

SCHOOLS OPEN WITH 100,000 ABSENTEES

Infantile Paralysis, However, Not Such a Scare to Parents as Expected.

GREAT CARE IS TAKEN

Doctors and Nurses Examine Children—Half Time for Some Pupils.

After a delay of two weeks because of the infantile paralysis epidemic, the public schools of the city opened yesterday.

It was impossible to obtain from any of the school authorities a definite statement of the enrollment and attendance on the first day, as the figures had not yet been turned in at the office of the Board of Education.

In the Bronx, where the part time system will be used, the attendance was high. On the East Side and in the Yorkville district the attendance was on an average 50 per cent.

According to Chief Clerk Pitts, 117 schools were open during the summer without a single case of infantile paralysis developing among the pupils.

Elaborate precautions to prevent the spread of the disease have been taken by the Department of Health.

Children living in houses quarantined in an account of the disease were sent home. They will not be permitted to enter classes until the quarantine is removed.

Other children who have returned to the city within the last two weeks were required to present a health certificate from authorities of the place in which they did not live in a house in which there had been a case of the disease.

Children not having these certificates will not be allowed to enter school until the United States Public Health Service reports an absence of any contagious diseases and addresses at their homes were staying.

Great care has been taken to prevent the communication of the disease in the classrooms, and steps which have been taken with an oil vapor.

The three new schools in the Bronx were to take care of the rapidly increasing school population of that borough.

More than 3,000 children, almost all of them paralytics, registered yesterday at St. Patrick's parochial school, Mott and Prince streets.

DEATH RATE AT LOW EBB

Mortality Last Week Least in Any Week for Five Years.

Despite the infantile paralysis epidemic, fewer persons died last week in New York city than in any other week in nearly five years.

The death rate was only 11.7 per 1,000 of population, as compared with 11.79 in the corresponding week of last year.

The epidemic has driven the death rate for the first thirty-nine weeks of this year up above the figures for the same period last year, however.

Only fourteen new cases and five deaths from poliomyelitis were reported yesterday in New York city.

DR. EMERSON SHEDS LIGHT ON BABY RAID

Health Commissioner Says Anderson Home Was Unsuitable for Quarantine.

ASSERTS TEST WAS MADE

Mother of Child Had Previously Said Expert Only Ticked Its Feet.

Dr. Haven Emerson, Commissioner of Health, said yesterday that the reason why Mrs. Anton Anderson's 19-month-old baby was taken away from her by three Health Department physicians and a dozen policemen who entered her home at 180 New York avenue, Jamaica, was that the premises were not suitable for quarantining the infant.

The baby was undoubtedly suffering from infantile paralysis, Dr. Emerson said, as a lumbar puncture had been made and a quantity of the spinal fluid examined before her removal of the child.

Dr. Emerson added that the child would make "a beautiful recovery" from the disease, without a trace of permanent paralysis.

Mrs. Anderson had previously said the only "test" applied to her child was by a man who described himself as the chief diagnostician of the Health Department.

Woman to Question Dr. Emerson. Mrs. Alfred J. Eno, chairman of the Woman Children's League, who has interested herself in the case, said yesterday that if a lumbar puncture had been made by Board of Health physicians it had been done against the wishes and without the knowledge of Mrs. Anderson.

Dr. Emerson announced yesterday that Dr. Oberwatter had been sent by him on Saturday in an automobile to the home of Mrs. Anderson in order to take her to the Queensborough Hospital so that she might inspect it.

Physician Makes a Denial. Dr. Oberwatter returned on Sunday in the car, but Mrs. Anderson, having been advised by Mrs. Eno not to take the doctor to her home, refused to take him. Dr. Oberwatter had denied that he had asked Mrs. Anderson if she would be "satisfied" if her baby was returned to her.

In commenting on the legal action which may be taken by Mrs. Eno to secure the return of the child to Mrs. Anderson, Dr. Emerson said the courts in Brooklyn had upheld the Department of Health in a habeas corpus proceeding brought by a mother whose child had been taken to a contagious disease hospital.

NOTED CITIZENS PAY TRIBUTE TO MR. LOW Meeting in Memory of the Former Mayor Held in City Hall.

The Board of Estimate and the Board of Aldermen held a joint meeting attended by many prominent citizens in the City Hall yesterday afternoon in memory of the late Seth Low.

The resolutions spoke of Mr. Low's unequalled services to the city and regarded the city's deep sense of bereavement at his loss, concluding:

"Few men have served the city as Mr. Low did; none will be remembered with greater gratitude or affection."

Mayor Mitchell said in part: "Seth Low's life and history are a part of the life and history of New York. As a private citizen Mr. Low never refused his time, his labor or his substance to a movement that meant the betterment of the city.

After Bishop Greer had offered a prayer, Mr. Wickersham told of Mr. Low's great interest in labor problems.

Mr. McHenry and Nicholas Murray Butler delivered eulogies of Mr. Low, and resolutions presented by President Dowling of the Board of Aldermen were adopted.

MOSQUITO FLEET OF BIG VALUE TO N. Y.

Recent Manoeuvres Showed Enemy Fleet Couldn't Surprise This City.

ALL SUBMARINES CAUGHT

Mines Also Discovered in Every Instance—Help of the Aviators.

Recent manœuvres of the "mosquito fleet" of privately owned power boats in New York harbor proved such a success, in the opinion of Navy Department experts, as to demonstrate conclusively that no enemy fleet could approach this city undiscovered, nor could any submarine hope to enter the port.

Both the navy officers who conducted the game and the citizens who took part in it have learned the astonishing powers of small, fast motor boats in spying out an enemy at sea and directing the attack.

The recent manœuvres were from Boston to the Delaware capes on the Atlantic coast. The division about New York was under the direction of Capt. L. A. Kaiser of the battleship New Jersey and Lieut. J. W. Wilcox, while Lt. S. Willard had charge of the hydroplane division.

Enemy Detected Every Time. At Block Island the attacks and counter attacks against the entrances to the Sound and the home fleet of battleships protected by the "mosquito fleet" resulted, the naval officers have reported, in the enemy being spotted and driven back in every case.

Two planes and Paul McCullough, the two young aviators who took part, helped materially by discovering the approach of the enemy fleet some sixty miles out from Gravesend Bay. They did it in a heavy fog and fog, under the most trying conditions.

In every case the flying boats and the patrol fleet discovered dummy mines anchored close down to the power boats, and saw periscopes of dummy submarines trying to enter the harbor.

The aviators, out of gun range above, could signal down to the power boats the exact location of the enemy, where upon the little patrols either sank the submarines or cleared the mine field.

Capt. Kaiser's Recommendation. At the conclusion of the exercises Capt. Kaiser called the manœuvres the beginning of a great national movement. He advocated adoption of the European system of patrolling, whereby the members of the fleet are specially trained in handling the huge nets used to trap submarines, and in dragging for mines.

"The owners and crews should be brought together in one great body," he said, "a club or organization for learning signalling and tactical movements during the winter. Undoubtedly on request the Department would be glad to supply the necessary equipment to meet the civilians in their drill rooms and give lectures and personal instruction."

Something along this line has been done. It was suggested at a meeting in the Atlantic Yacht Club by F. R. Fisher, one of the civilian owners, that one of the lessons learned was that the average boat in the fleet was not properly protected from weather and the sea. Many will have to be reconstructed. The new boats are recommended to have conning towers or at least shields for protection, and many of the boats already built will have these improvements added by their owners.
