

JAMES GORDON BROWN, PROPRIETOR AND EDITOR. OFFICE: N. W. CORNER OF FULTON AND NASSAU STS.

THE DAILY HERALD, 2 cents per copy—57 per annum. THE WEEKLY HERALD, 10 cents per copy—$5 per annum.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING. OPERA—CASTLE GARDEN—LA FAVORITA. BOWERY THEATRE, BOWERY—SIX OF MONTEVERDI.

NEW YORK, Tuesday, July 30, 1850. Telegraphic Summary—Very Important from Washington.

Our telegraphic intelligence from Washington is of a very important character. The day was occupied by the Senate in debating Mr. Bradbury's amendment to the Compromise bill, providing for a board of commissioners to settle the boundary line between Texas and New Mexico.

Dem. 12. Whigs. 11. Free soilers. 1. 25 Name not mentioned. 2

Our private correspondent in Washington informs us, by telegraph, that it is expected some members will come to the rescue of the bill-to-day, and that there are hopes of its being successfully carried through.

The House debated at length the California and slavery question, having previously discussed several resolutions, fixing an adjournment at certain periods named by the movers, none of which, however, were passed.

From proceedings that have recently taken place in the Southern States, there is very little doubt but that that section of the Union will be willing to accept the Missouri Compromise line for a settlement, but before a bill based on that line is offered, it might perhaps be well to await the action of the Senate on the bill before that body, which cannot be far off.

THE BLOWING UP OF ST. PETER'S AT ROME.—There is considerable discussion going on about the friends of Mr. Cass, the representative of our government at Rome, and General Avezzano, formerly in the provisional service of the revolutionary government of Rome.

THE ADVERTISEMENTS OF MR. T. B. LAWRENCE.—A correspondent in Virginia uses his ingenious pen to ridicule Mr. T. B. Lawrence's conduct in making a red mountain out of a little simple rump.

THE MUNICIPAL AND STATE DIFFICULTIES OF CALIFORNIA.—One of our intelligent correspondents, in a letter already published, has given us a very curious account of the position of public affairs in California.

THE PRIVATEER GENERAL ARMSTRONG.—A correspondent discovers an incongruity between the statement made by Captain Reid, in his recent letter to this journal, and that embodied in his original protest, dated at the port of Fayal.

THE UNPAID SKILL, FASTER, AND JUDGEMENT.—The departure of the "Atlantic" to Port-au-Prince, and the instructions to Postmaster-General, are the subject of a letter to the editor.

THE LATEST NEWS.—It is currently reported that the late Governor of New York, Mr. Van Buren, is expected to visit the city in the near future.

BY OVERLAND EXPRESS.

At three o'clock this morning, we received news, by express, of the stranding of the packet ship Ticonderoga, of 1,200 tons, from Liverpool, for New York, off Patchogue, twenty miles east of Fire Island Light.

She had also a general cargo of dry goods and iron. Six of the passengers, with the first mate, had with great difficulty landed on the beach, from one of the ship's boats, in accomplishing which the mate was severely injured, having been knocked senseless by a blow on the head from one of the spars of the boat.

Much credit is due to Mr. Oscar Roe, the gentleman who brought the news to this city, for the energy displayed by him. He left the vessel at 4 P. M. yesterday, and, by means of relays of horses, succeeded in reaching the city at half-past 2 this morning, having travelled a distance of sixty miles in the intervening time.

INTELLIGENCE FROM THE MORMON CITY OF THE GREAT SALT LAKE.—We publish, in another column, extracts from some curious documents that have come to hand, showing the position and prospects of the Mormons in Deseret, and their notions on religion and education.

Another outrage committed on an American vessel.—By our correspondence from South America, published in another column, it appears that another outrage has been committed on an American ship, by an armed vessel of Great Britain, which adds one more to the catalogue of high-handed proceedings committed by that power on the flag of this country within a short time.

There is nothing of which the people of the United States are so tenacious, as the sanctity of their flag; and if we know their sentiments, we are satisfied that it will not be insulted with their consent. The right of search, although requested on a variety of specious pretences, has never been conceded, and never, we are sure, will be by the American people.

THE BLOWING UP OF ST. PETER'S AT ROME.—There is considerable discussion going on about the friends of Mr. Cass, the representative of our government at Rome, and General Avezzano, formerly in the provisional service of the revolutionary government of Rome.

THE ADVERTISEMENTS OF MR. T. B. LAWRENCE.—A correspondent in Virginia uses his ingenious pen to ridicule Mr. T. B. Lawrence's conduct in making a red mountain out of a little simple rump.

THE MUNICIPAL AND STATE DIFFICULTIES OF CALIFORNIA.—One of our intelligent correspondents, in a letter already published, has given us a very curious account of the position of public affairs in California.

THE PRIVATEER GENERAL ARMSTRONG.—A correspondent discovers an incongruity between the statement made by Captain Reid, in his recent letter to this journal, and that embodied in his original protest, dated at the port of Fayal.

THE UNPAID SKILL, FASTER, AND JUDGEMENT.—The departure of the "Atlantic" to Port-au-Prince, and the instructions to Postmaster-General, are the subject of a letter to the editor.

THE LATEST NEWS.—It is currently reported that the late Governor of New York, Mr. Van Buren, is expected to visit the city in the near future.

GENERAL PASS.

PREPARATIONS TO ESCORT HIM TO STATER ISLAND. At 9 o'clock yesterday morning, the steambos Tempest started from pier No. 1, East river, with a large concourse of citizens, with the American ensign at her stern, and the flag of Venezuela at her bow.

On her way to Staten Island, she was to receive General Pass, and send him to the island, where he was to be kept under the strictest surveillance. As soon as she reached the pier, the American flag was run up on the shore, and as the General and suite proceeded from the depot to the boat, he was saluted by long and repeated cheering from the crowd assembled on the wharf, which was responded to by those on board the steamer, and as the boat left the shore, long and hearty cheers saluted the old veteran.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

On the arrival of the General at Staten Island, he was met by a large number of citizens, who were accompanied by his son, Mr. Ramon Pass, who had been companion with him in his imprisonment, and a cortege of Venezuelan gentlemen, formerly members of Congress at Venezuela, as also by the friends from New York, who had gone to meet and welcome him on his arrival.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

THE WEAVER'S STORM.—On Sunday night, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.

DEATHS.—On Sunday, July 29, 1850, at 11 o'clock, a thunder-storm commenced, which raged till daylight with terrific grandeur, over this city and Brooklyn. The rain descended in torrents, such heavy falls as seldom occur, yet parched was the earth that it was all soaked up in the morning, and the surface of the ground indicated no more than an ordinary shower.