. Dr. Potter's career throughout his ministry, especially as pastor of Grace Church and Bishop of New York, and his many public services are dealt with at length.

Philosophy and Poetry.

The Freudian Wish; Its Place in Ethical Theory.

By Edwin B. Holt.

JAS. C. LINCOLN, Author of "A NEW CAPE COD STORY" (APPLETON)

Boon, the Mind of the Race (Doran). By Reginald Bliss. Introduction by H. W. Wells.

A satire on men and policies of today, from Bernard Shaw and the American public, to the works of Henry James and the pessimism of the militarists. Feminism in Germany and Scandinavia (Holt).

By Katharine Anthony. Instead of striving vainly for the ballot, the women of Germany and Scandinavia, through organization and forceful individuals, have accomplished much of free speech throughout the world, mother protection women's education, women's pay and women's general welfare.

A volume confined to those aspects of a uniform edition of the poet, one volume at a time. Introducing the American Spirit (Revel).

By Edward A. Steiner. A series of pilgrimages in search of the real "American spirit." Prof. Steiner analyzes his conception of this "spirit" and how it finds manifestation in aspiration and ideal, and how it is revealed in its attitude to national and international problems.

Acers of Dawn (Harper). By Russell H. Conwell. Embodying the ideas with which Dr. Conwell has inspired and shaped thousands of lives in lecture form. During the past fifty-five years the author has received over $4,000,000 for delivering the lectures and now for the first time the contents are placed in book form.

Nietzsche and the Ideals of Modern Germany (Longmans). By Herbert Leslie Stewart. A series of pilgrimages in search of Nietzsche's work which throw light upon the social policy and ideals of Germany as revealed in the present war.

War Letters From the Living Dead (Kimmerly). By Elsa Barker. Further communications from "X" in the spirit world, portraying the emotions, influences and personalities (human and astral) involved in the present warfare and containing prophetic utterances concerning the termination of the war and the future development of the race.

Vision of War (Macmillan). By Lincoln Colcord. A poem with a twofold theme: war, its characteristics and its effect on civilization; and the need of various reforms in human society. There are descriptions of life in the trenches, the suffering of the wounded, the spiritual growth and a vision of the ultimate unselfish brotherhood of man.

What I Believe and Why (Scribner's). By William Hayes Ward. This book is a frank investigation by Dr. Ward of his own religious convictions—convictions of long life in which the study of science plays an important part. The book is interesting in that it breaks down many of the notions which are coming to be accepted as truths, and shows the unfortunate effect of the knowledge of science on faith and gives the reader a sound basis for a sound belief. Dr. Ward's noble introduction. His accomplishments are widely known.

New World (Revel). By Prof. Hugh Black. A review of the associated world—religious, scientific, social—especially treating the problem of the present day unsettlement and unrest in religious beliefs.

Bronze Poems (Putnam). The poetry of Charlotte, Emily, Anne and Bramwell Bronte, with an introduction by Arthur Christopher Benson. Many poems have been included that have not previously found their way into print.

Collected Poems (Lane). By Rupert Brooke. A glamour greater than poetry's surrounds this young English poet, who gave his life for his country in the Aegean. The sonnets he wrote on the war are among the most beautiful in the contents of the volume.

The Crowd in Peace and War (Longmans). By Sir Martin Conway. An attempt to deal in popular language with the relations of the individual to the crowd and of crowds to one another. The writer discusses broad questions of morality, religion, government, socialism, war and education.

Literature and Art. Art (Small, Maynard). By Auguste Rodin. Written in the form of question and answer, the French sculptor covers practically the whole range of art and analyzes the work of the various masters of painting and sculpture, ancient and modern.

On the Trail of Stevenson (Doubleday, Page). By Clayton Hamilton. Through his childhood and youth in Edinburgh, his vagabond journey in the West of Scotland and on the Continent, through England and France, in the Latin Quarter and Fontainebleau region, in our own country in New York, Rhode Island, the author follows the trail, accompanied by the illustrator, Walter Hale, who pictures many of the half-forgotten places described in the book of H. L. S.

The Barbizon Painters (Stokes). By Arthur Hober. Barbizon, an obscure little hamlet on the border of the Fontainebleau Forest was the home and inspiration of Millet, Rousseau, Diaz, Dupre, Daubigny, Corot, Troyon and Chateaubriand. Meet of the material hitherto presented about this remarkable group of painters has been in monograph form; here they are treated in one volume.

Rose, Apes and Peacocks (Scribner's). By James Huncker. This is a characteristic Huncker book—discussing a number of literary figures such as Joseph Conrad, Dostoevsky, the futurists in art and music and many other subjects which are alive today. This book is unique and as fascinating as Huncker's "New Cosmopolis" of last year.

Viggo Lebrun (Small, Maynard). By W. H. Holt. A biography of Mme. Lebrun, unfolding a panorama of the France of the Revolution, of Napoleon, of the Restoration and of the early days of Austria, Russia and England of the same period, and a study of her development as a painter, including a catalogue of her works.

A Book of Bridges (Lane). By Frank Brangwyn. Paintings and sketches have held an important position in Mr. Brangwyn's art for forty years. In this book are about forty reproductions in color, and in black and white, of his work. Mr. Brangwyn has also made an exhaustive study of bridges in many countries, from every point of view.

Foreign Lands. Paris Reborn (Century). By Herbert Adams Gibbons. Recording in diary form facts and feelings of Paris during the first six months of the fighting. With sixteen full page illustrations by Lester G. Horry, who was getting about with the author all the time these impressions were being received.

The Soul of the War (McBride). By Philip Gibbs. The human and psychological side of the war as seen on the battlefields under heavy shell fire, in bombarded towns, in field hospitals and in the midst of the movements of troops.

IMPORTANT BOOKS OF THE FALL THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF JOHN HAY

This authorized Life of one of the greatest diplomats and men of letters is probably the most important American biography of the decade. Mr. Hay was a copious and picturesque letter-writer, and the wealth of material at Mr. Thayer's command has enabled him to tell the story of his subject's life both as a man of letters and as a statesman with unusual vividness and richness of detail.

By WILLIAM ROSCOE THAYER Author of "The Life and Times of Cavour."

Fully Illustrated, $5.00 net.

The first volume is largely devoted to Hay's life as private secretary and chief confidant of Lincoln, and gives a fresh and remarkably interesting picture of the great President and of the Civil War. The second volume deals principally with Hay's diplomatic career and throws a flood of new light on our foreign relations and on the character and conduct of his famous contemporaries from Lincoln to Roosevelt.
