

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK BACK ON THE BOARDS

Helps "Hitchy-Koo" Do First Metropolitan Tiddling at Cohan & Harris.

"ALL STAR" CAST SHOWN Attraction Designed to Keep New Yorker's Mind Off the Thermometer.

Raymond Hitchcock came out of the slippers last night after a year in the movies and helped "Hitchy-Koo" do its first metropolitan tiddling at the Cohan & Harris Theatre. Though Hitchcock did not presume to be the star of the musical comedy, avoiding the danger of having a fine make-over in changing himself in the advance announcements as nothing more than a leading man, it was understood that he would not refuse any credit for having put the show on in conjunction with E. Ray Goetz.

Having gone to London and competed successfully with Zeppelins for popular attention, having ceased for a time to appear in the woods, Hitchcock returned by joining Mack Bennett's merry cast of playboys and having one might say, seen everything. Hitchcock might well feel that all that remained was to become a producer before rounding out his days in Paris like every good American. So he joined with E. Ray Goetz in taking the cover of the first of the big attractions designed to keep the New Yorker's mind off the thermometer and his collar.

Goetz, perceiving that his partner might be considered to be staggering under a double load, and that he would be expected to show equal versatility, plotted the music and went so far as to do odd jobs on the book and lyrics. However, his fountain pen ran dry after a rather long time, and he was obliged to fill the gaps with a few well chosen words of their own. Julian Mitchell staged the piece, with Leon Errol understudying him.

"All Star Cast." With three such diverse master minds trying to dovetail their ideas into the book it was perhaps only natural that Hitchcock in assuming the part should seem to play a variety as to the vital points in the plot. This, however, only brands it as a bona fide musical comedy. What was clear, at any rate, was that there were to be scenes over twenty-one scenes. The programme last night did not disclose whether credit for any of the jokes besides those connected by the librettists should be given to Hitchcock himself, or to Leon Errol, which Hitchcock is reported to have said will in London just to keep his mind off the war, or to the court almanac published during the reign of Pharaohs.

Though Hitchcock had not been seen on Broadway for some time, with the exception of a little exercise at various benefits, he retained from carrying the whole burden of the acting on his unpadding shoulders. Grace La Rue, William Hook and Frances White, Leon Errol and Irene Bordani, are members of the "all star" cast, were also given a chance to look the spotlight in the eye.

The chorus, moreover, came in for much with costumes as filmy as the plot, but more valuable Hitchcock himself guaranteed them as "hand picked" and certainly Raymond ought to know.

Chorus Up to Expectations. The chorus fully justified Hitchcock's reputation as a connoisseur in these matters. He did the right thing in show. The only thing that ought to keep any one from "Hitchy-Koo" is the draft.

All the principals might well be worth the $1,000 salary which Hitchcock told Florence Ames and Adelaide Winthrop to "run along and get from the treasurer." Hitchcock himself, as the course of the usual first night performance.

SUNDAY HAS HOPES OF SAVING 6,000,000

Evangelist Says City's Fifty "Leaning Posts" Should Lead the Way.

HE DEFINES PATRIOTISM All Should "Kick In" for the Liberty Loan. He Tells Big Audience.

New York's six million swung into an awakened religious life by fifty of the city's "leaning posts" was declared to be well within the limits of reason by Billy Sunday last night.

"Like every city in the world New York has a few leaning posts who can swing public sentiment just about the way they want to," Billy declared. "I can name fifty men right on Manhattan who if they'd boldly and bravely step out for religion, could turn this old town upside down. Why, thousands upon thousands would follow them."

Billy's failure to name the fifty caused no end of speculation among his hearers. At first flush such names as George W. Perkins, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Judge Gary, who are mentioned by Billy in his sermon, flashed to many, but it was instantly recalled that all these men are behind Billy and his campaign, and only "leaning posts" not now interested in religious activities were to be included in Billy's list. In fact, any number of the wealthiest and most prominent men and women in New York have taken an active interest in the campaign and its ramifications. Billy's Thursday morning drawing room meetings are almost a roster of the Blue Book.

WAR NURSE WEDS AVIATOR. Miss Lucy Landon, British nurse in Paris, was married yesterday in Paris to a young aviator, according to a cable despatch received by the bride's brother, Lieut. Harold M. Landon, of the Second Battalion, Fifteenth Regiment, N. Y.

The ceremony was performed at the American Church in the Avenue de l'Alma, and a small reception was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. William F. Grinnell, 14 Rue Picot, Paris. The couple will spend the honeymoon in the south of France.

WILLS AND APPRAISALS. THOMAS E. ROGERS, died December 3, 1916. net estate, $71,005. His sister, Aileen Webber, and his nephew, William D. Landon, each received $1,100, and his father, Benjamin K. Rogers, $2,500. Other relatives got smaller bequests.

JAMES COLGAN, died June 20, 1916. net estate, $71,007. William Hagen, son of James Hagen, died in Paris, and related got $33,642. Small bequests went to other friends and to relatives. Deceased, who was in the produce business in Paris, refers to Hagen and Holden in his will as "my dear friends and associates, who have been as sons to me."

HENRY MARTIN, died November 4, 1916. net estate, $49,582. Two sisters, one living in New York and the other in Ireland, and a brother-in-law, each received $12,395. A nephew and two nieces in Ireland $4,121.

JOHN SILENE, who died on May 13, last, at 156 Hancock street, Brooklyn, left an estate of about $50,000 to the widow, Cecile L. Silene.
