THE SHAWANUNGA MOUNTAINS.

LACKAWANNA, Pa., May 21, 1875. The spring forest fires which are usually looked upon with a grim indifference by the inhabitants of Luzerne, Wayne, Carbon, Monroe and Pike counties in this State, are this year assuming alarming proportions, and in every township of these counties a great number of mountain young men will be organized to go out and fight the fire, and drink and applaud, and be entertained in the farmers whose homesteads are now in serious peril.

THE DANGER.

THE RESIDENTS OF THE COUNTIES bordering on the Delaware might have learned a good deal of wholesome wisdom within the last three weeks, as well as studied a wholesome lesson from the major spectacle afforded by the great fire in New Jersey, which extended a distance of about twenty-five miles and devastated a hunting region from half a mile to five miles broad.

THE WESTERN RANGE.

OF THE TWO MOUNTAINS spoken of extends from Salem, in Luzerne county, almost to Manchester, Wayne county, and the other from Sugar Loaf Mountain, also in Luzerne county, to Lackawanna, in Pike county, a smaller range of mountains, known as the Shawanunga Mountains, have their origin in New York State, and with few breaks extend to the Delaware.

The schoolhouse and nearly all the residences in the villages of Evergreen, Stoddardsville, and Goldsborough have been wiped out by the fire. Thousands of acres of forests are flaming. The lumber yard of David Dale at Moscow caught fire last night, and upward of 150,000 feet of lumber were destroyed, and it was with great difficulty the saw mill was saved.

THE WOODS ARE NOT BEEN SEEN.

An error in punctuation made my despatch in the New York Herald, yesterday, in regard to Dodge, Neils & Co., on the Moenic Highlands, whereas they are located at Tobyhanna, on the line of the Erie Railroad, and the Western Railroad. Three miles of the Pennsylvania Coal Company's gravity road, on the celebrated Highland range, about twelve miles from Tobyhanna, was completely destroyed by the fire. The loss is estimated at $50,000; fully insured in New York. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion. A large number of men are thrown out of employment by the disaster.

GREAT FIRE IN SOUTH NORWALK.

TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF SIX BUILDINGS IN THE CENTRE OF THE CITY—THE WORK OF INCENDIARIES—LOSS, $150,000. SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., May 21, 1875. The city was visited this morning for the second time within a period of two years by a destructive conflagration, which has wiped out of existence two of its finest buildings. The first indication that a fire had broken out this morning was a terrific explosion in the upper story of the large iron structure of the city, opposite the railroad station, which was occupied by the Fire Insurance Company, Lombard Brothers & Rockwell, boot and shoe manufacturers, and Comstock Brothers, wholesale clothing. The sound from this explosion awoke slumbering citizens to a realization of the danger to which they were suddenly subjected, and was heard for miles away.

THE EPIZOOTIC.

CINCINNATI, May 21, 1875. A special despatch to the Enquirer from St. Louis says an epizootic disease made its appearance there to-day in the Belle Fontaine street car stables, ten horses becoming suddenly affected and four dying in a short time. The disease made its appearance at other points in the city during the day, and at 12 o'clock to-night many more horses in the city were reported sick. The veterinary surgeons consider the disease an influenza affecting the nervous system, something like cerebro-spinal meningitis in human beings. Several prominent medical men have given their opinion to the effect that the disease has been brought on by atmospheric influences and that it will undoubtedly spread.
