

In the meantime the country will witness an exhibition of fuming and fulmination on the part of the members of that body over the President's foreign policy.

Bryan at Capital. Something of a stir was raised here today by the arrival in Washington of William J. Bryan, ex-Secretary of State. Mr. Bryan is in entire sympathy with those Democrats who would pass a resolution warning Americans against travel on armed merchantmen in the face of the President's opposition.

Ugly charges made by Administration spokesmen have aroused resentment among Democrats that may be projected into the politics of the future. These are to the effect that there is a powerful element in the Democratic organization in Congress that is bent upon undoing the President whatever the consequences.

Party factionalism is running riot in a way that assures trouble for the President when the time comes to renege on his executive programme. His opponents, picked over his course in insisting upon a vote of confidence on his foreign policy, threaten to make trouble in the Senate.

State Department officials insist that the demonstration in Congress over the President's foreign policy has undoubtedly weakened the President's position in the Senate.

How Wilson Takes It. At the White House today satisfaction was again voiced with the action of the Senate yesterday. Disappointment was expressed that Senator Gore had withdrawn his position at the last moment.

SENATE STILL FIGHTS WILSON ON ARMED SHIPS

Gore May Reintroduce His Resolution, McCumber to Push Another—Lodge Denies British Precedent in Russo-Japanese War.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Senate is again confronted with the issue as to how it shall deal with the resolution warning Americans off armed merchantmen of the belligerents.

The McCumber resolution, which was tabled yesterday, along with the Gore resolution, and which Senator McCumber reintroduced after the vote on the Gore resolution, is lying on the table subject to call.

Senator McCumber is considering whether he should call the resolution up early next week and have it voted on, or whether he should start a debate on the merits of the subject matter, and after the debate has been exhausted move for the disposition of the resolution.

Lodge Brings It Up. The submarine question was before the Senate today for more than an hour. Although the water power bill was the subject of the resolution, it did not prevent debate on the submarine issue.

National Honor Involved. "They never will hold that the national honor is involved in an effort to permit the British to take passage on the belligerent merchantmen," said Mr. Lodge.

Press His Authority. "It was repeated in the Outlook in an article by Prof. Stowell, February 23. The reference division of the library telegraphed Prof. Stowell and asked him what his documentary authority was."

Never Such an Order. "In short, there never was any such order," continued Mr. Lodge. "The Senator from Massachusetts," interrupted Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska, "does not take the position that no country has ever issued such an order."

There could be no danger in following this ancient rule of procedure, for after all, Congress is supreme, and if it believed that any settlement secured by the President is not for the best interest of the country, it has either demands or confederates too much Congress has the power to so declare, and it is its duty so to declare.

Congress is Supreme. Shortcomings of Navy. "Let us look the indictment. 'Our navy has no organization prepared to act on a war footing.' It has no tested war plan. It has no tested mobilization plan."

Anti-preparedness Programme. "Instead of upbuilding the efficiency of the navy his hobby, he has sunk his time and money in a better program of naval officers teaching naval fighters reading, 'rhythm' and 'rhythmetic.'"

How About Obeying Rules? "Does the Senator believe," asked Senator Colt of Rhode Island, "that a neutral nation is obliged to obey the rules of international law which are in force at the outbreak of the war, and that a belligerent is not obligated to obey such rules, but that a belligerent may plead national necessity or changed conditions or some other riding cause at the outbreak of the war, and that it will break out fresh Tuesday?"
