

Climax of Thomas A. Edison's party on his seventy-third birthday. Reviewing the Edison employees' parade at West Orange, N. J. Left to right: Thomas Edison, Jr., Mrs. Charles Edison, Thomas Alva Edison, Mrs. Thomas Alva Edison and Charles Edison. Photo, International.

Unusual camera study of Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, former editor of the Century Magazine, our new Ambassador to Italy. Photo by J. R. Reid.

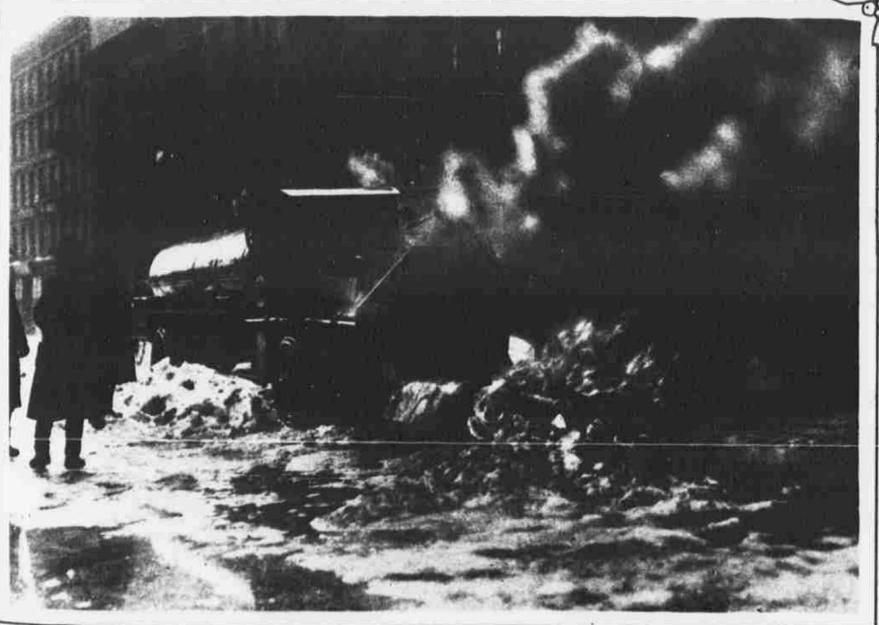

Latest portrait of Queen Marie of Rumania in peasant dress, snapped in an American Red Cross relief station. She has worked unceasingly for years for her people and is one of the few royalties in Europe highly beloved.

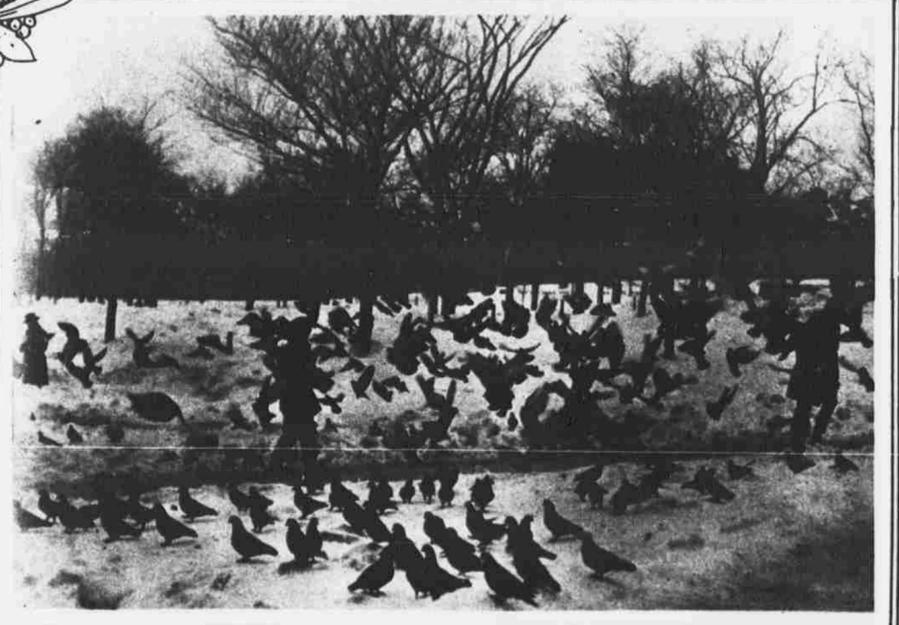

The advance of feminism in France is well portrayed by this picture of Mlle. Helene Landry working as secretary to her father, the French Minister of Marine. Before the war a woman holding such an important public post was unheard of.

The new Duchess of Norfolk, one of England's beauties. She was the daughter of the seventh Earl of Abingdon when she married Bernard Talbot, the new Duke. Copyright, Keystone View.

It is a pity the city didn't have more of these snow melting machines in the recent storm. This one cleared a long block between avenues in seven minutes. Similar ones are used on the Canadian Pacific Railroad and burn crude oil under sixty pounds pressure. Copyright, Keystone View.

Pet pigeons on the Boston Common were amply provided for during the recent heavy snowfall by the city authorities as well as nearby residents. Although tame, they appeared even tamer at feeding time, as this picture shows. Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.