Southampton Has Holiday Throng

Every Cottage Is Occupied and There Are Guests in Every One.

SOUTHAMPTON, July 3. SOCIETY at Southampton is enjoying all the delights of a holiday week end and every cottage is open and filled with guests. Mrs. J. Hopkinson Smith and Mrs. Charles Plummer of Washington are the guests of Mrs. George G. De Witt, who gave a delightful luncheon for them on Wednesday. Mrs. Rufus L. Patterson also gave a luncheon for Mrs. De Witt guests.

Newport Assumes Midsummer Pace

Tea Rooms at Country Club Open—Additional Arrivals in Villa Colony.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 3. WITH the arrival of the Independence Day holidays the social activities of this resort are beginning to assume their midsummer pace.

The Southampton Colony Assembled Earlier than at Most of the Other Fashionable Resorts.

Mrs. Clarkson Potter and Mrs. Edmund S. Twining, Jr., are of the large group that gathers each morning on the beach.

Miss Alice Davison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Davison, and Mrs. Seth Low, a recent bride, are pictured on their way to watch the Yale-Harvard races at New London.

Arrivals at Villas.

Among recent arrivals in the villa colony are the Italian Ambassador and Baroness Romano Azevedo.

Parties for Children. Parties for children are in vogue this season, as usual, and one such was given to-day by Mrs. J. Laurens Van Alen at Yachthaven.

New Cliffs Hotel Opens.

The new Cliffs Hotel opened for the season to-day.

Mr. Arthur Curtiss James returned from New York to-day on board his steam yacht the Aloha.

Poland Spring.

Poland Spring, Me., July 3.—The spirit of Maine's centennial year is manifest in the life of Poland Spring and never were the prospects of the season more bright.

GARDEN CITY. GARDEN CITY, L. I., July 3.—With polo players here from all parts of the country and scores of golfers for the holidays who play daily on the Salisbury, Cherry Valley and Garden City links this suburb is the centre of more social life than ever before.

Ocean Grove.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J., July 3.—Ocean Grove's season of concerts was opened to-night.

Switzerland. Mrs. Daniels Home After Attending Council of Women in Switzerland.

Washington Expects That President Will Go Cruising Now That the Conventions Are Over

Reported That the Yacht Mayflower Is Being Made Ready for Trip.

WASHINGTON, July 3. LIKE the rest of the country Washington spent the week with its telescope trained upon San Francisco—interested, of course, but not keenly anxious. For on the whole it has had the feeling that so far as it was concerned things were going fairly well. For to Washington White House personalities are so much more vital than White House politics. And the feeling is reasonably strong that the Harding will occupy the state mansion after next March.

flower theory is in the fact that the Presidential yacht is known to have been completely overhauled and certain arrangements made that seem especially designed to facilitate movement for such an invalid as the President—one who is not able to get around very freely. For one thing, it is said that elevators have been installed—though the chief wonder is that they were not put in long ago, something desirable for a summer resort. But another part of the United States naval establishment, is really assigned for the President's personal use.

Another place where the White House motor might have been observed one day last week was outside of the Corcoran Gallery, where Mr. Wilson and Mrs. Helen spent half an hour or so viewing the little collection of Seymour Stone's portraits, of which I told you a dozen or more that he had painted abroad; several, however, of distinguished Americans who were abroad in their country's service and two or three which had been painted since his return to America in the spring, the two of the Secretary of War and his family and a slender gray cloaked figure of Mrs. Charles S. Patterson, wife of Col. Patterson, and known to literary fame by her maiden name of Jean Rushmore.

Mr. Long is out in Missouri busy with his campaign, and Mrs. Long went out there for a little visit about June, but she returned to Washington a week or two ago, and now she and her little daughter, Miss Christine Long, have gone up to York Harbor, where Mrs. Long has a cottage. With Mrs. Long away Mrs. Long, left to her own devices in the Cay rein to her passion for auctions. They say she fairly haunts the auction rooms, climbing up furniture, poking her nose into pulling out to the light of day things that look as if they might interest her. The fact that she prefers to wait on herself makes her unpopular in these establishments, and they say rather resentfully that "when Mrs. Long buys she gets her money's worth and then some."

Mr. Phillips' mother, Mrs. George Oliver Hale, is probably dying in a Paris hospital. With her family established at the Hague it will be comparatively easy for Mrs. Phillips to rush to her mother's bedside at short notice. It was Mrs. Hale's illness that took her away from Washington about the first of the year, when Mr. Phillips got leave of absence.

war to go home for a couple of months each summer; in fact, the war started France at the time the war started and came hurrying back to their post in that fateful summer of 1914.

Lady Geddes Sails Away. Lady Geddes also apparently came back from her little trip into Canada last week "all set" for her homeward voyage. She sailed Thursday by the Mauretania to be gone until September, when she will return with her family of four stalwart young sons and one lovely little daughter. Meanwhile the British Ambassador and members of the staff will accompany him to the headquarters at Virginia Hot Springs, where they have taken a cottage, which will serve as a place of refuge between other engagements. Sir Auckland is to make a Fourth of July address before the New Jersey chapter of the Order of the Cincinnati—desire of the French Ambassador, and has various other speaking engagements which will keep him moving around the next month or so.

Switzerland. Mrs. Daniels Home After Attending Council of Women in Switzerland. Mrs. Daniels' tall young son. But naturally it is equally her summer home and his sister's; at least, until such time as she marries and brings a bride to it. Of course no one knows just what assignment will be given Gen. Barnett at the end of his sixty days' leave, for he has chosen to remain in the service in which he has been for forty-three years—although as I understand it he could have retired as a Major-General instead of remaining and accepting the lower grade for the next eighteen months, when he is due to retire anyhow. It does seem a pity that his years of devoted service in all parts of the world—his very active service, for instance, in China during the Boxer troubles—should not have earned him the consideration of being left undisturbed as Commandant.
