"Seeing Things," by Miss Mayo, Is Sprightly Farce

Play With Frank McIntyre Is Produced by Wagenhals & Kemper.

Frank McIntyre sat down heavily on the living room chair, which promptly proceeded to crack, whereupon the audience at the Playhouse last night broke into laughter. It was the first marked point, but not the only point which the chuckles came forth in "Seeing Things," for the furniture was sturdy, and the play did not have to depend on it for effect. No, it wasn't a bedroom farce, though Miss Margaret Mayo, one of the co-authors, was a pioneer in this variety of dramatic interior decorating. In that respect the piece was distinguished—and welcome.

It was also marked by the circumstance that it brought L. L. Wagenhals and Colin Kemper, the producers, back into the theatrical field, and returned Miss Mayo, who wrote the farce in conjunction with Aubrey Kennedy, back from cheering soldiers about to face the enemy to enlivening the public about to face the summer. Lingerie and bouffants were almost entirely left out of the play, but the audience seemed to catch the flavor of the authors' intention for the raising curtain disclosure that they were not to be disappointed. The play opens with a devoted young man, who is a student at the University of Pennsylvania, who is engaged to be married to a girl who is a student at the University of Pennsylvania. DR. HYSLOP DIES; FAMED PSYCHIST

Was Head of American Research Society, Succeeding Dr. Richard Hodgson.

Dr. James Hervey Hyslop, secretary and director of research of the American Society of Psychical Research, died yesterday of thrombosis in Upper Montclair, N. J., where he had taken a cottage for the summer in the hope of recovering his health.

Dr. Hyslop was born in Xenia, Ohio, August 15, 1854. He was graduated from the University of Wooster in 1877, but during his college course had firmly determined not to enter the ministry, as his parents had hoped. After spending two years as instructor in philosophy at Lake Forest University he went abroad to study at the University of Leipzig, returned to his former post two years later and then occupied a similar position at Smith College.

In 1887 he received the degree of Ph. D. from Johns Hopkins, and spent the next two years at Bucknell University. From Bucknell he went to Columbia as tutor in ethics, philosophy and psychology, and was promoted to professorship to a full professorship in logic and ethics in 1895.

Succeeds Dr. Hodgson. Seven years later his health broke and he was obliged to relinquish his academic work. He went to the Ardennes to fight a severe attack of pulmonary tuberculosis and during convalescence wrote "Problems of Philosophy."

Having regained his health sufficiently to return to New York, he plunged eagerly into psychical research, in which he had for some time been interested. For many years he had been intimately acquainted with Dr. Richard Hodgson, secretary of the American branch of the Society for Psychical Research.

The material has been seen here before, but it bore itself with an optimistic manner for all that, and many of the authors seemed to catch the flavor of the authors' intention for the raising curtain disclosure that they were not to be disappointed.

Upon the death of Dr. Hodgson in 1905, his mantle fell to Dr. Hyslop. The parent psychical organization in England immediately undertook the organization of the branch in this country and in 1907 dissolved it, sanctioning its offspring under the leadership of Dr. Hyslop as the American Society for Psychical Research.

Intimate associates say that, although he was not a man of extensive means, Dr. Hyslop was a man of high character and during the thirteen years that he worked for the society he refused to accept compensation until his last illness.

The spirit communications which Dr. Hyslop had periodically claimed to receive have been given wide publicity. After the death of his wife in 1900 he said he had been "advised" by the spirit of his father not to marry again.

He never claimed the powers of a seer, but his associates say that he had predicted the first subscription to this fund and during the thirteen years that he worked for the society he refused to accept compensation until his last illness.

Dr. Hyslop wrote many books on ethics, logic, political economy, sociology, philosophy and metaphysics. He was the author of the publications of the Society for Psychical Research.

A son and two daughters survive.

G. D. MATTHEWS DIES IN DAUGHTER'S HOME. Was for 50 Years Dry Goods Merchant in Brooklyn.

Gardiner D. Matthews, who was for over fifty years a member of the dry goods house of A. D. Matthews & Sons, Fulton street, Brooklyn, died yesterday at 298 Berkeley place, Brooklyn, the home of his daughter, Mrs. Edwin C. Williams. He was 78 years old. He was stricken by paralysis a week ago.

His father, Axel D. Matthews, established the firm bearing his name in 1837 in Main street, Brooklyn, then the principal business thoroughfare. In 1873 the firm moved to 298 Fulton street, the son, Gardiner, already being active in the firm.

When A. D. Matthews died in 1900 his two sons, Gardiner and James, continued the business. In 1914 the company went out of existence. Gardiner D. Matthews did all the foreign buying for his concern and crossed the ocean forty times, occasionally traveling to the Orient.

DANIEL SKELTON RUNS TO DEATH

Western Union Manager, 59, Overcome by Exertion.

ASBURY PARK, June 17.—Daniel Skelton, who worked his way upward from messenger to general manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, died at his summer home, Ocean Grove, last night. He was in his fifty-ninth year.

Mr. Skelton's residence is at 75 Carnegie avenue, East Orange, but since Memorial Day he had been commuting to Ocean Grove from his Manhattan office. In order to avoid a shower which was breaking as he was within a short distance of the house Mr. Skelton started to run. He was overcome by a heart attack and died within a few minutes.

Mr. Skelton entered the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company in 1896. He served through many minor positions, advancing by grades. In 1902 he was made general manager. He was married to his wife, Mary, a daughter, and three sons.

CHARLES GIBARD M'ANNAN. Charles Gibard M'Annann, who fought during the civil war with the Illinois Cavalry, died Wednesday of old age at his home, 849 Madison avenue, Brooklyn. He was 80 years old and one of the few survivors of the regiment. He was for twenty-five years a clerk in the Commissioner of Records office in Brooklyn. He is survived by his wife, a daughter and four sons.
