THE CASE OF HUTCHINGS. THE "LIGHTNING CAL-CULATOR."

There was published in these columns a few days since the remarkable cure of Hutchings, the "lightning calculator," so well known to the public during the many years he exhibited his wonderful arithmetical powers at Barnum's Museum, by the celebrated oculist Paul Auriat, Dr. Von Eisenberg, of this city. Hutchings is represented to have been at the point of death, and but for the timely interference of the doctor, would now be resting in his grave.

This is a remarkable case, and worthy of the attention of persons similarly afflicted.

We think it is but just to Doctor Von Eisenberg to call public attention to this case. There are hundreds in the community suffering from catarh, who, like the "Lightning Calculator," if not actually praying for death, are ready to accept of anything that promises to relieve them from their distresses. To such we would say trifle not with unexperienced men, but consult, without unnecessary delay,

Dr. Von Eisenberg, who, at least, has the honesty to assure his patients whether it is within his power to make them whole or not.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 11, 1864.

THE DEBATE ON THE EXPULSION OF REPRESENTA-TIVE LONG OF OHIO.

All the galleries, and even the lobbies of the House, were densely packed to-day to hear the debate on the expulsion resolution of Speaker Colfax. The outside crowd of reporters gathered to such an extent that their legitimate belonging there could only with the greatest difficulty obtain ingress or egress. The preliminary business was hurried through, and half an hour before the time to which its consideration had been postponed the debate began. It lasted until after five o'clock, when a recess was taken until seven P. M.

A number of speeches were made on the opposition side, Mr. Schenck, of Ohio, and Mr. Stevens, of Pennsylvania, only speaking in favor of it up to the time of the recess. There was considerable bitterness and personal animosity exhibited by Messrs. Schenck and Voorhees.

Mr. Schenck, in his speech, declared that he would open the doors and the galleries, and the speaker, Mr.

Colfax, threatened to have the galleries cleared, there was, however, much less disorder in the gallery than among the members, who, in the excitement of debate, seemed almost ready at times to proceed to personal violence, shaking their fists and gesticulating like lunatics. As the former records of members on both sides were read or recited by the Speaker, a great deal of merriment was excited by the real appearance of some of the members, who were depicted between their actions and recollections of ten or fifteen years ago and those which they now hold. So absorbing was the interest in this debate that the speaker was obliged to adjourn the House, but he was able to obtain a quorum for the transaction of business.

Before the hour for the resumption of the House this evening the people thronged the galleries, the number in attendance not being less than in the afternoon, and the deepest interest was manifested in the proceedings. The members were also generally on hand, but there was less excitement than in the afternoon, but the speaker was more argumentative. Mr. Kernan, of New York, represented the views of the war democracy, and stated the ground upon which they voted against the resolution of expulsion to be that, while they disregarded the sentiments of Messrs. Long and Harris, they held, as representatives, they had the right to advocate any sentiments, however repugnant they might be to the country and the House, and that they were responsible to their constituents alone. Winter

Davis made a most powerful argument against the peace democracy, and his right to proclaim treasonable sentiments upon the floor of the House or elsewhere. There was some slight attempt at applause, and at one time a few lines from the opposition side at a remark about McClellan and Fitz John Porter bringing the rebels to the doors of Washington, but they were quickly suppressed by the speaker. At the conclusion of his address a motion to adjourn was made by Mr. Washburne, of Illinois, but was voted down, the majority being determined to continue the session.

The House finally adjourned at fifteen minutes past eleven, without taking a vote. At half-past ten the crowd begins to disperse, it having become evident that no action would be had.

Mr. Tomont, of Ohio, closed the debate for to-night by remarking and somewhat incoherent speech in favor of the resolution, which caused considerable amusement.

The subject is expected to occupy most of the time tomorrow, when it is probable a vote will
