

John Hines was indicted January 14th, 1890, for shooting at three Bow street officers, who, in consequence of several robberies having been committed near Housh...

The man was convicted. To be sure the officer may have been mistaken; but so peculiar is the expression of each person's countenance; that it may be identified, even though only seen for a moment, and by the flash of a pistol.

And to be sure, I must say there was a very great general resemblance between that gentleman and the prisoner, particularly in the expression of his face. Then there was Capt. Sherman introduced for the same purpose, but he did not resemble him so much as Mr. Marley.

At the Stafford summer session, John Monford was a witness in a case, which I had the honor of prosecuting on the 11th of May, preceding a parcel consisting of a case, which contained several pounds of gunpowder, so packed as to explode by the ignition of a fuse.

At the present time, I am in possession of a paper, in which the case and combustible matter had been enclosed, was found a portion of the Leeds Intelligencer of the 6th of July, 1892, the remaining portion of that journal paper having been found in the prisoner's house.

At the present time, I am in possession of a paper, in which the case and combustible matter had been enclosed, was found a portion of the Leeds Intelligencer of the 6th of July, 1892, the remaining portion of that journal paper having been found in the prisoner's house.

At the present time, I am in possession of a paper, in which the case and combustible matter had been enclosed, was found a portion of the Leeds Intelligencer of the 6th of July, 1892, the remaining portion of that journal paper having been found in the prisoner's house.

At the present time, I am in possession of a paper, in which the case and combustible matter had been enclosed, was found a portion of the Leeds Intelligencer of the 6th of July, 1892, the remaining portion of that journal paper having been found in the prisoner's house.

At the present time, I am in possession of a paper, in which the case and combustible matter had been enclosed, was found a portion of the Leeds Intelligencer of the 6th of July, 1892, the remaining portion of that journal paper having been found in the prisoner's house.

At the present time, I am in possession of a paper, in which the case and combustible matter had been enclosed, was found a portion of the Leeds Intelligencer of the 6th of July, 1892, the remaining portion of that journal paper having been found in the prisoner's house.

registers in this city, in which we find his name in one—the Waverley—it is inserted at the bottom. This is not without precedent—but it is unusual.

The Herald Bulletin of News kept at the north-west corner of Fulton and Nassau streets. On the arrival of the morning mails, at eight o'clock, A. M.—and also of the evening mails, at four o'clock, P. M., the latest intelligence from all parts of the world, may be found on the Herald Bulletin Board, at this corner. Let every wayfarer stop and read. Advertisements of all kinds taken at the office.

The General Printing Office, capable of doing all sorts of printing, such as books, pamphlets, bills, cards of all descriptions, is now open at the Herald Buildings, entrance from Nassau street—Joseph Elliott, Printer.

This extraordinary, and exciting trial has at length been brought to a close. The Court was crowded all day and over a hundred ladies of all ages, and of all styles of beauty were there. Col. Edwards was the most happy looking and unconcerned creature in the whole room.

At four they all returned, when Judge Kent delivered his charge, which occupied one hour and forty-two minutes, and which was dead against the prisoner. The jury then retired a few minutes, apparently disposed to disagree.

At 11 o'clock—the Court kept open till this hour. Judge Kent and the Aldermen went down into the tea-room, and there refreshed themselves for less than an hour. They have just sent the jury to know if they had agreed, or were likely to agree.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

NEW YORK HERALD.

New York, Tuesday, June 14, 1892.

The Herald Bulletin of News kept at the north-west corner of Fulton and Nassau streets. On the arrival of the morning mails, at eight o'clock, A. M.—and also of the evening mails, at four o'clock, P. M., the latest intelligence from all parts of the world, may be found on the Herald Bulletin Board, at this corner.

The General Printing Office, capable of doing all sorts of printing, such as books, pamphlets, bills, cards of all descriptions, is now open at the Herald Buildings, entrance from Nassau street—Joseph Elliott, Printer.

This extraordinary, and exciting trial has at length been brought to a close. The Court was crowded all day and over a hundred ladies of all ages, and of all styles of beauty were there. Col. Edwards was the most happy looking and unconcerned creature in the whole room.

At four they all returned, when Judge Kent delivered his charge, which occupied one hour and forty-two minutes, and which was dead against the prisoner. The jury then retired a few minutes, apparently disposed to disagree.

At 11 o'clock—the Court kept open till this hour. Judge Kent and the Aldermen went down into the tea-room, and there refreshed themselves for less than an hour. They have just sent the jury to know if they had agreed, or were likely to agree.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

At 12 o'clock—the jury are still out. They have not yet agreed. One o'clock—the jury have not yet agreed, and one or two of the fat men getting very sleepy. A good deal of angry discussion going on.

CURIOUS AND IMPORTANT FROM THE MORRONS.

We received very interesting accounts last evening from Nauvoo, the capital of the new Mormon empire.

This singular people are going ahead like steam power, under the Presidency of Joe Smith, who is the Prophet, and of General John C. Bennett, who is the master-spirit of the military and civil organization.

We find the following singular piece of honor conferred on ourself—Honorary Doctor—Ordered by the Chancellor and Regents of the University of the City of New York, that the honorary degree of LL. D., be, and the same hereby is conferred on James Gordon Bennett, Esq., Editor of the New York Herald.

Passed April 22, A. D. 1892. Wm. W. L. REGISTER, Chancellor. Henceforth let every one address us with our appropriate title: LL. D. and no mistake.

The following is a bulletin of the Prophet, relative to the assassination of Gov. Boggs of Missouri: Nauvoo, Ill. May 22, A. D. 1842.

MR. BARTLETT, DEAR SIR,—In your paper (the Quincy Whig) of the 21st inst. you have done me manifest injustice in ascribing to me a prediction of the death of Governor Boggs, Esq., Ex-Governor of Missouri, by violent means. I was a candidate for the State Senate, and I presume, fell by the hand of a political opponent, with his hands and face wet dripping with the blood of my fellow-men.

My hands are clean and my heart pure, from the blood of all men. I am tired of the misrepresentation, calumny and detraction, heaped upon me by wicked men; and desire and claim, only to be vindicated to all men by the constitution and laws of the United States, and Illinois. Will you do me the justice to publish this communication, and oblige

Yours respectfully, JOSEPH SMITH. We advise Joe Smith to be quiet—his enemies and slanderers will make him a better prophet than he could hope to be by any other process.

Opposition was the making of Moses—of Mahomet—of Napoleon—of every great master spirit that has appeared in this dirty world below. With General Bennett (he very properly spells his name with two big T's) as his man-of-war and man of peace, he can get along cleverly, and will establish a mighty empire and a great people. Go ahead Joe.

NEWS FROM TEXAS.—Intelligence from Houston to the 1st inst. has been received. In consequence of the threatening aspect of the affairs between that country and Mexico, President Houston has ordered a special session of Congress.

We take the following items from the papers:—The President has appointed Gen. M. Hunt acting inspector general of the republic, with orders to organize the troops that are to be mustered into service. We understand the President intends to order out a certain portion of the troops of each county of the republic, with the exception of the counties of Bexar, Goliad, San Antonio, San Antonio, and Travis.

By a decree of the Congress of Venezuela, and the ashes of the Liberator, Simon Bolivar, would be taken from Santa Martha to the Capital of New Grenada, and he will there receive, on a small scale, the honors paid to Napoleon in France.

Two hundred emigrants have arrived at Lagaira, from the Canary Islands. Facilities are afforded to these emigrants by the government. The notes of the National Bank at Lagaira are at a tremendous discount.

SIX DAYS LATER FROM BRAZIL.—The "Jornal do Commercio" to the 22d of April is received. No news. FROM CENTRAL AMERICA.—We have received the Balize, Hon. Gazette of the 14th ult.

It appears therein that the claims of Great Britain against the Central American States, has been pressed with some vigor, and the probability is that they will shortly be paid in full.

No decided movement had been made by Morazan. When last heard of he was passing the Port of Realajo, and taking the direction of Consta Rica. He had with him five vessels, one armed with ten guns, and about 800 men, with all his old officers.

They appeared not to want for money, having bought largely from the vessels on the Coast, provisions, guns, arms, and ammunition for cash, and offered money down for a French brig.

END OF THE FLORIDA WAR AT LAST.—We received intelligence yesterday morning of the end of the war in Florida in the shape of five additional murders, near the Ocala. On the 31st ult. a party of red skins, numbering fifty warriors, attacked the house of Mr. Robinson, in Jefferson county, killed his mother and four others, and burnt his place. It is said that a party of U. S. Troops were stationed within ten miles distance.

THE CATEKILL MOUNTAINS.—The most beautiful, pleasant, and sublime place under the blue heavens, is now open, and ready for the reception of visitors. Travellers on their way up the North River, for the Springs or the Falls, will always find it agreeable to stop at Catskill a day or two—particularly when the weather gets warm. West Point, we believe, is abandoned—and it is right; it never has been kept worth a button since Cozzens was there.

General Sessions.

Before his Honor the Recorder, Judges Lynch and Noah, and Alderman Smith. JUNE 13.—William Shaler, Esq., Acting District Attorney.

Confiscating Coin of Brazil.—The case of Paulo J. Figueira, and Fortunato J. Figueira, who were indicted in Nov. 1887, for counterfeiting the current coin of the empire of Brazil, was brought before the Court on motion of F. R. Cutting, Esq., counsel for the defendants. He stated that the case was difficult of obtaining witnesses, it was impossible to bring the cause to trial, and with the consent of Mr. Furroy, counsel for prosecution, a nolle prosequi was entered, and the parties discharged.

Case of Joseph E. West.—On motion of James M. Smith, Jr., Esq., Counsel for Nathaniel H. Fowler, the prosecutor in the case, a nolle prosequi was entered, and the case dismissed. Mr. West objected to this disposition of the case, as he desired to bring the case to trial. We understand that the prosecution will be commenced immediately by Mr. West against Fowler, for perjury, and other charges included in the commencement of the trial against him.

The Grand Jury came into Court during the morning, presented several bills of indictment, and retired to resume their duties. An Assault on a Woman.—Thomas W. Pitman of 108 Essex street, was tried for an alleged assault and battery on a German woman named Magdalene Miller, of No. 5 Franklin street, but the jury decided that he was not guilty of the charge.

Assault on the Battery.—Job Haskell, Esq., candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace, and who, on the 9th of July, two years ago, was assaulted on the Battery by one Jacob, surnamed Somersdyke, who has, and always will make as much noise in the world, at any given time and place, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Granger, who was among the missing at the trial, did with malice intent and aforethought, endeavor to unhorse said Job on the Battery, while he was in the act of rendering due obedience to one Col. Richard M. Child, then Vice-President of the United States, who had arrived in this city on that day. That said Job would have been unhorsed had it not been that he was firmly seated in his saddle, and had presence of mind, as the next man and the next Society, as well as a man named Gr