

GARRICK REOPENED FOR FRENCH DRAMA

New Comedy, "Le Poilu," Presented at Old Playhouse by Lucien Bonheur.

A ROMANCE OF THE WAR Godmother Falls in Love and Weds Young Soldier She Befriends.

"Le Poilu"—At the Garrick Theatre. Lucien Bonheur, author of "Le Poilu," is a French dramatist.

The little Garrick Theatre, which tried its best with the drama and then nearly lost its license for housing a naughty burlesque before it closed its doors in complete discouragement, is again accessible to the public.

The comedy acted last night was "Le Poilu," which is the term now used in France to describe the active soldier.

There is in this case a danger which the godmothers of this country do not run. She falls in love with her poilu.

There has already been a marriage by proxy when the second act of "Le Poilu" shows an inn as near the front as America.

As a play "Le Poilu" last night was a fine production for France. It was enthusiastically received by a representative French audience.

It is difficult to realize, however, after seeing "Le Poilu" last night that this is the play which the French have made nearly two years, when it has been declared one of the greatest successes.

"Le Poilu" was first produced in December, 1914, at the Theatre Royal, and it ran for a solid year, after which it was transferred to the Bouffe Parisien.
