

others not so wise or well versed in Hebrew theology by and by. We welcome those reforms and the mutual interchange of Jewish pulpits, which was also recommended by the Conference, and we believe that if Christian and Jewish ministers should fraternize in like manner they would be doing good to themselves and their respective congregations.

teachers, for without these an art school is a farce. It ought not to be impossible to find artists with sufficient knowledge and tact to direct the studios of the pupils, and with sufficient love for their art to undertake an unpleasant and thankless task.

Shakespeare, belongs to no nation or people, but to the world. We should like to see a broader platform—a more comprehensive programme. It is not to go forth to the world that in the great city of New York, with its cultured cosmopolitan population, the author of "Waverley" is known and cared for and honored by Scotsmen alone.

The American people, with some reason, pride themselves on the attention paid to the education of the masses. In perhaps no other country is the same generous liberality shown in the cause of primary instruction, and the result is seen in the remarkable average of intelligence found among the population.

Rome, a city which has undergone so many changes in modern as well as in ancient times, affords an opportunity for the study of progress by the students of history. Its fluctuations numerous, changes many, its misfortunes great; at one time the imperial city of the Caesars; again, the seat of learning, the emporium of all that was great in art, science and literature, the resort of men of cultivation and refinement, the cradle almost of a religion which has spread its luminous wings all over the face of the habitable globe.

General Bullock, of Georgia, arrived yesterday at the Fifth Avenue. Ex-Senator Cattell, of New Jersey, is at the Astor House. General N. P. Banks is domiciled at the St. Nicholas.

Germany, France and England have recognized this truth, and special schools have been created for the farmer, the chemist, the art workman and the artist. The centralization of power in the hands of a few men enables these countries to change their educational system with greater rapidity, and with more unity of purpose, than can be done in America.

General William Myers, of Washington, is quartered at the St. James Hotel. Congressman Luke P. Poland, of Vermont, left the Grand Central for Washington yesterday.

In beginning this article we had intended to confine our remarks to the subject of art instruction, in which important branch of education we are especially backward. Only a few days have passed since the halls of the Cooper Union were thrown open, and the public invited by the directors to go and view the progress made by the art pupils of the institute.

It is probable that the barometer will generally fall east of the Mississippi, with increasing and rainy weather northeast. Brisk southerly winds will probably continue on the Gulf coast and Lower Mississippi. A severe storm is threatened in Missouri.

The Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. Milwaukee, June 10, 1871. The annual election of the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company to-day resulted in the reelection of the old officers. The four directors elected for three years are Alexander Mitchell, Russell Sage, S. Chamberlain, Julius Wadsworth.

Now that the Commissioners of Education have taken in hand to reform our public schools they should not alone place them on an equality but take measures to make them superior to any in the world; and no system which neglects to provide art education for the people can be considered satisfactory.

General Sherman arrived here this afternoon from Fort Gibson. The citizens of Ottawa gave him a reception as he passed through. General Sherman responded in a purely agricultural speech, avowing political opinions.
