

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE AND CITY TICKET

Enthusiastically Endorsed. The Democratic State and City Ticket. Enthusiastically Endorsed. THE WIGWAM IN A BLAZE OF LIGHT. The Braves Hold Great Powwow Prior to Brandishing the Tomahawk. The Young Democracy Dance Around the Camp Fires. The Old Times of the Hard-Fisted Revived. SPEECHES, RESOLUTIONS, & C.

The Tammany democracy held their great gratification meeting last night at the wigwam in Fourteenth street. There were the usual preparations to give the occasion something of the old décalé which in its times used to usher in victories of the great democracy. Much was wanting to bring the meeting and its surroundings up to the standard of the past on such occasions. The great desiderata of success—the defeat of the party ago rallied to the Tammany standard the bone and sinew—were facts sufficient to dampen the usual enthusiasm; but, notwithstanding all these, the rally last night may be accepted as a forerunner of a change for the better in the fortunes of Tammany. The wigwam was crowded from the opening of the proceedings to the close. The speakers—though some of the more prominent of the orators of the party were unavoidably absent, were in full force and were equal to the occasion. Outside the building, on either side, platforms were erected bedecked with flags and bunting and festooned with colored lights, from which the crowds in the street were addressed on the political vexed questions of the campaign. Bonfires blazed in the front, while ever and anon processions, preceded and accompanied with variegated lanterns and heralded by bands of music, passed along, eliciting the cheers of all the young raves who sported themselves around the bonfire.

The meeting inside was presided over by the venerable Samuel J. Tilden, who has just returned from taking the medicinal waters of the spas of the Continent, as if he had not been compelled to take water for so many years past here at home. Other signing lights of the old democracy, such as ex-Governor Seymour, Francis Kernan, Nichols, Montgomery Blair and others, were conspicuous from the ratification by their absence, but which they accounted for by letters of excuse. The speeches, such as they were, consisted of the old-time platitudes without the force and vim and inspiring eloquence of the men who a dozen years ago, made the old wigwam ring and sent the untutored home breathing words to do or die for the cause of the democracy. Under all the circumstances the ratification was a success and the Apollo-Republican League will have to put forward a monstrous effort to secure for their ratification such a democratic victory which marked the endorsement of the regular democratic ticket last night.

THE PROCEEDINGS. MR. EDWARD R. MEAD called the meeting to order, and in a few preliminary words proposed that Mr. Samuel J. Tilden preside over the meeting. This was agreed to unanimously. SPEECH OF MR. TILDEN. Mr. Tilden said that he had scarcely set his foot on his native soil since he had returned from his tour of duty in the State of New York. He had not had time to visit his friends and relatives, but he had had time to visit the State of New York. THE KING OF SAXONY.

The King of Saxony. A telegram from Dresden, under date of yesterday, 20th inst., supplies the following report to the HERALD:—"The death of His Majesty King John of Saxony, at the royal chateau at Pillnitz, six miles from this city, is announced this morning."

John Nepomucecne Marie Joseph, King of Saxony, was born on the 12th of December, in the year 1801. He was the youngest son of Duke Maximilian, by his wife Caroline Marie Therese, daughter of Ferdinand, Duke of Parma. He was educated at the school of philosophy and letters. On the 21st of November, 1825, King John espoused the Princess Amelia Augusta of Bavaria, a lady a few weeks older than himself. The festival of the golden wedding was celebrated with great pomp and rejoicing at Dresden last year. It was the King's lot to have a personal share in all the recent calamities of his house. He was born when the Napoleonic sceptre had stretched itself to the confines of the East. The old German Empire had crumbled beneath it, and at Lunéville the last of the Hapsburg Kaisers had signed his death-warrant. In the year 1806 Saxony was enormously enlarged by the incorporation of the Grand Duchy of Warsaw with several slices of Prussian territory. Having been made a fit sovereignty for a King, Frederick Augustus assumed the crown, and, in the year 1810, he was crowned at Pillnitz. He fought side by side with the French in the disastrous campaign of 1813. His kingdom shared in the mutilation inflicted on France by the Treaty of Amiens, and, reduced to its old limits, it passed from the sway of Napoleon to that of the Hapsburgs. During this time the King's duties he combined a steady and public life. In the stagnant period which succeeded the advent of the Holy Alliance there was little to tempt him to a career of letters or of arms. He was content to be a prosaic career; but Prince John had never shown any predilection for soldiering. His youthful tastes and ambitions were in the peaceful and arduous duties he combined a steady and public life. SIR HENRY HOLLAND, BART., M. D. A telegram, dated in London 20th inst., announced, briefly, the occurrence of the death of Sir Henry Holland, M. D., Baronet, the celebrated English physician, an author and well known traveler. Sir Henry was born at Knutsford, Cheshire, on the 27th of October, in the year 1778, and was, consequently, eighty-five years of age when he died. He was a son of the late Peter Holland, Esq. The young man was educated for the medical profession at the University of Edinburgh, where he graduated M. D. in the year 1811. He held a variety of appointments, and was in the year 1810 appointed Physician in Ordinary to the late Prince Albert in the year 1840; Physician in Ordinary to Queen Victoria in the year 1852, and created a baronet in the year 1853. From a private school in his native town, where he learned "as much, perhaps, as such schools generally teach, but this very little," he was placed as a pupil in his eleventh year with Mr. Turner, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. There he remained four years, and it was then, more than seventy years ago, that his love of travel was first excited by crossing the backbone of England over Blackstone Edge, "then a long and hard horse labor above ground, now accomplished by a few minutes of railroad tunnel underneath."
